Zaharoff and U. S. Firm In World Arms Trades, Senate's Inquiry Hears

Master Salesman of Europe Dealt With Electric Boat Co.

Navy's Help Asked In South America

American Firm Sought Japanese Business, Witness Says.

By Robert C. Albright.

An amazing record of international intrigue over the machines of war, following the mysterious shadow of Sir Basil Zaharoff through continental Europe, and his correspondence into the most intimate confidences of American munitions makers, was unfolded yesterday by a Senate investigating committee.

Monopolistic bargaining with nations for submarine contracts; splitting of profits betwen Vickers, Ltd., and the Electric Boat Co., an American concern; intervention with Government departments at Washington to promote foreign arms sales, and use of American-owned patents in the same German submarines that dealt death to United States merchantmen during the war, form a part of the story.

Persistently through the committee's record moved the name of Sir Basil, master arms salesman and roving under-cover agent of the world's war wares for nearly half a century. For the Electric Boat Co. he exerted what he modestly called his "little efforts" from 1919 to 1930 for a price. That price was roughly estimated at $766,099, the committee was told.

In the same chamber that echoed a few weeks back to the bitter dissension over Rexford Guy Tugwell's nomination to be Undersecretary of Agriculture, hoarse-voiced, black-mustached Henry R. Carse, president of the Electric Boat Co., and suave, bald-headed L. Y. Spear, its vice president, alternately took exception or voiced assent to testimony offered.

Nye Questions Witnesses.

At the start of the hearing, Senator Gerald P. Nye took over examinaton of witnesses from Chief Investigator Stephen Raushenbush and until late in the day the youthful North Dakota Senator continued a barrage of questions that kept witnesses on the defensive.

When Senator Nye paused for a rest, Bennett Champ Clark, Missouri's large-jowled, big-voiced Senator, one of the organizers of the American Legion and later its National commander, took up his case.

Not until Senator Clark took over cross-examination was the devious trail of Sir Basil abandoned for the moment. The Missourian turned instead to clever bargaining by the Electric Boat Co. for South America's business—carried to the point

Raging Farmer Murders Seven

Five Found, Two Missing; Police Bullet Brings Raider Down.

Fulton, Ill., Sept. 3 (AP).—Five persons were slain today by the shotgun of Fred Blink, 45, Fulton truck operator, before a police bullet brought him down, his gun still smoking, near the Mississippi River bridge. At a hospital in nearby Clinton, Iowa, Blink told authorities he had killed two more victims.

Blink was arrested after he was wounded twice, once when he attempted to turn his shotgun on himself, and then by Frank Kustes, Fulton policeman, who saw Blink's weapon end the life of John Hamilton, Fulton farmer, at the bridge approach.

Kustes captured Blink after an exchange of shots and took him to Clinton, Iowa., hospital, where he was placed under arrest. Another man, unidentified, was seriously wounded at the bridge approach before Blink was seized. Blink did not lose consciousness and told police he had killed seven persons. The known dead besides Hamilton are:

Harry Menje, Fulton.

Mrs. Tom H. Corrick, jr., Des Moines, Iowa.

A Mrs. Walters, of Fulton.

An unidentified man, about 70 years old.

The bodies of four victims were found in the John Hamilton farmhouse a mile north of here. They were the unidentified man, Menje, Mrs. Corrick and Mrs. Walters.

Patrolman Kustes, who had been in Clinton, across the river from here, was returning home when he heard the sound of Blink's automatic shotgun and saw Hamilton fall to the middle of the paving of the bridge approach.

He stopped his car and from behind it opened fire with his pistol. Blink, at the same time, turned the gun on himself, wounding himself in the face.

25% Rent Cut Offered City's Unemployed

Plan for Direct Payments to Landlords to Be Studied by D. C.

A Washington real estate agent yesterday offered to cut rents on low-cost houses 25 per cent to the unemployed, but the District Emergency Relief committee hesitated about investigating the proposal until it is presented formally.

Herbert A. Simon, former vice president of the Washington Housing Corporation, said he has 400 small dwellings under his control which would be suitable for rental by relief tenants.

The owners of these houses, he said, often lose money because of the inability of agents to collect rents regularly. His offer to reduce the rental rates a fourth was predicated on an agreement of the emergency relief committee to guarantee rent payments month by month.

"The suggestion is interesting," said Elwood Street, director of public welfare, "but we have received no such proposal directly. When we do, it will be investigated to determine whether the houses are of the type relief recipients can use."

Acceptance of the proposal, which Simon predicted would lead to similar offers by other realty officers, would necessitate a change in the system of disbursing relief funds.

At present District unemployed persons are given a weekly cash allowance out of which they are expected to pay rent. The District Relief Division makes no payments directly to landlords.

Answering recent charges of the emergency relief committee that rentals paid by some of the relief recipients are excessive, Simon said:

"If the relief committee really wants a reduction in rents, I suggest they ask the owners or agents of the property occupied by the tenant to take a 25 per cent reduction in present rentals if they will guarantee the payment of rents from month to month."

He said that his office would be glad to make such a deal as owners of low-cost housing do not receive three months' rent out of six from relief tenants.

Many of the relief tenants "do not pay any rent" since the relief committee adopted the policy of giving the rent money to the tenants instead of the landlord, Simon said.

The "wishy-washy" policy of the relief committee, he said, has been "unfair to the landlord, unfair to the tenant, and unfair to the taxpayers of Washington."

Greek Consul Cleared Of Assault Charges

Chicago, Sept. 4 (AP).—The Greek consul general here, John D. Dritsas, today was freed of charges of assault preferred by Dr. Elizabeth Judas, who conducts a booth at the Greek pavilion at the World's Fair.

Dr. Judas said she had gone to the consul's office after he questioned the authenticity of beads she had at the pavilion. There, she said, he became enraged, pushed her and scratched her arm.

Mental Specialist Dies.

St. Louis, Sept. 4 (AP).—Dr. Malcolm Andrews Bliss, 71, prominent specialist in mental and nervous diseases, died last night at his home near Manchester, St. Louis County, of a heart attack.

Stains Found On Kent's Car, Court Is Told

Kidnap Case Witnesses Identify Bag, Rings as Mrs. Hastings'.

Fincastle, Va., Sept. 4 (AP).—A filling station proprietor and his Negro attendant testified in the kidnaping trial of Maj. Robert C. Kent, jr., today that "red" stains were found on the cushion and side of the car in which Kent had carried Mrs. Mary J. Hastings on a trip to Washington.

The body of a woman which the Commonwealth says was that of Mrs. Hastings was found near Stroudsburg, Pa., three days after she left with Kent from the Blue Ridge Springs Hotel, which she operated.

When court recessed until morning the prosecution was still far from through. Commonwealth's Attorney Phillip Kohen indicated that the State probably would rest tomorrow afternoon.

Not Identified as Blood.

John Mitchell, the attendant, said he could not identify as blood the stains which his assistants tried to remove with gasoline, water, soap and chemicals. Under cross-examination of the defense attorney, S. L. Price, who asked, "Isn't it true that after you finished the stains looked worse than when you started?" the witness replied, "Yes, sir, I expect that's right."

J. E. Nininger, who operates the filling station, said that while the car was being washed Kent returned several times.

"He seemed to be dissatisfied with the way we were getting along with the stains," Nininger testified.

Says Kent Told of Accident.

Earlier, Sheriff L. T. Mundy, a Commonwealth's witness, testified that when officers went to talk to Kent about Mrs. Hastings' disappearance, Kent readily agreed that the stains were blood but said they were from an accident victim he had carried to Roanoke.

The defense was granted permission to present out of turn George Queedens, a New Market restaurant owner, who testified that Kent and a "large" woman stopped at his place early Monday morning—

2 Hurt as Plane Plunges in Water

Flames Demolish Craft Off Indian Head.

Lieut. Comdr. Alfred M. Pride, of the Naval Air Station, Anacostia, and his mechanic, J. P. Waldrop, were injured yesterday when their plane fell into the channel off the dock at Indian Head, Md.

Commander Pride sustained a fractured leg and jaw and burns. He was taken to the Naval Hospital. Waldrop, who suffered possible fracture of an ankle and several ribs, was placed in the naval dispensary at Indian Head. Pride lives in Alexandria.

The plane was on a test flight from the Anacostia station. It was demolished in flames as it struck the water. Naval officials said they had no report on the cause or circumstances of the accident.

U. S. Guards Votings Lists In Louisiana

Court Restrains Use of Long's State Police During Primary.

New Orleans, Sept. 4 (AP).—The Federal Government today stepped into the Senator Huey P. Long-Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley political battle of troops, police, Legislature and courts for the first time.

United States District Judge Wayne G. Borah issued a restraining order upon the petition of two citizens against the State-appointed registrar of voters, R. J. Gregory, commanding him not to remove the names of any voters from the list to be used in the September 11 Congressional primary.

Judge W. Carruth Jones in East Baton Rouge District Court tonight signed a temporary restraining order to prohibit the use of Long's State police force during the primary election. The order was made returnable for a hearing September 13, two days after the election.

Act's Legality Challenged.

The suit was filed by Mayor Walmsley, Superintendent of Police George Reyer and two other officials of New Orleans. It attacked constitutionality of the act of the recent special session of the Legislature creating the State police force.

The suit warned that unless the courts intervene to prevent the policing of New Orleans by this newly-created State police force there would be a clash of authority which "will seriously endanger the peace, lives and property of the inhabitants" of New Orleans on election day.

The registration office is and has been for more than a month in possession of Senator Long's National Guardsmen, who broke in under cover of darkness to take control amidst a great clatter of arms.

Senator Long was directing the inquiry of his legislative committee into asserted charges of vice and corruption in the city government of Walmsley. The committee and Senator Long were under protection of State soldiers.

"Conspiracy" Charged.

The petition was submitted in Federal Court by two voters, A. Morgan Brian and Ernest P. Miller, who charged that Long, Gov. O. K. Allen, the registrar of voters and Gen. Raymond H. Fleming, head of the National Guard, on the night of July 30, 1934, "entered into a conspiracy, the object of which was to deprive the plaintiffs of the right to vote" in the primary.

The petitioners claimed their only appeal was to the Federal Court since the recent special session of the Legislature, which made Long "dictator" of the State, had passed laws which prevented the State courts from interfering.

Registrar Gregory was directed to appear Friday to show why the restraining order should not be made a temporary injunction.

The registrar said he was keeping a close watch on the voting rolls

St. Louis to Impose General Tax on Sales

St. Louis, Sept. 4 (AP).—A special bipartisan revenue committee of the board of aldermen today agreed on a bill for a general city sales tax, to last for three years, and estimated to yield $24,000,000 in that period. The bill will be introduced next Monday.

The special committee agreed on a rate of 2 per cent for the first year and 1 per cent for the last two years.

Roosevelt Wins Praise Of Sinclair

Cordiality Marks Talk of Nominee With President.

Californian Convinced He Treads Same Path as New Deal.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 4.—For two hours President Roosevelt and Upton Sinclair talked in friendly fashion in the quiet of Hyde Park House late today.

The former Socialist had started East to confer with President Roosevelt immediately after his spectacular victory, in which he won the Democratic nomination for Governor in California last week.

President Roosevelt, apparently, was greatly interested in meeting Sinclair, although he agreed to do so on the stipulation that politics would not be discussed.

Despite scrupulous attention to his promise not to repeat what was said, the Democratic nominee for Governor of California could hardly conceal the cordiality with which the President received him and listened to his ideas on "ending poverty in California."

"I had the most interesting talk I ever had in my life," Mr. Sinclair declared to a hotel room full of newspapermen. "I talked with one of the kindest and most genial and open-minded and lovable men I ever met.

"We talked for two hours and that was his fault, not mine. I did not intend to stay but one hour, but he asked me to stay longer. And he asked me to tell you that."

Railroad Situation Discussed.

Before seeing Mr. Sinclair, the President canvassed the general railroad situation with J. J. Pelley, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford. Mr. Pelley lunched at Hyde Park house, as did A. A. Berle, jr., New York City chamberlain and occasional "brain truster" for the Administration, and Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Stock Exchange Commission, although their missions were separate.

Mr. Pelley ridiculed reports that the Government would take over the railroads. Rumors that a plan had been drafted where it was proposed that the Government would acquire the roads by assuming their underlying indebtedness of some $12,000,000,000 have been current in Washington. The rumored proposal was for compensating bondholders, but the fate of stockholders was left in doubt in the current reports.

Has Not Resigned, He Says.

Pressure for such acquisition is understood to have originated out of the considerable stake the Government has in the railroads by heavy lending through the RFC. Mr. Pelley said the half-billion dollars owed the Government by the railroads was a mere "drop in the bucket" compared with the value of the industry.

"Why should the Government take over the railways?" he asked.

$25,000 in Stolen Bonds Recovered

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Leo Miller, local attorney, announced today that a metal box, containing $25,000 in nonnegotiable securities stolen from a safe in his office last April 30, had been found intact in a field by a farmer near Shippensburg, Pa.

The metal box is believed to have been dropped soon after it was stolen, as it was rusty, apparently from long exposure to the weather.

Otto and Italy's Maria Receive Royal Blessing

ARCHDUKE OTTO.

Viareggio, Italy, Sept. 4 (AP).—Italy's King and Queen met Austria's erstwhile Empress quietly here today, and decided to link the two dynasties in matrimony.

The royal conclave, it was learned, approved the engagement of Archduke Otto, Hapsburg pretender to the Austrian throne, to marry Princess Maria, youngest daughter of King Victor Emanuel and Queen Elena of Italy.

No formal announcement of the oft-rumored engagement was issued, but Prince Felix, Prince Consort of the Grand Duchess of Luxembourg, who is visiting former Empress Zita of Austria here, confirmed the fact that the match had been made.

The official announcement, it was understood, would be delayed pending clarification of Otto's position in reference to the restoration of the monarchy in Austria and Hungary.

NRA to Press Industry Codes To Halt Bolts

Fuel Group's Resignation Accepted; Warns Law Will Be Enforced.

The National Recovery Administration last night accepted the resignation of the Retail Solid Fuel Code Authority in a letter which asserted bluntly that self-government by industry is a privilege under the recovery act "which can be exercised so long as the individuals constituted as agencies for that purpose operate in consonance with the interests of the public."

NRA said the code remains in effect and will be enforced by divisional code authorities and that NRA must continue to supervise operations under the code to provide adequate protection for the public.

It was generally believed that NRA took a strong and decisive stand in this issue to ward off further developments of the same kind in other code authorities.

Price Control Issue.

In submitting their resignations in a body the code authority members declared that NRA, by insisting upon reviewing cost figures at Washington, was attempting to centralize the price control machinery under a Federal bureaucracy. NRA's retort was that it felt this procedure was necessary to protect the public against unduly high prices.

"It is to be hoped that this incident will tend to make clear to the industry and the public the nature of the undertaking involved in the code administration by NRA and code authorities," NRA said in its reply to the code authority letter of resignation.

NRA said the code authority letter was "substantially misleading."

Others May Resign.

Replying to the contention of the code authority that centralization of price work in Washington would cause long delays, NRA said that of 118 divisional price determinations pending before it, 106 were awaiting submission of additional data and 12 had been passed on. Hope that price situations in principal centers would be acted upon by the end of the month was expressed.

There was no such optimism at the headquarters of the code authority. In fact, it is expected by many in the industry that a number of divisional code authorities

Polo, Peru's Chancellor, Dies of Heart Attack

Lima, Peru, Sept. 4 (AP).—Solon Polo, 60, Peruvian chancellor and minister of foreign affairs, died from a heart ailment late today as he was climbing the steps of the colonial palace to enter his office.

Intimately associated with Peruvian foreign affairs for more than 40 years, his sudden and unexpected death shocked the country.

Polo had been associated with the ministry of foreign affairs almost since the days of his youth. He was elevated to the post of chancellor in 1906, which position he had held at intervals since.

Ritchie Sweep In Upper Shore Counties Seen

Governor Conceded Group of 7 in Democratic Primary.

This is the third of a series of articles on the Maryland political situation, preliminary to the primary election September 12, by Mr. Waltman, of The Post's National News Bureau, who is touring that State.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Elkton, Md., Sept. 4.—Unlike his situation on the lower Eastern Shore, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie is expected to make a clean sweep of the counties north of the Choptank River and around to Baltimore on the western shore in his contest with Dr. Charles H. Conley next week.

Although Gov. Ritchie may not carry any of the counties on the lower Eastern Shore, experienced observers can not see how he will lose the convention votes of any one in the group comprising Talbot, Caroline, Kent, Queen Annes, Cecil, Harford and Baltimore counties.

These seven counties have 29 votes in the convention. The lower Eastern Shore counties have 17 votes. It is possible Gov. Ritchie may carry one or two of those counties. This conclusion refers only to the Ritchie-Conley contest and does not reflect Gov. Ritchie's strength in the general election.

Gov. Ritchie appears to be running strong in the upper shore

$250,000 Action Brought Against Radio Star.

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—Counsel for Frances Singer, 26, said tonight a summons has been served on Rudy Vallee in a $250,000 breach of promise action. The girl claims Vallee wooed her while singing over the radio, but the orchestra leader declared he had "never even heard" of her.

"We had it all arranged," said Miss Singer, who asserts she met Vallee while both were playing in a Broklyn theater several months ago. "I knew just which songs he meant for me."

Miss Singer's attorney, David I. Shapiro, said she was a native of Denver, and had lived in Kansas City before coming to New York.

Post Ready to Seek Altitude Mark Today

Chicago, Sept. 4 (AP).—Clearing clouds and promise of sunny weather tomorrow caused Wiley Post to make last-minute preparations for his projected airplane trip into the stratosphere.

The famous round-the-world flier said it might be possible for him to take off tomorrow in the veteran plane, Winnie Mae, in efforts to beat the present airplane altitude record of 47,000 feet.

Fall River Police Use Guns to Free 300 Employers.

300,000 Are Idle, Claim of Gorman

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Orders to shoot to kill stirred the blood of labor's hosts yesterday as the far-flung textile strike plunged many mills into darkness.

The walkout, while not so extensive as predicted by its instigators, appeared to be gaining momentum. Observers agreed the number of participants had soared beyond the 200 000 mark—representing about a third of the industry.

The first shots of the strike were fired by police to liberate 300 employes held prisoners by some 10,000 union sympathizers at the Pepperell Co. plant in Fall River, Mass., the Associated Press reported.

Bullets signaled the arrival of a fleet of police cars. The machines were loaded with the frightened workers and sped away as tear-gas fumes opened a path in the ranks of the pickets. The crowd crushed the windows of several stores but was dispersed.

Sabers rattled in South Carolina as National Guardsmen were mobilized and sporadic disorders flared in Georgia.

Francis J. Gorman, impetuous generalissimo of the union forces, hailed the tie-up as a "great success," likened the manufacturers to "feudal barons" and charged Maine clergymen with "interference."

Despite an Associated Press survey fixing the walkout personnel at 213,365, Gorman contended at least 300,000 craftsmen were idle and pictured the strike as spreading hourly.

"Our estimate of a 50 per cent walkout the first day have been surpassed," he declared. "It will be 85 per cent effective before the end of the week."

Strike Called Failure.

Conversely, George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, and Peter Van Horn, chairman of the Silk Code Authority, envisaged the strike as a failure. They said not more than 100,000 workers quit.

"A great majority of the men and women in the cotton industry," Sloan declared, "are not in sympathy with the strike and desire to remain at their places."

In a Nation-wide radio speech Gorman accused manufacturers of arresting women by wholesale, hiring "scabs" and laying in supplies of machine guns and chemicals to prevent picketing.

"They have failed to meet us with arguments," he said. "Now they meet us with guns.

"But from all over the country the members of the United Textile Workers of America send the word, 'we shall hald the line' and the men and women of the great American Federation of Labor send us their pledges of loyalty to the end.

"This strike will not be broken by poison gas. It will be won by the sheer might of a great cause."

Gorman Reads Telegrams.

Gorman clipped his words ominously as he went on:

"I have a telegram from Cedartown, Ga., which says: 'Strike on as instructed. About 300 workers. Ninety-five per cent out. City and county authorities locking up our women by wholesale.'

"And one from Forest City, N. C., saying: 'Machine guns, armed scabs, poison chemicals prepared at stone cutter mills to prevent picketing.'

Whose Rights Periled? Ickes Queries Hoover

By Raymond Clapper.

An Administration answer to former President Herbert Hoover's attack, "The Challenge of Liberty," shortly will be forthcoming from Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace.

He has written a book entitled "New Frontiers." It is an answer to critics of the New Deal and an exposition of the underlying philosophy of the Administration.

The Hoover and Wallace books are to be offered by the same book club for October and subscribers will be given a choice of taking either one. Meantime, Collier's Weekly will publish in its October 3 issue a portion of the Wallace book under the title, "The Tyranny of Greed," thus meeting in the periodical as well as the book field, the challenge flung by Mr. Hoover.

The former President's barrage against the Administration, published in part in the Saturday Evening Post yesterday, stirred a wide field of speculation as to whether Mr. Hoover nurses thoughts of attempting a return from Elba in 1936, with little except the usual pros and cons offered.

His assertion that the New Deal was a usurpation of liberty brought a quick and characteristic retort from Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, once a Republican, but never one in sympathy with Mr. Hoover's tenets.

"When he speaks of liberty, Secretary Ickes said, "he is talking of the right of property. Does he mean the liberty of a special class to build up fortunes and exploit others less fortunate, or the liberty of the people to have jobs and decent homes in which to live?

"The man who sees special privileges that he and his friends have exercised checked in any way immediately complains of an invasion of liberty.

"He doesn't seem—and those who think with him—to be concerned about liberty for the average man and woman, that they have a fair chance, a decent living, and jobs at fair wages. Who is being deprived

15 Aids Named For Littlepage Housing Drive

Executive Group Meets Thursday to Launch Campaign Here.

Thomas P. Littlepage, chairman of the Washington Better Housing drive, announced yesterday that he had appointed an executive committee of fifteen leading citizens, who will meet Thursday to get the campaign under way.

"It's going to be big," said Littlepage, former president of the recently merged Chamber of Commerce and a man who has led many community efforts in the District. He declared that Washington should be a model to the country for the beauty of its residences, as well as its public buildings, and that the depression had left many homes in a state of disrepair which should be corrected.

The chairman would not attempt to fix a quota, or any definite goal for the campaign to "shoot at," at least until a house-to-house canvass had been made to determine the extent of work which might be done. The drive, he explaind, would make use of every agency of publicity, including newspapers, radio and motion picture, to stimulate among Washingtonians the desire to improve their homes.

Financed by Loans.

The campaign, which is nationally one of the big guns in the New Deal's attempt to chase unemployment from the building and allied industries, is financed by loans, 20 per cent of which is guaranteed by the Government. Washington's effort will have the direct support of officials of the Federal Housing Administration.

Littlepage will confer today with Robert Fleming, president of the Board of Trade, who is a member of the executive committee.

It is expected that at Thursday's meeting there will be submitted names of the chairmen and vice chairmen of the various subcommittees, which include finance, publicity, loans, building industries, general industries, consultation and women's committees. The organization is expected to include about 200 workers, most of them voluntary. Salaries of stenographers and clerks will be paid with money to be raised from local subscriptions. Headquarters of the organization will be in the Board of Trade offices.

Mass Meeting Planned.

As soon as preliminary plans are completed a mass meeting will be held to give the program its first impetus. Those appointed to the executive committee yesterday included:

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, F. P. H. Siddons, president of the District Bankers Association; Francis G. Addison, who will act as liaison officer between the bankers' association and the FHA; James E. Colliflower, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association; James G. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; A. C. Houghton, president of the Real Estate Board; Richard A. Dickson, president of the Central Labor Union; E. J. Murphy, president of the Building Trades Employers Association; E. C. Graham, president of the Hamilton National Bank; Thomas A. Mullett, architect; Charles H. Tompkins, general contractor; Miss Mae Murray, president of the Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs; Mrs. John S. Bennett, president of the Women's City Club, and Mr. Fleming.

Robert J. Cottrell, secretary of the Board of Trade, has been appointed acting secretary until the organization is complete.

New Wage Scale Averts Rail Strike

Mediation Board Settles M. & O. Dispute.

Dr. William Leiserson, chairman of the Railroad Mediation Board, notified President Roosevelt late yesterday that a threatened strike of 3,000 Mobile & Ohio Railroad employes had been averted, the Associated Press reported.

Employers and employes agreed to a new wage scale, providing increases, after mediation by James W. Carmalt, a member of the board created by the last Congress to supplant the old National Mediation Board.

The Mobile & Ohio strike threat was the first major case of the kind the board has faced.

Poison Pie Kills Boy; Father Held

Pittsburgh, Sept. 4 (AP).—A 30-year-old unemployed father was charged with murder late today after police announced he confessed placing poison in an apple pie and feeding it to his three children, causing the death of one.

Eight-year-old Raymond Grabowski is dead and his brother, Stanley, 9, is in a critical condition in a hospital. The third child, Anna Marie, 4, has recovered.

Stanley Grabowski, sr., the father, in his alleged confession to officers, admitted he tried to kill all his children and himself. He had partaken of the pie, too, he said, but was little affected by the poison. Police quoted Grabowski as saying he wished to kill his children and himself because he and Mrs. Grabowski had quarreled.

High Inheritance Tax Urged by Rep. Rankin

Eureka Springs, Ark., Sept. 4 (AP). Representative John L. Rankin, of Mississippi proposed today as "the only remedy" for the depression, the raising of inheritance taxes high enough to break up huge fortunes and to furnish sufficient revenues to pay the cost of government.

Speaking before the convention of the Department of Kansas, American Legion, and affiliated bodies, the chairman of the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs blamed the depression on mismanagement in government.

where the United States Navy was asked to send submarines on a demonstration cruise around the Southern continent. After heated exchanges with witnesses over their part in this, hearings broke off for the day.

Zaharoff Played Lone Hand.

The name of Sir Basil was brought dramatically into the evidence before the hearing was an hour old. From then on, letter after letter from the titled arms salesman was read into the record, disclosing a single-handed role played by Zaharoff in throwing Spanish business to the American concern, and dealings affecting half a dozen nations.

Mr. Sheridan, hotel owner, and reputedly former agent of Sir Basil in this country, was given a model letter by the law firm to be submitted to the commissioner of internal revenue by Sir Basil. The letter read in part:

"The commissions of $1,500,000 referred to by you were not income to me personally, but were payments transmitted through me to the corporation for which I am the agent here in Paris."

Mr. Carse said he had always thought Sir Basil "kept commissions sent him for himself" but the money may have gone to Vickers, Ltd., in which Zaharoff once held a controlling interest. He said he believed some "settlement" was reached with the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Through a series of contracts, the British armament firm of Vickers, Ltd., agreed to give the Electric Boat Co. 50 per cent of profits on their European submarine business, in exchange for patent rights, except where construction was done in Vickers' London yards.

Deal With Vickers Firm.

A division of submarine business between Vickers and Electric Boat Co., under which the British firm agreed not to try to do business in Spain, Japan, France, Italy, Belgium, Holland, Argentina, Norway, Brazil and Peru, except in accordance with agreements worked out with the American company.

An Electric Boat Co. contract with an Austrian firm in Fiume on June 28, 1913, just before the World War, under which a concern now defunct was given the right to use the American company's patents in building submarines for Austria-Hungary and Balkan countries.

Disclosure that Germany got hold of these patents and used the basic principle involved in vital submarine parts in building 441 underwater boats to be used against the allies in the war. Electric Boat Co. sued Germany through the Mixed Claims Commission for $17,000,000, but received in royalties only $125,000.

Sir Basil Zaharoff, connected with Spain's ruling family through marriage with King Alfonso's cousin, received 5 per cent from the Electric Boat Co. on large Spanish submarine orders. The American firm itself received only 3½ per cent on the gross business, splitting with Vickers, which received 3½ per cent also.

Charles W. Craven, official of Vickers, in a letter to the Electric Boat Co., poked fun at disarmament proposals, referring to possible action "at Geneva or some other trenchant convention." In another letter he alluded to possibility of "Geneva or any other troublesome organization" upsetting some of Great Britain's submarine plans.

Clemenceau's Son Involved.

Michel Clemenceau, son of the late "Tiger" premier of France, was proposed by Zaharoff as a possible continental connection for the Electric Boat Co., to work under Zaharoff's supervision. Clemenceau the younger was not retained, but testimony disclosed him an agent of Vickers, and keeping an eye on South American business.

Sir Basil advised Vice President Spear in one of his letters to call at the State Department and arrange to have instructions sent America's Spanish Ambassador "for him to tell the Spaniards that the United States Government works very harmoniously with the Electric Boat Co., with whom they exchange ideas, and that the United States hope that the Spanish government is satisfied with the guarantee of the Electric Boat Co., combined with that of Vickers, and will not see any necessity for any other guarantee."

Evidence was presented that Electric Boat Co. actively sought Japanese business in recent years and possessed "confidential" information that was passed on neither to the United States nor to the British government, although efforts were made by both nations to get it. Sterling J. Joyner, the company's former agent in Japan, but now a vice president, failed to appear yesterday on account of illness.

Efforts by the Electric Boat Co. to sell submarines to Peru while that country's relations with Cuba were strained was charged by the committee. Negotiations with President Leguia both before and after his ouster, and a connection with a Col. Louis Aubry between periods when he was employed by the Peruvian government, were disclosed.

Testimony revealed that F. E. Chapin, a Washington representative of the Electric Boat Co., proposed to the United States Navy Intelligence chief in June, 1920, that the Navy send "a fleet of submarines to South America to visit Rio de Janeiro, the Argentine, go through the Straits and up the West Coast."

"He believed in it," Chapin wrote Spear. "I brought up the subject by asking if the department had under consideration the sending of a fleet; if it did, why it could not send submarines?"

Similar backstage relations with governments figured in much of yesterday's testimony, particularly in that chapter drawn from the now famous "Zaharoff file."

Throughout, Mr. Carse warmly defended the native of Greece who became a British nobleman and Duke of Spain in the course of his rovings in the interest of arms.

"He is a very able man, a really brilliant man," said the Electric Boat Co executive. "I have heard slurs cast on him recently, but I know him. I met him in 1924 in Europe. I felt at the time I was meeting a great man."

Running through Zaharoff's letters to the American concern are such paragraphs as the following:

"I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter dated 3rd inst., bringing me checque for—Pestetas 391,497.68 on Madrid, with which I am doing the needful."

"I quite agree with you that the era of submarine business is now opening all over the world, and I trust it will bring much business to your company, and you may count upon my little efforts always working in your direction."

"He is a modest man," said Mr. Carse.

Advice From Sir Basil.

"It was not my business," said Carse. "I don't know anything about it. I don't know what he means or what he did with it. But from what I know of Sir Basil, I believe he kept it for himself."

In some of the letters Sir Basil undertook to advise officials of the company on how to proceed in dealings with governmental authorities.

Once he wrote President Carse a resentful letter, criticizing efforts of a Capt. Koster, Paris agent of the Electric Boat Co., for approaching Spanish officials. In so many words, Sir Basil asked for the speedy removal of Capt. Koster.

As a result, Mr. Carse told the committee, Capt. Koster was advised to "mind his own business, or his services would be terminated."

Evidence of keen competition for the submarine business was apparent throughout the letters.

"I quite agree with you that everything should be done to keep out the Germans, French and Italians," Zaharoff wrote in one letter.

In another he wrote:

"The Germans are moving terribly in Spain, and unless we all combine against them we may find them installed there one day, and action is necessary."

One letter to Electric Boat Co., from Craven, of Vickers, proposed a "freezing out of war-time bidders" to improve the submarine trade of both the English and American firms.

Indications that relations were not always the smoothest between the United States Navy Department and the Electric Boat Co. was given in another of Zaharoff's letters.

"Many thanks for your chatty letter of the 27th ultimo, which I have read with much interest, and regret that there has not been harmony between your Navy Department and your good selves," it read, after which Sir Basil undertook to give a little advice on diplomatic tact.

The advice may have been useful, for Mr. Spear later disclosed the Electric Boat Co. had been "promised" two submarine contract awards by the Navy, after years of rough sledding. He did not say who made the "promise."

Later President Carse wrote Sir Basil that Admiral Andrew T. Long, "one of our good friends in the Navy Department," had been nominated by President Hoover to be chief of the International Hydrographic Bureau in Monaco.

For the most part, yesterday's hearings moved along without friction. There was tension toward the close of the day, however, when Senator Clark charged the Electric Boat Co. with seeking to send Naval submarine forces on a "sales tour" of South America.

"It's not 'chit chat' to me," Clark shot back. Almost immediately the hearings were recessed.

Insanity Plea Made In Coast Murder Case

Woodland, Calif., Sept. 4 (AP). Judson C. Doke pleaded not guilty and not guilty by reason of insanity at his arraignment today on a charge of first-degree murder in connection with the death of Lamar Hollingshead, young California poet.

The trial of the 44-year-old former Woodland City inspector was set for October 30. Doke was quoted by officers as saying he shot Hollingshead during an argument involving Doke's young wife.

New Yorker Indicted On Fox Kidnap Charge

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 4 (AP).—Maurice Monnier, 35, Hewlett, Long Island, was indicted by the Federal grand jury today on a charge that he attempted to obtain $50,000 on a threat to kidnap a member of the family of William Fox, film magnate.

He was arrested August 23 after he had completed a sentence in the Nassau County Jail for an assault upon the gatekeeper of the Fox estate. An alleged extortion letter was mailed to Mrs. Fox last March.

Speedy Choice Of Counsel Aid Expected Here

Commissioners to Meet With Farley Before Making Decision.

Appointment of one or more assistants to the Corporation Counsel of the District is expected to be made by the District Commissioners in the next few days after they confer with Postmaster General James A. Farley, Administration patronage dispenser.

A proposal to name William A. Roberts, people's counsel, as general counsel of the Public Utilities Commission has been abandoned. This plan called for the appointment of three or four assistants, two of whom would be assigned as Mr. Roberts' aids.

Both the District and utilities commissioners have said that a special counsel should be named general counsel. This decision leaves Mr. Roberts free to chart his own course as people's counsel in future legal battles, regardless of policies determined by the commission.

The question now to be determined is whether there shall be one man appointed at a large salary or three or four at lower salaries. The appointment of Mr. Roberts as people's counsel left a $7,000 vacancy in the corporation counsel staff. Mr. Roberts formerly was special assistant, serving as general counsel of the Utilities Commission.

Although District officials speak softly because they do not want to stir the ire of Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, it has been indicated they do not intend to name another of the Texan's constituents as assistant corporation counsel.

Andrew M. Howsley, of Texas, was appointed and assigned as counsel for the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. He resigned several weeks ago to practice law and enter politics in Texas. Mr. Blanton immediately notified District officials he wanted another Texan given the job. He nominated Maurice V. Books, of Abilene, Mr. Blanton's home town, for the post.

Steel Industry Warns of Court Test for NRA

Firms Declare Roosevelt Exceeded Powers in Act's Set-up.

(Associated Press.)

Further indications that the steel industry would challenge the constitutionality of the Recovery Act in court appeared yesterday at a steel labor relations board hearing.

Counsel for the Worth Steel Co., of Claymont, Del., told the board in a brief that both the act's labor clauses (Section 7-A) and the resolution under which the President set up the board were unconstitutional.

Moreover, the company contended, President Roosevelt exceeded the power given him by the resolution, if constitutional, in setting up the board as he did.

Even if the Recovery Act and the resolution were constitutional, the company further maintained, they did not apply to the Worth concern, nor did the board have any jurisdiction to handle the complaints brought against it by the Fidelity Lodge of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of North America.

The complaints charged the company with discharging an employe for union activity.

The Worth Co.'s challenge was the second of the same type the board has faced. The first was made by the Wheeling Steel Corporation at a hearing in Portsmouth, Ohio, August 20. The Wheeling corporation was represented by Earl Reed, counsel for the Weirton Steel Co., which last fall refused the old National Labor Board permission to conduct an election at its plant in Weirton, W. Va.

Despite its contention that the steel board lacked jurisdiction, the company presented witnesses yesterday who testified the discharged employe was let out for inefficiency rather than for union activity.

4 Women Sue To Cancel Sale

Tell Court They Were Promised Quick Profits on Lots.

Alleging they were promised "quick profits," four women yesterday filed suits in the District Supreme Court for return of money they invested in lots at North Beach, Md., for which they paid $1,988 and gave promissory notes for the remainder.

Grace Naomi Tucker, 1923 Rhode Island avenue northeast; Margaret L. Downey, 1379 North Carolina avenue northeast; Fannie Meeks, 1232 Potomac avenue southeast, and Helen Dingess, Takoma Park, Md., said they would have to ask public charity unless their savings were returned.

Through Attorney Carl A. Marshall, the four complained they were induced to purchase the lots because of representations the land would be resold with a profit of $60 on some of the lots.

Gibbs L. Baker was named owner of the land in the discussion before the sales. Now, the complainants say, he disclaims ownership and named Caroline P. Baker as the equitable owner. The Bakers and John W. Hayes and L. Karlton Mesteller were named defendants.

The suits seek to recoup the cash payments given on 16 lots, asks that the notes given for deferred payments be canceled and requests that a receiver be appointed to take over the assets of the defendants pending a solution of the case.

Pipe Line Official Is Held in Assault

Beat U. S. Witnesses, Says New York Warrant.

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—Frank P. Parish, 38, former president of the Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line Co., was arraigned before a United States commissioner today on a removal warrant charging him with assaulting two Government witnesses.

The complaint alleged that Parish and an unidentified man "threatened, intimidated and beat" W. G. McGuire and Philip P. Preston at the Palmer House in Chicago on August 14.

Commissioner Garrett Cotter set bail at $3,000 and released the public utilities executive on his promise to appear in Illinois when wanted. Parish is scheduled to be tried in Chicago October 1 on a charge of fraudulent use of the mails in financing the $35,000,000 pipe line company.

$32,255 Low Bid For Erosion Work

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 4 (Spl.). George T. Johnson & Sons, of Cambridge, Md., submitted the lowest bid in a field of six competitors for the contract for erosion protection to the causeway at Gibson Island, it was revealed today by the Anne Arundel County Commissioners. The bid was $32,255.

The other bids ranged as high as $39,909. All bids were submitted to a committe for final tabulation and recommendation. The contract calls for about 2,300 feet of timber bulkheading, raising the causeway about 2 feet, and building an asphalt roadway.

Gibson Island is at the mouth of Magothy River, Third District. The commissioners now are considering requests for similar work from taxpayers of North Beach, Fair Haven, Mason Beach and other settlements in the southern section, where many Washingtonians have summer cottages.

Arthur Jordan Rites Friday

Fuperal services will be held in Indianapolis Friday for Arthur Jordan, who for 25 years directed the operations of the Jordan Piano Co., of Washington. Mr. Jordan died Monday night in his home at 10 Park avenue, New York. He was president of the piano company.

Better known in New York and Indianapolis, where he spent most of his life and from where he directed his piano business here, Mr. Jordan kas born in Madison, Ind. He celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday anniversary Saturday.

He was educated in the public schools of Indianapolis, where he moved with his family, and at 18 directed a book agency. He left this business to go into the produce trade, and a few years later became the first produce merchant to ship to New York in refrigerator cars.

He later became president of the Meridian Life Insurance Co., of Indianapolis. Most of his later years were devoted to this business, and at his death he was president of both the Postal and National Postal Life Insurance Cos., and chairman of the board of the Arthur Jordan Foundation.

Mr. Jordan visited the Capital frequently to supervise his business here, but never maintained a permanent Washington residence.

Two years ago he married. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alice Jordan; a sister, Mrs. Wallace Sherwood, of Washington, and a niece, Miss Winifred Sherwood, also of Washington.

Whenever you hear anyone mention the "Result Number," he is talking about Post Classified Ads—National 4200.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

With the Federal Government presenting its case before the District of Columbia-Virginia Boundary Commission at the hearing which opens at 10 a. m. today in the office of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, Arlington County will find itself without representation.

Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas in presenting his reasons for not appearing in behalf of the county, said that while he had done and would continue to do everything within his power to protect the county's interest in the controversy, his time was fully occupied with other county matters of a local nature, so that he could not undertake to represent the county.

The area in dispute in Arlington County is said to consist of property lying east of the Washington-Richmond Highway, two-thirds of the Washington Airport property and parts of the South Washington industrial area. The United States in three decisions has decreed that the boundary is the highwater mark of 1791 on the Virginia shore. Since that time the Virginia shore has changed considerably. The Federal Government is represented by Judge G. A. Iverson and Henry H. Glassie. Members of the commission are Charles H. Brough, chairman; Malcolm S. McConihe and William C. Gloth.

Road Contract Awarded.

The county board in special session yesterday morning awarded contract for surfacing of 8½ miles of roads and streets to Corson & Gruman of Washington. The accepted bid was approximately $10 000. Work will start immediately, giving employment to local men.

Streets and roads to be given their original surface treatment include Wilson boulevard approach to the Arlington Memorial Bridge, Washington avenue bridge approach, Harlow avenue extended in Rosslyn and Washington avenue from Clarendon to Hatfield.

Streets to be surface-treated after having been scarified: Court House road from Wilson boulevard to Rucker avenue; Pine street from Pershing drive to Moore avenue; Holly street from Wilson boulevard to Moore avenue; Clarendon avenue from Fort avenue to Langhorn avenue and Marion avenue from Hunter avenue to Langhorn avenue.

Hamilton avenue from Pershing drive to Ashton avenue; Hawthorne road from Larcom lane to Seneca trail; Hayes street from Maryland avenue to Waldon avenue; Highland place from Hillcrest drive to car tracks; Hunter avenue from Strickler avenue to Milton avenue; Hillcrest drive from Lee highway to Livingstone avenue; Kanawha place from Hayes street to Beverly place; Latterner avenue from Pershing drive to Park avenue; Langhorn avenue from Clarendon avenue to West street; Milton avenue from Langhorn avenue to Pershing drive; Nelson avenue from Virginia avenue to Carroll avenue; Nesmith avenue from Eldon place to Wheeler avenue; Oakton street from Memorial drive to Waycroft avenue; Parker avenue from Washington avenue to Fugate avenue.

Democrats to Meet.

The Democratic executive committee of Arlington County will meet in the Democratic headquarters at Carlendon tonight at 8 o'clock. Chairman Charles R. Fenwick announces plans for the Congressional campaign in the county will be considered.

The Arlington Volunteer Fire Department meets tonight in its firehouse at 8 o'clock. The matter of calling for new bids for the construction of the addition to the building will be considered.

The Gamma Sigma Fraternity will hold its first dance of the season tonight at the Ashton Heights clubhouse. With Claughton Ball and the Virginia Serenaders furnishing the music, dancing will start at 9 o'clock and end at 10.

According to a report given out yesterday by Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, there was a total of 264 children given dental treatment at the summer school and preschool clinics held at the several health centers. The report shows that at the Clarendon health center 71 children were treated, at Cherrydale 62, Jefferson 70 and at the Arlington Health Center 61, making a total of 264 children.

The Arlington Kiwanis Club will hold its first joint luncheon meeting with the Rotary Club tomorrow at the Washington Golf and Country Club at 12:30 o'clock. Instead of the usual luncheon meeting today at Windsor Tavern, the club will hold a round-table discussion of matters of interest to its members.

The equirrel-hunting season has opened in the following counties in Virginia, according to State Game Warden W. Harry Johnson: Arlington, Loudoun, Fairfax, Stafford, Fouquier, Prince William and Westmoreland. The season will continue up to and including September 30.

Only 4 Names On Democratic County Ballot

Ritchie Victory Is Held Sure in Montgomery Primary.

Voters in the Democratic primary in Montgomery County, Md., will be confronted with what is said to be the shortest ballot in the history of the county. The official ballot contains but four names. The candidates are Gov. Albert C. Ritchie and Dr. Charles H. Conley, candidates for Governor, and William M. Maloy and George L. Radcliffe, candidates for the United States Senate.

The Republican ballot contains ten names, including three candidates for Governor, three for the United States Senate, two for State comptroller and two for the House of Representatives.

The short Democratic ballot results from the Fusion ticket composed of Republicans and anti-organization Democrats, which has eliminated a local primary contest in both parties. In the 1930 primary the Democratic ballot contained names of more than 50 candidates.

Ritchie Victory Expected.

Despite the spirited contest being waged by Dr. Conley it is generally regarded that the Democratic organization now in power in the county will carry Montgomery for Gov. Ritchie and also for Mr. Radcliffe, who has been aided here by the late entry of Mr. Maloy in the Senatorial race.

On the Republican ticket the three-cornered fight for Governor being waged by Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, Harry W. Nice and H. Webster Smith is attracting most of the attention. Mr. Smith held a rally in Takoma Park two weeks ago and Senator Goldsborough visited Rockville shortly thereafter. Mr. Nice has not campaigned in the county, although considerable literature favoring his candidacy has been distributed.

In the Senatorial race, former Senator Joseph I. France is the only candidate who has appeared in the county and little has been heard from his two opponents, Col. John Phillip Hill and C. Wilbur Miller.

G. O. P. Congress Fight.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the fight for the Republican nomination for Congress, in which former Representative Frederick N. Zihlman is making a come-back attempt. Zihlman lived in Montgomery County for a number of years while in Congress and is expected to carry the county by a wide margin in the primary. His opponent, William A. Gunter, of Cumberland, has not built up an organization in the county.

Little or no campaigning has been done by Frederick Paul Adkins and W. Newton Jackson, who are striving for the nomination for State Comptroller.

Campaign activity also has been mild on the Democratic side. Mr. Radcliffe is scheduled to address a political rally at Takoma Park tomorrow night, but Gov. Ritchie has announced that he will not speak in any of the counties prior to the primary. Congressman David J. Lewis, Democratic incumbent, is unopposed for his office in the primary.

Approximately 27,000 registered voters now are eligible to vote in the primaries next Wednesday. A general registration will be held September 11, which is expected to add several thousand voters to the list. The Democratic party has a two-to-one majority in registration.

Montgomery Precinct Heads Hail Ritchie

Enthusiastic support for Gov. Albert C. Ritchie in the primary elections was voiced by the Democratic precinct chairmen of Montgomery County at a meeting held in the Rockville Courthouse last night.

Stedman Prescott, county chairman, addressed the gathering on the necessity of polling a large majority for Gov. Ritchie September 12. George Radcliffe, Democratic candidate for United States Senator, also spoke in support of Gov. Ritchie.

Club to Give Dinner.

The Ladies' Social Club of El Nido, Va., meeting at the home of Mrs. Arthur Cavanaugh in McLean, made plans to give a country dinner September 18 from 5 to 8:30 p. m. in St. James' Hall, El Nido. Mrs. Cavanaugh was appointed chairman of the dining room, Miss Jennie Carlin of the kitchen, Miss Elsie Peyton of the stands and Francis Horton, chairman of the dancing from 9 p. m. to midnight.

Time Limit Extended On Real Estate Taxes

County Treasurer J. Forest Walker announced yesterday that the time limit for paying Montgomery County, Md., real estate taxes without an interest penalty has been extended to October 1. The limit originally was set for September 1.

He said interest will be charged from September 1 on all taxes paid after October 1. The delinquent property will be advertised for sale after January 1, 1935, he said.

Philip Wright, Tariff Expert, Economist, Dies

Resident of Forest Glen Succumbs at 73 After Long Illness.

Philip Green Wright, 73, noted economist and tariff expert, died yesterday morning at Sibley Hospital after an illness of several months. He had been a member of the Brookings Institution staff since 1922.

Born in Boston, Mr. Wright was the grandson of Elizur Wright, first to introduce life insurance into the United States. He received his early education at Tufts College, entering Harvard University in 1884. He was awarded his M. A. degree in 1887. Two years later he married Elizabeth Quincy Sewall, of St. Paul, Minn. In 1917 he moved to Washington to become a member of the advisory board of the Tariff Commission, and five years later joined the Brookings Institution.

During his affiliation with the Brookings staff Mr. Wright was author of numerous economic treatises. Among them were "Sugar in Relation to the Tariff," "The Tariff on Vegetable and Mineral Oils," "The Tariff on Iron and Steel," "Cuban Relations With the United States," and "Commercial Relations Between the U. S., Japan and China."

He retired from the Brookings Institution in 1929 and a year later was awarded the degree of LL.D. by Lombard University. In 1931 Mr. Wright was commissioned to engage in research work for the Pacific Relations Institute. Last year he made a study of the "Effect of Inflation on the Handling of Endowment Funds" for the Duke Foundation.

A member of the Cosmos Club here, Mr. Wright took a great interest in civic affairs and three years ago was elected president of the Capitol View Citizens Association. For many years a student of gardening, he cultivated a flower garden at his home in Forest Glen, Md., that is one of the showplaces of suburban Washington.

He is survived by his wife and three sons, Sewall Wright, professor of genetics at the University of Chicago; Quincy Wright, professor of International Law at the University of Chicago, and Theodore Wright, manager of the Curtiss Aircraft Corporation of Garden City, Long Island.

Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Bids Asked for Road In Rock Creek Park

The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission is advertising for bids for the construction of a section of roadway in Rock Creek Park, Unit No. 2, between Jones Mill road and Connecticut avenue in Chevy Chase, Md.

The new road will be constructed of concrete, 20 feet in width, and will be 1.3 miles long. Bids will be opened by the commission in Silver Spring, Md., Tuesday, September 18, at 2 p. m.

St. Michael's School To Reopen Monday

St. Michael's Parish School, Silver Spring, Md., will reopen Monday morning, with registration at the school September 7 and 8.

This year the boys and girls will wear school uniforms. With the exception of the principal, Sister Mary Eleanore and the music teacher, Sister Paul, the teaching corps will be new.

Textile Strike Idle Estimated At 200,000

Number Growing Hourly, Union Leaders Claim; Disorders in South.

(Associated Press.)

The United Textile Workers fell short, from all indications, of obtaining their hoped-for 50 per cent walkout by nightfall Tuesday, but strike leaders said the number of employes answering the call was growing hourly.

The walkout, accompanied by sporadic disorders in Southern mill towns, gained momentum as "flying squadrons" toured industrial centers. Incomplete tabulations placed the number of workers out at approximately 200,000.

George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, said 254,000 of 346,000 cotton textile millhands stayed on the job.

Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the union and chairman of the strike committee, said workers would answer the call in vastly increased numbers. He estimated 300,000 would be out in all textile industries Tuesday night.

Troops Ordered Out in South.

In most cities all was peaceful. Troops were ordered to two South Carolina communities. Disturbances were of a minor nature.

The situation in various centers:

The Carolinas—Eighty thousand millhands out. An estimated equal number remained at work. Disorders flared after unionists organized "flying squadron" to tour mill towns. Their appeals brought out thousands. Sheriff's deputies, armed with machine guns, mustered to protect some mills. Troops ordered on duty in Greenville and Greer, S. C.

Alabama — Situation underwent little change as result of strike call. Thirty mills closed, but 26 of these had been shut since State-wide strike call of July 17. Workers out estimated at around 15,000 with 23,000 staying on job.

Virginia—Strike call unheeded.

New Jersey—Silk workers' union in Paterson calls 20,000 to strike today on report from Gorman that 55 per cent of looms elsewhere are stopped. Paterson industrial board, which promised sanction walkout here when 40 per cent struck, elsewhere, undecided on authorization.

New York—Only up-State affected. Of some 9,100 workers, approximately 3,000 out.

Connecticut — Union employed "flying squadron." Leaders said many locals had arranged to walk out later in week. Of 32,000 workers, an estimated 7,000 were out.

Rhode Island—United Textile Workers met opposition of strong independents. About 4,000 answered call; some 46,000 remained on job.

26,000 Out in Bay State.

Massachusetts—Threat of garment workers' strike intensified situation. As in Rhode Island, independent unionists stayed on job. Some 26,000 out of 60,000 workers answered strike call.

New Hampshire — Large Amoskeag mills shut down. Strike estimated 70 per cent effective. Close to 13,000 workers out with approximately 6,000 at work.

Maine—Little stir. Of normally employed 22,300, only 1,000 or so answered call.

Texas—The textile strike apparently affected only one point in Texas today. Union pickets prevented the opening of the Houston Textile Mills at Houston, officials deciding after several fist fights to open the plant later. About 300 are employed there. Plants at Waco, Fort Worth, Corsicana operated as usual.

Bolivia Reports Victory in Chaco

La Paz Says Paraguayan Drive Is Stopped.

Buenos Aires, Sept. 4 (AP).—Bolivia today claimed Paraguay's offensive in the Chaco has been stopped.

With October and the beginning of the rainy season drawing near, the war ministry of La Paz asserted Paraguayan attacks in three sectors had been bloodily repulsed. A Bolivian counter-offensive was reported under way.

Hard on the heels of yesterday's claims from Asuncion that the Paraguayan forces, driving steadily ahead since the defeat they inflicted at Campovia in December, had occupied 31,000 square miles of the disputed territory, the La Paz communique said Paraguay had been defeated near Algodonal, Carandayty and in the "Veintisiete de Noviembre" sector. Heavy casualties were inflicted on the Paraguayans, it was claimed.

Shoot to Kill Order Stirs Strikers; Rioting in Georgia

S. C.: 'Arcadia mills in Spartanburg has deputized 50 men, two machine guns. All men armed with Winchester rifles and sawed-off shotguns.'"

Gorman characterized Greensboro, N. C., one of the mill towns slow in responding to the strike call, as "a throwback to the fifteenth century."

"What do we see in Greensboro?" he asked a score of reporters. He spread his arms wide and hastily added:

"A castle graces the hilltop. The self-satisfied owner holds forth there with the rest of the blue-bloods. In the valley below are the tiny shacks of the half-starved workers. That, I submit, typifies industrial feudalism in America."

Wires Kept Humming.

Lloyd Garrison, aggressive chairman, and other members of the National Labor Relations Board, kept long distance telephone wires humming in an effort to speed settlement. The opposing camps, however, remained far apart in their views.

Gorman indignantly protested to Gov Ehringhaus of North Carolina, after police and nonunionists, under orders to "shoot to kill," smashed picket lines at a Fayetteville plant. The message to the Governor said:

"Please intercede with officials in Fayetteville, N. C., who have been ordered to shoot to kill our pickets. We feel confident you will not tolerate any such action. Would appreciate your early consideration for the entire strike committee."

Angry pickets bashed a Georgia mill superintendent over the head and left him unconscious.

Women scratched the faces and pulled the hair of nonunionists in a Houston, Tex., outburst. Fists flew thick and fast until police, heavily armed, quelled the disturbance.

Some 10,000 workers in the silk-throwing branch of the industry were called out in a new strike order issued by Gorman. Most of the mills involved were in Pennsylvania.

The union, Gorman disclosed will not insist on a strictly National settlement. He said negotiations already were under way to effect peace in Shelby, N. C., a one-mill town.

Gorman announced more than 1,000 organizers, divided in "flying squadrons," were deploying through the South and New England. He said they would invade towns controlled by "company unions" and ask the workers "not to scab the jobs."

Headquarters for the squads were located in Charlotte, N. C.; Atlanta, Pawtucket, R. I.; New Bedford, Mass.; Manchester, N. H.; Lewiston, Me., and Allentown, Pa.

Danville Called "Tough."

Towns listed by Gorman as "tough to crack" ipcluded Danville, Va.; Greenville and Lewiston.

The issue of Federal aid for the strikers was revived when Gorman wrote Harry L. Hopkins, emergency relief administrator, to refute statements that the union counted on help from the Government.

"These misleading reports have been as embarrassing to us as they must have been to you," Gorman informed Hopkins.

"There was no thought whatever that we might call upon the Federal Emergency Relief for the sustenance of our people, and it is absurd for anyone to think that the question of whether or not a strike was necessary should be determined on any such basis."

"Intolerable Abuses" Charged.

"Our organization has had many strikes. So have all other organizations of labor. We have conducted strikes in the past and we have managed somehow to take care of our people so that they might carry on the struggle. * * *

"We were driven to strike by intolerable abuses and by an attitude of arrogance on the part of management that is, in this year of progress, almost unbelievable."

By way of a parting shot Gorman prophesied:

"The strike will be won because of the indomitable will and the determination of our people that finally the abuses imposed upon the workers by management shall be corrected."

Hopkins earlier announced his organization would not "underwrite" the industrial clash, but would help participants on a basis of individual need.

"Victory Assured," He Says.

Gorman compared his forces with a trained army.

"When we told the textile industry we were going to strike," he blurted, "we meant just that. We knew what we could do and we have done it. The workers are leaving the mills as they would leave a sinking ship.

"The strike movement is irresistible. Victory is assured at this hour. One reason we're so confident is that our ranks are being supplemented by thousands of nonunionists."

Meanwhile, Sloan reported the manufacturers were not faced with a shortage of finished products. He said their supply would last four weeks. He cautioned, however, that if the strike fails to run its course by that time there was danger that Japan woul seize American textile markets.

He discredited charges of abuses existing under the stretch-out, a system calling for operation of an unusually large number of machines by each worker.

"The abuses," he said, "exist chiefly in the strike leaders' minds."

General Strike In Spokane Hinted

Possibility of Sympathy Walk-out Discussed.

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 4 (AP).—Hints of a general strike of Spokane unionists appeared here today as Charles W. Hope, of Seattle, secretary of the regional labor board, said he was attempting to find a means of arbitrating the differences between striking street car and bus operators and the Spokane United Railways.

Representatives of 13 unions held several meetings and leaders said the possibility of a sympathetic strike was discussed. Meanwhile, transportation facilities were operating nearly upon a normal basis, under heavy police protection.

Strikers and police drew into lines here as members of the local textile union began picketing the Oregon Worsted Co. mill as their part in the Nation-wide walkout of textile union workers. There was no disorder.

Few Factories Shut in East, Says Van Horn

All Open in South, New York and New Jersey, He Reports.

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—New York headquarters of the textile manufacturers' associations termed the industry-wide strike on a failure tonight, but a union leader immediately disputed their contentions.

Spokesmen for cotton mills and for silk, rayon and synthetic fabric industries declared telegraphic surveys demonstrated the workers had not heeded their leaders' orders.

George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, asserted only 92,000 were reported absent from cotton mills employing 346,000 workers. The industry employed 410,000 during July, he said, adding that factories employing the remaining 64,000 were yet to report.

Pete Van Horn, president of the National Federation of Textiles, embracing silk and related producers, declared his reports showed no one factory closed down in the South, in New Jersey or New York.

Only three of Pennsylvania's 400 mills had been affected, Van Horn said, while operations in New England had been curtailed about 10 per cent.

Frank Schweitzer, chairman of the silk division strike committee, immediately took issue with Van Horn's statement and asserted "60 per cent of the silk industry was tied up before noon." He added that 80 per cent of the mills would be closed "by nightfall."

Schweitzer Takes Issue.

"Mr. Van Horn's official statement branding the strike a complete failure is ridiculous," Schweitzer added. "We hope Mr. Van Horn and his colleagues are more realistic when they come to negotiate an agreement to settle this walkout."

Mr. Sloan's statement declared "many thousands" of those listed as away from work would be at their jobs "but for the intimidation of motorcades and flying squadrons."

"It remains to be seen whether a minority whose leadership has failed to obtain the confidence of the majority will resort to coercion to force its will," he said. He added: "If intimidation of loyal workers can be held down, there is no doubt that at this minute the strike is a failure." His statement was broadcast.

Mr. Sloan also said manufacturers operating under the silk code were ready to meet two demands of the unions—a shorter work week and increased wages—"provided our competitors making identical textile fabrics under another code * * * made similar changes."

At Van Horn's office it was explained the other code to which he referred was the cotton textile code, under which certain rayon and synthetic products manufacterers elected to operate in preference to the silk code.

Red Stain Seen On Kent's Car, Court Is Told

Kidnap Case Witnesses Identify Bag, Rings as Mrs. Hastings'.

the morning after the defendant and Mrs. Hastings left the Blue Ridge Springs Hotel.

On the stand for the prosecution, Mrs. George Fleming, of Roanoke, who described herself as an intimate friend of Mrs. Hastings, testified that a black week-end bag, offered in evidence by the Commonwealth, had been the property of Mrs. Hastings.

To another question concerning ownership of a wedding ring, the witness identified the jewelry as belonging to Mr. Hastings.

Mrs. Fleming was asked if she knew of any money Mrs. Hastings was to have received from sale of property in the State of Washington. She answered that Mrs. Hastings told her she expected $3,000 from the sale of an apple orchard.

Rings Are Identified.

Another witness, Miss Manda Epperly, of Garden City, identified the wedding ring and another ring found on the dead woman as having belonged to Mrs. Hastings.

The possibility that the woman had been killed several days before her body was found near the highway outside of Stroudsburg was pictured by the State. Dr. W. E. Andrew, of Stroudsburg, who described himself as a "coroner's physician," said rigor mortis had set in while the body apparently was in a sitting position.

He estimated that the woman had been dead about three or four days. The body, he said, was found lying beside the highway about 18 inches from the concrete, and apparently had been lying there less than one day.

Telegrams Introduced.

Telegrams received here during Mrs. Hastings' absence which bore her signature were identified by Western Union employes from Washington, D. C., where the messages were filed. Both messages were telephoned to the office, they testified.

One of the telegrams, directed to Stewart, instructed him to turn her property over to Kent, and the other, directed to Kent, told him to take over her property.

One of the witnesses, Mrs. Maizie Corbin, said the person who telephoned the messages was a man.

G. H. Ferris, Western Union employe, said he traced the telegrams and found that they were telephoned from the Prospect lunchroom, just two doors from the Western Union office.

'Whose Liberty Is Periled?' New Dealers Ask Hoover

of liberty? It is not the liberty of that great mass of people they are worrying about, but the liberty of a small privileged class that has been allowed to acquire property by exploiting the people."

Retort From Byrne.

The sharp "off the cuff" comment of Secretary Ickes reflects the prevalent feeling in the Administration that it is the champion of the under dog, and that its critics are battling in behalf of the top dog. President Roosevelt emphasized this by inference in his satirical comment on the New American Liberty League, which, he suggested, makes property its god.

The same note ran through the comment of Representative Byrns, majority leader and chairman of the Democratic Congressional committee, who said:

"Whose liberty is he talking about? The liberty of the people who have been gouging the public, or the liberty of those who have been gouged?"

This cleavage is becoming more sharply defined every day, as anyone who travels about the country a bit will testify. It is the dominant element in the political picture today. Formerly, both parties tried to straddle this conflict of interest and played both sides. Now it would appear as if the line which once cut across both parties at right angles is swinging around parallel with the Democrats on the left and the Republicans on the right.

Down to Fundamentals.

And while the rival candidates on the firing line scuffle over the details, we now have two able exponents of the opposing philosophies attempting in extended and careful language to outline the principles underlying this great conflict of interest which, it may be expected, will color American politics for some time to come.

Those who often have lamented that there was no difference between the two old parties shortly may have no further cause for complaint, because there is a strong tendency for the first time in recent political history for the two parties to stop shadow-boxing and get down to fundamentals.

Secretary Wallace, formerly a Republican, is generally regarded as the philosopher of the New Deal. Incidentally, he inherits to some extent his differences with Mr. Hoover. His father was Secretary of Agriculture when Mr. Hoover was Secretary of Commerce in the Harding-Coolidge Administration. They clashed sharply over the forerunner of AAA—the old McNary-Haugen Bill—and the story of that conflict, which so far as Agriculture is concerned, is the ancestor of the present battle over the New Deal, is recounted by Wallace in his forthcoming book.

Pleads for Democracy.

Secretary Wallace described the United States as being like a boy of 18—having a fine, strong body, but being unable to make up his mind what he wants to do. He says it is necessary for the Government to change the rules of business and carry it along a middle course. He opposes both Communism and Fascism and pleads for democracy. Though somewhat disillusioned at the snail's speed with which tariff barriers are being hewn down, Secretary Wallace renews his pleas for action in this direction.

His chapter on money takes a somewhat conservative angle. He warns against uncontrolled inflation and favors an ultimately balanced budget. He has a chapter on "Millionaire Booms and Chaos" in which he charges business with being so greedy over immediate profits that it kills customers.

While there is no direct attack on NRA, there is a good deal in the book which inferentially is critical of the things that have been done and what Secretary Wallace feels to have been neglect of the consumer.

As might be expected the book contains much in justification of the AAA experiment, and here is where he directly and specifically comes head on against Mr. Hoover. Mr. Wallace views the work of the wheat adjustment committees, for instance, the regional groups which worked out acreage reduction in various localities, as a good illustration of the democratic process, with local groups imposing limits upon themselves for the common good.

Mr. Hoover's estimate of the AAA experiment is frankly stated in his article in the Saturday Evening Post, which will be included in his book. Contrary to Secretary Wallace, he regards AAA as the shining example of regimentation and infringement upon liberty.

"Instead of temporarily reducing the production of marginal lands by measures of relief pending world recovery, the great majority of farmers were regimented to reduce production from the fertile lands," Mr. Hoover says. "The idea of a subsidy to a farmer to reduce his production in a particular 'staple commodity' was expanded by requiring a contract that he should follow orders from the Secretary of Agriculture in the production of other 'staple commodities.' Voluntary action was further submerged by threats that if he did not sign up he would have difficulty in obtaining credit.

"The whole process has been a profound example both of how bureaucracy, once given powers to invade liberty, proceeds to fatten and enlarge its activities, and of how departures from practical human nature and economic experience soon find themselves so entangled as to force more and more violent steps."

Mr. Hoover recites further steps taken in imposing quotas on cotton and sugar production and continues:

"That all this is marching to full regimentation of thirty millions of our agricultural population is obvious enough. * * * The whole thesis behind this program is the very theory that man is but the pawn of the state. It is a usurpation of the primary liberties of man by government."

Textile Strike Blamed Upon Union Officials

Boston, Sept. 4 (AP).—Ernest N. Hood, president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, tonight charged the general textile strike was "primarily a strike of union officials and not of the union membership." He described the strike as a membership campaign.

Hood said the union membership, "taken as a whole, has very little heart in the strike. The present textile strike affords a very illuminating example of the power of persuasion on the part of union officials over their membership."

U.S. Takes Hand In Louisiana's Political Feud

Registrar Is Ordered Not to Take Names From Vote List.

to see that they were not tampered with.

Mayor Walmsley, battling to prevent Long from seizing political control in the city, hailed the signing of the order as "highly significant."

"Now that the United States courts have stepped in, we feel secure that the rights of the independent voters will be protected. This is a great day for Long's enemies," he said.

Finances to Be Probed.

Long announced at the conclusion of today's legislative committee hearing of charges of graft in the city that the committee next would turn its attention to city finances.

He said auditors would be put in city hall and that bank accounts and bank boxes of city officials would be investigated.

Two legal documents were served on Long during a recess of the investigation by Joseph Noto, civil district deputy sheriff, as the Senator came into the corridor outside the committee room surrounded by soldiers. Long refused to touch the papers and the deputy dropped them at his feet and then scampered away. One of Long's entourage picked up the papers and put them in his pocket. The deputy said they were "some kind of injunction."

A parade of witnesses marched before the committee, guarded by two squads of National Guardsmen, and told stories of graft of city officials and shakedowns of policemen. Long, who did the cross-examining, supplemented the testimony with speeches of his own opinions, and frequently said "so that is what is going on around here."

A witness who said he was J. E. Roberts, proprietor of a printing shop, said he paid Carroll Walmsley, brother of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, commissions for printing contracts from the City of New Orleans and the Louisiana State Insurance Commission. He said that many times he was not paid for the work, including 10,000 handbills censuring Huey Long.

Police Frame-up Alleged.

Another witness who said she was Mrs. Rose Picou, former "pig stand" operator, said she and her husband had been framed by the police when they interrupted a friendly card game and demanded $5 for protection.

She said their licenses were taken away from them but that she finally "kept the peace" by feeding daily free of charge three shifts of policemen. The "uninvited guests," she said, cost her from $4 to $5 a day.

When a police lieutenant came to take their licenses away and close her place she said the lieutenant told her the "orders for the closing came direct from Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley."

A man saying he was J. Henry Blache testified he lost $5,000 on some property because his tenants claimed they had to pay so much graft they could not pay the rent. He said his assessment was increased from $4,500 to $8,500 because he refused to "dance to administration music" and eventually he lost the property.

Alvin P. Howard, vice president of the New Orleans Times Picayune Publishing Co., testified he had never heard of the operation of an alleged "Old Howard Lottery" and that he had never had any interest in lotteries.

A woman saying she was Mrs. Anna Pujol, 63-year-old widow, said District Attorney Eugene Stanley refused to prosecute a lottery operator who had moved into one of her houses on a sublease and the police refused to arrest them but that she finally got them out on a vacate order.

The Famed President's Cup

The renowned trophy of motorboat racing. John A. Remon, president of the President's Cup Regatta Association, and Admiral William H. Standley, chief of Naval Operations, examine it at a luncheon meeting, held yesterday at Sholl's Cafe. The regatta will be September 20-23.

4 Million Cattle Purchased by U. S.

Hides Will Not Be Put On Open Market.

The Farm Administration reported yesterday that up to August 31 it had purchased 4,250,000 cattle in more than a score of drought States, for which part payment of $38,811,870 already has gone to nearly a quarter of a million farmers, according to the Associated Press.

Harry L. Hopkins, the Federal relief administrator, at about the same time declined to disclose additional details of the Government's plan to dispose of hides from the millions of cattle purchased.

Inquiries were prompted by the fact that, beginning today the Government will keep all processed hides and skins of drought cattle off the commercial market.

It also announced the addition of 22 counties in six States to the emergency drought-stricken list and the inclusion of four Arkansas counties in the secondary area.

Workers Ask Release of 5 Embassy Pickets

Petitions demanding the release of five persons, jailed for picketing the German Embassy in an anti-Nazi demonstration July 18, were presented to Marvin H. McIntyre, President Roosevelt's secretary, yesterday morning by several colored representatives of workers' organizations.

The 25-day sentences imposed on the five, Joe Zamoras, Sam Dickens, Sylvia Hartman, Freda Brice and Mary McCleave, colored, expire September 11.

NRA to Press Industry Codes To Halt Bolts

will resign as a result of the clash of the National code authority.

The divisional code authority members as well as those on the National code authority were for the most part drawn from among leaders in the National Retail Coal Association, and the view within the industry is that most of them see eye to eye with the National leaders who have just resigned. There was no official comment from the code authority offices last night, however.

"The operation of the code proceeded without specification of such procedural matters until it became apparent that actual figures set by code authorities for certain trade areas and proposed for others departed widely from the principles of NRA upon which the marketing provisions were known to be based," the NRA lettter said.

"Protection of the public interest is an obligation resting upon NRA. The price fixing indulged in under the code required NRA to intervene on behalf of the public interest.

Act Still in Effect.

"It was only recently, when it appeared that the approved procedure failed to produce the type of price fixing which you desired that you and your counsel introduced the objections to procedure which you now advance. NRA, irrespective of procedure, will be unable to approve any determination by any agency which does not conform to the principles stated at the time of the drafting of these code provisions, i. e., the figures must be 'low,' must be 'costs,' and may be made mandatory only in emergencies.

"Finally, it must be made clear that the act is still in effect, the code stands unrevised, and the divisional code authorities are still in operation for the purpose of carrying out their functions under the code and the act, and NRA must continue to supervise operations under the code and the act in order to provide adequate protection of the public interest.

"Self-government by industry is a privilege under the act which can only be exercised so long as the individuals constituted as agencies for that purpose operate in consonance with the interest of the public. Divisional code authorities may exercise the powers granted under the code with reference to prevention of destructive price cutting and otherwise, if the facts justify such action, but may not do so except in conformity to the principles binding NRA, some of which have been herein set forth."

Pleas for Mooney Sent to Roosevelt

Nye and Babcock Request Steps for Pardon.

Telegrams requesting Executive aid for Tom Mooney, California prisoner, were sent to President Roosevelt yesterday by Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, and E. Claude Babcock, president, American Federation of Government Employes.

The Nye message:

"Mother Mooney, symbol of mothers of the world, finally rests. Would it be possible for you as Chief Representative of millions of citizens of these United States to intercede and urge a speedy pardon for Tom Mooney that he may attend the burial of his best, trusty friend and never-tired mother, Mary Mooney? Surely her visit to you and her request would be appreciated, could she speak."

Babcock asked the President to call on the Governor of California to pardon Mooney.

Maryland Trio Hurt In New Jersey Crash

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Eales and Craig McKee, all of Severn Oaks, Md., are in Middlesex Hospital at New Brunswick, N. J., recovering from head injuries received in an automobile accident near that city.

Eales, Washington manager of the Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Baltimore, who was driving, could remember nothing of the accident. McKee is the club champion of Indian Springs Country Club. All three suffered brain concussion. They will remain in the hospital three or four days for observation.

Coed Murder Trial Jurors Are Picked

Norman, Okla., Sept. 4 (AP).—Neal Myers sat unruffled in court today as attorneys selected a jury of farmers for his murder trial on a charge of killing his coed sweetheart at the University of Oklahoma, 19-year-old Marian Mills.

Prosecutors elected to ask the jury to send young Myers to prison for life, although a death sentence is possible upon conviction. The State contends he was responsible for an attempted criminal operation that caused the death of Miss Mills, an expectant mother.

Police Hunt 8-Ton Cache Of Dynamite

Shack Near Pickfair Is Raided; Blast Would Wipe Out Mile Area.

Hollywood, Sept. 4 (AP).—Frantically seeking a cache they said they believed contained more than 8 tons of dynamite and black powder, police today raided a bootlegger's abandoned shack back of the Mary Pickford-Douglas Fairbanks Beverly Hills estate—Pickfair—only to find the explosives had been moved to a new hiding place.

Officers said they had information three men appeared at the place, scarcely 400 yards from Pickfair, last night and loaded boxes onto a truck.

Police said they believed the boxes contained the 17,060 pounds of dynamite and powder stolen from a powder company magazine near Newhall last May 11.

A score of radio cars patrolled the Hollywood Hills today, seeking a new cache where the three men might have hidden the explosives, which, if detonated, experts said, might virtually wreck an area of the city a mile in diameter.

Pickfair, the million-dollar estate of the estranged "first family" of filmdom, at present is untenanted except for servants. Miss Pickford is in the East, while Fairbanks is living at the home of his late brother, John Fairbanks.

Four persons were held in connection with the theft of the dynamite and powder. They gave their names as Fred Sackle, of Beverly Hills; Cloyd H. Phillips, of Los Angeles, and Miss Fern Gay and Mrs. Doris Trester, both of Long Beach.

The first clew to the identity of the alleged robbers, police said, came from M. A. Pryor, Whittier well driller, who reported a woman and two men offered to sell him a large quantity of dynamite and powder at one-third wholesale value.

Ritchie Sweep In Upper Shore Counties Seen

Governor Conceded Group of 7 in Democratic Primary.

counties and in Baltimore and Harford counties despite a chaotic and confused Democratic situation in most of these places. There have not been so many warmly contested primary fights for local offices among the Democrats in 15 years. This applies to the lower shore counties as well as to those above the Choptank River.

98 File in Wicomico.

The situation in Somerset County was reviewed at length in the first article of this series. In Worcester County the forces headed by State Senator Milton Veasey are under sharp attack, while a group of independents are making a particular effort to defeat Mr. Veasey.

In Wicomico County 98 Democrats are seeking nomination to local offices, with three filed for Senator; 10 for 4 places in the House of Delegates, 4 for county treasurer, 3 for State's attorney, 6 for register of wills and 13 for sheriff. Meanwhile a group of "young Turks" are seeking to wrestle control of the central committee from the Bailey-Gordy-Miles old-line leadership.

The situation is calmer in Dorchester County, but there also is found "bob-tail" fighting—a term in Maryland politics which means a plethora of candidates running independently as distinguished from factional fights. The slogan in "bob-tail" fighting is "every man for himself." Where there is strong party leadership there is seldom "bob-tail" fighting.

The Democratic situation in Talbot County appears especially chaotic and leaderless. Henry Turner, who handled the party in that county with a firm hand, died two years ago. W. Mason Shehan, who held the leadership with Mr. Turner, renounced his interest in politics several months ago to seek nomination as the chief judge of the Second Judicial Circuit. John P. Stafford and Tom Falkner are trying to hold the organization together but are under sharp attack from groups aspiring to the throne.

Beck Runs Into Trouble.

S. Scott Beck is also having trouble in leading his faction to victory in Kent County. Forced to compromise with his old party enemy, Harrison Vickers, Mr. Beck consented to a "harmony ticket" representing both factions, only to have a group dissatisfied with that arrangement file an "independent ticket." Mr. Beck's advocacy of the candidacy of George L. Radcliffe for Governor is said to have weakened his position.

Not only did Mr. Beck's action anger many staunch Ritchie men in the county, but the "Independents" are assailing him on that score. Mr. Beck was one of Gov. Ritchie's most enthusastic supporters until he was named comptroller of customs at Baltimore through recommendation of Senator Millard E. Tydings, who sponsored the Radcliffe candidacy.

Mr. Beck is now warmly supporting the Ritchie candidacy as is State Senator Dudley G. Roe, the Democratic leader of Queen Annes. Mr. Roe also was one of the supporters of the abortive Radcliffe candidacy. The Roe organization also is fighting for its political life against a group styling themselves "the New Dealers."

In Cecil County the Democratic leadership has not been centered in any group since the days of former Gov. Austin L. Crothers, 20 years ago. The prize in this county appears to be the forthcoming appointment of a postmaster at Elkton, which has inspired a sharp fight for control of the county State central committee. A group led by H. Winfield Lewis is seeking to unhorse the remnants of the old Crothers faction.

Woman in Senate Race.

The Tydings-Archer faction, the dominant group in Harford County, also is having trouble with three candidates for State Senator, including Miss Mary E. W. Risteau, the first woman to serve in the Maryland House of Delegates; eight candidates for the four places in the House, and five candidates for sheriff.

But in Baltimore County the breaking of factional lines and general party confusion seems to climax conditions elsewhere. In that county the old Harrison Rider organization is disintegrating rapidly—a condition which started four years ago when Mr. Rider turned against Gov. Ritchie. Aside from "bob tail" fighting, there are three factions seeking control in this county.

Yet despite this general dissatisfaction with the old line party leaders in these counties, Gov. Ritchie's prospects do not seem to be affected. The various factions seeking to overthrow what is regarded as Ritchie County organizations either have declared for the Governor or contend that their fights are purely local and have no Statewide significance. If Dr. Conley is being supported by any of the insurgent groups on the upper shore, they are not talking about it.

On the Eastern Shore there are two interesting judgeship fights. The entire bench in the First judicial district, comprising the lower Eastern Shore, must be elected this fall. This is the bench which was so sharply criticized for its handling of the Princess Anne lynching.

Of the incumbents only Judge Robert F. Duer, Somerset Republican, is seeking reelection. Within his party he has no opposition. James McAllister, of Dorchester, seeking the Republican nomination as chief judge of the circuit, is unopposed in the primary as is William N. Andrews, candidate for the third place on that bench.

The Democrats, however, have a sharp fight over the nominations for chief judge, and for one of the associate judgeships. Benjamin A. Johnson, of Wicomico County, is opposed by George B. Myers, of Somerset, for chief judge, with Mr. Johnson reported as having the edge. James M. Crockett and Franklin Upshur, both of Worcester, are fighting it out for the associate judgeship nomination. Mr. Upshur was the courageous Shore man who unsuccessfully ran for Congress as a wet from this dry district eight years ago.

The nominations and elections for chief judge of this and other circuits are of State-wide interest because the chief judges of the circuit comprise the Maryland Court of Appeals, the highest State tribunal.

More sharply contested than the first circuit fight is that in the second circuit comprising the upper Shore counties, over the chief judgeship. It is a three-cornered fight between Thomas J. Keating, now an associate judge of that circuit; Mr. Shehan and James F. Evans, of Cecil County. Although Mr. Shehan is claimed to be in the lead, it appears to be a closely fought battle.

Shehan Given Two Counties.

Mr. Shehan is expected to carry his county of Talbot and Caroline County. The Beck-Harrison combination in Kent is backing Judge Keating, while the latter is expected to come out on top in his county of Queen Annes. Cecil County is given to Mr. Evans. The outcome depends on the margin by which each candidate carries these counties.

The Beck indorsement of Judge Keating is said to have proved unpopular and Mr. Evans and Mr. Shehan are feverishly trying to carry the county over Judge Keating. While Mr. Shehan, one of the best known lawyers in the State and a former president of the Maryland Bar Association, is showing strength among the Kent watermen, he is being attacked for his consistent opposition to the building of a bridge across the Chesapeake Bay. He is counsel for the Annapolis-Claiborne Ferry Co.

4 States' Attorneys Get Pay Increases

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Commonwealth's attorneys from four counties in the Thirteenth Judicial Circuit were granted salary increases at a special hearing today before Judge Frederick W. Coleman.

The salary of G. B. Wallace, Stafford County, was increased from $1,100 to $1,300; E. R. Carner, Spotsylvania, $1,000 to $1,200; Berhan Mahon, Caroline County, $1,200 to $1,425, and Joseph A. Billingsley, King George County, $1,100 to $1,400. Hearing on the petition of Commonwealth's Attorney W. B. F. Cole, Fredericksburg, was deferred until September 15.

Virginia CWA Cost 2 Million, Report Reveals

11,483 Men Given Work in Six-Month Term, Survey Shows.

Richmond, Sept. 4 (Spl.).—An expenditure of $2,172,371.65, with employment for 11,483 men during the six-month period from November 20 to April 28, is the record of the 742 Federal CWA projects in Virginia, according to Maj. O. C. Drew, assistant engineer for the agency in the State.

Although the CWA stopped work on all projects on February 15 which were not on Government property, the agency continued until April 28. Many projects have been taken over by State and local agencies, and work is being continued, Maj. Drew said today. Not until the report on the last project was turned into his office August 30 was the Federal CWA officially closed.

In his report for the agency it is shown that there was a total of $771,651.96, which was returned to the Government as projects were completed under the estimated cost. The major part of the money was expended under the War Department, including projects at Langley Field, repairing National cemeteries and building up harbor defenses in the State. A total of $889,063.79 was used for this purpose.

The Navy Department claimed the next largest expenditure, with $467,608.91, used mostly in the Newport News-Norfolk-Portsmouth area.

Some of the other work undertaken by the CWA included surveys in real property, homestead records, commercial censuses and the advertisement of various experimental stations for agricultural uses, Maj. Drew said.

Beer Tax Law Violators Face Stiff Penalties

Avoiding Levy Made More Expensive Than Paying Up.

Richmond, Sept. 4 (Spl.).—With a policy of making violation of the beer excise laws much more expensive than the payment of the taxes, the State department of taxation has offered violators the choice between paying a penalty of $100 plus back taxes, and prosecution.

In each case thus far the violator has chosen to pay the department's penalty rather than go to court, it was learned today. Under the law the department can assess any penalty in considers fair "in lieu of prosecution."

There are now eight inspectors engaged in enforcing the beer excise law, and they are maintaining a check upon 300 distributors and more than 5,000 retailers. The tax is collected from the distributors except in cases in which retailers purchase from out-of-State distributors. Retailers who purchase out of the State are required to post a bond guaranteeing the payment to the State of excise levy on the beer sold.

Since the opening of Richmond offices of the Federal Alcoholic Taxation Unit, Bureau of Internal Revenue, in May, 127 persons have been arrested in the State on charges of having liquor in their possession on which the required tax had not been paid.

This report, made to Col. Daniel L. Porter, district supervisor, by J. H. Wickham, in charge of the Richmond offices, was accompanied by the August report of activities of the field agents of the unit.

Last month 39 stills were seized, as compared to 40 in July, 29 in June and 18 in May. Stills last month averaged 215 gallons in capacity.

Virginia Launches Drive Against Rum Smugglers

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Coast Guard and customs special agents today launched a drive against rum smugglers and offered a big cash inducement to informers who lead the authorities to hiding places of foreign liquors.

Informers will be paid 25 per cent of the value of seized liquors and in the event the rum ship also is captured they will get one-fourth of the price it brings.

Coast Guard headquarters here has learned of the landing of a huge cargo of foreign liquors in New Orleans and is on the lookout for rum ships reported along the coast from Boston to Norfolk. Three were sighted near Boston last Saturday, and there were three others cruising along the New England coast headed south.

At Norfolk Coast Guard headquarters is was stated that no rum ships had entered Virginia waters, so far as was known. It was reported that one attempted to make its way up Chesapeake Bay several weeks ago, but was sighted near the entrance to the Virginia Capes and chased back to sea.

Skyline Drive To Be Opened September 15

"Ickes Parkway" Proposed as Name of Another Virginia Highway.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—The Skyline Drive, from Panorama on the Lee highway to Swift Run Gap on Spotswood Trail, will be thrown open to motorists on Saturday, September 15, Secretary Ickes has informed Senator Harry F. Byrd in a letter which the Virginian made public today.

It had been originally planned to open only part of the Skyline Drive from Panorama to Big Meadows when President Roosevelt dedicated the scenic mountain highway. Secretary Ickes told Senator Byrd and a delegation of Virginians that he would insist upon the opening of the entire 40-mile stretch instead of only 20 miles of it.

This decision means that motorists may enter the Skyline either in Swift Run Gap or at Panorama and motor to the other end. Under the original plan, the only entrance would have been at Panorama, and motorists would have been compelled to turn at Big Meadows and return over the same route.

"The Ickes Parkway" is proposed as the name for the 400-mile-long scenic mountain highway along the crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains to connect the Shenandoah National Park and the Great Smoky National Park, in an editorial in the Harrisonburg Daily News Record, which published the first article ten years ago suggesting the creation of a National park in the mountains of northern Virginia.

The News Record says Senator Byrd a few days ago, in conversation with a group of valley citizens, suggested this name be selected in honor of the present Secretary of Interior. It adds that it is hoped Senator Byrd will sponsor a resolution in Congress, if necessary, to carry out the proposal.

Shake-up of Police Force Is Studied

Probe Committee Named at Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Reelection of city police officials was deferred by the city council last night pending possible reorganization of the department.

The council named a special committee to investigate the police administration and submit recommendation for changes. The committee consists of E. G. Heflin, Cecil L. Reid, George L. Hunter, and John F. Gouldman, jr.

The police personnel includes S. B. Perry, chief; E. C. Musselman, night chief, and J. A. Stone, J. P. Smith, Catlett Jenkins, and Arthur Kendall, patrolmen. Salaries will continue on the existing scale, the council voted. The police chief will receive $140 per month, night chief $132.50, and patrolmen $125.

Police reorganization has been urged intermittently since the council engaged Capt. Louis J. Stoll, retired Washington police captain, to make a report on local conditions two years ago. No action was taken at the time.

Fair Program To Start Today At Purcellville

Loudoun County Exhibits Will Feature Dog, and Horse Shows.

Purcellville, Va., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Everything is in readiness for the gates of the Loudoun County Fair and horse show to open tomorrow morning for a two-day exhibition.

Indications point now to the fair this year being the most successful in recent years.

The superintendents have assured a large number of exhibits in each department. The best that Loudoun County men and women can produce will be shown to the thousands expected to attend.

A feature of the opening day will be a dog show. Jack Thomas and Thomas Taylor are superintendents. Classes to be shown include male and female under 1 year old, and male and female over 1 year old in setters, pointers, fox and beagle hounds, coon dog and nonsporting dog.

The horse show will open tomorrow morning with the heavy drafts. In the afternoon the half-breed classes and hunters will be shown. On Thursday, the classes will consist of ponies and hunters. Irvin Beavers is manager, and the judges include Lodge Bowles, of Boyce; Janon Fisher, of Monkton, Md., and Norman Corbin, of McLean.

A style show and musical program will be given in the auditorium on Thursday at 8 p. m. Eight classes in the style show include hand-made dresses only. Mrs. Carroll Paxson and Miss Mozelle Anderson are superintendents.

The department superintendents include: Field corps, Joe Dillon; domestic science, Miss Bertha Potts and Miss Helen Welsh; flowers, Mrs. Bentley Gregg; needle work, Mrs. Frank McComb; managers of the auditorium, Dan Wine and J. D. Dillon.

The committee in charges includes F. H. James, D. C. Sands, R. T. McCray, C. M. Warner, J. D. Dillon, E. E. Nichols and Dan Wine.

Resort Prepares For Celebration

Colonial Beach to Stage Three-Day Event.

Colonial Beach, Va., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Completion of the Mardi Gras program for Friday, Saturday and Sunday has been announced by the Colonial Beach Business Men's Association.

The grand parade, in which the association offers prizes to the best decorated car or float, will take place Saturday. The baby parade also will take place Saturday morning.

A bathing beauty contest is scheduled for Sunday morning at 11 a. m., with a horse show sponsored by the Falmouth Riding and Hunt Club taking place at 3 p. m. A fancy dress contest will be held each of the three days.

Other events will be swimming races for boys and women Friday and men's swimming races and a canoe race Sunday.

Auto Dash to Save Dionne Baby Described by Baltimore Doctor

Baltimore, Sept. 4 (Spl.).—A dash by automobile from Baltimore to Canada to take radium gas for use in the treatment of one of the famed Dionne quintuplets, was described today by Dr. Edmund Kelly, son of Dr. Howard A. Kelly, internationally-famed radium expert of the Johns-Hopkins Hospital.

The younger Dr. Kelly returned to Baltimore today from a month's vacation in Canada, which was interrupted by his dash to Baltimore and back with the radium gas.

He explained that the smallest Dionne quintuplet, Marie, had a small tumor on her thigh, and that Dr. Allen Roy Dafoe, the children's physician, feared it might spread and cause death.

The two physicians visited the quintuplets, and the elder Kelly stated he believed radium treatment would reduce the tumor. But the nearest radium gas available was in Baltimore, so the younger Dr. Kelly motored to Baltimore for it.

He took it back in tiny brass cartridges packed between layers of felt in a leaden box, he said. Upon arrival at the home of the quintuplets the brass capsules, still between their layers of felt, were strapped against the tumor. Radium emanations caused appreciable improvement in the condition of the baby, Dr. Kelly said.

'Machine Rule' Of Ritchie Hit By G.O.P. Rival

"Centralization of Power" Flayed by Goldsborough in Radio Address.

Baltimore, Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Breaking the political silence he had observed throughout the current primary campaign, Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, tonight bitterly assailed the Ritchie adimnistration of Maryland during the last 15 years.

Senator Goldsborough delivered his address by radio. Heretofore contented himself with personally greetings the voters of the State. But tonight he opened up with his heaviest artillery upon the Democratic regime, singling out Gov. Ritchie particularly as his target.

He charged "misgovernment and incompetent management" in nearly every department of the State; cited alleged scandals in the State roads commission and the motor vehicles department, and severely criticized the management of the State insurance department.

Centralization of power in Annapolis has reduced the counties of the State virtually to the position of provinces, he said, and the workmen's compensation law has been reduced almost to a mockery.

Flays "Political Machine."

"Officeholders, selected not for ability, fitness or merit, devote their time and their talents to the task of strengthening and perpetuating the grip of a political machine," he declared.

He was particularly vigorous in attacking the administration of the State roads commission under Gov. Ritchie.

"It is fair to state," he said, "that at the close of my administration (as Governor of Maryland from 1911 to 1914) the public roads of Maryland were regarded as examples of unsual workmanship, and our reputation for good roads probably was superior to that of any other State in the East.

"But within the last decade we have lost our reputation as a State building the best roads. The roads have not been sufficiently improved, but the political machine has prospered. Roads have been built not to meet the requirements of public convenience but to yield a harvest of votes for political favorites."

Gov. Ritchie's administration, he charged, "has bent its every effort to establish a ruling class to the detriment of the public interest" during the 15 years it has been in power. Hence, Senator Goldsborough said, "a change is imperative."

He assailed the centralization of power at Annapolis and pointed to the condition in which the counties of Maryland now find themselves. "Instead of governing themselves," he said, "they are controlled by central executive power so that they are compelled to submit to the dictates of State officials and are not permitted to determine local questions in accordance with their local needs."

He cited the action of the last Legislature in taking entire jurisdiction over the building and maintenance of all roads in the counties, and declared the State roads commission now decides what roads are to be built "without reference to the views of the people in the county as to what is desirable and preferable."

"As a result," he said, "the roads are built in localities favored by the State administration, while unfavored sections are neglected and suffer."

Frederick, Md., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Drys will open their campaign in Frederick County with a mass meeting at New Market tomorrow night, to be addressed by the Rev. F. E. Williar, Daleville, Va., formerly of Mount Airy.

The meeting will be under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, New Market Methodist Protestant, Methodist Episcopal and Brethren Churches. The Rev. Williar is southeastern director of the Allied Dry Forces. Frederick County will vote on the wet and dry issue at the primary election September 12.

List of Anne Arundel Candidates Completed

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Names of 46 Democrats and 24 Republicans, candidates for public office, will appear on official ballots in the primary election of September 12 in Anne Arundel County.

Those in the two groups are candidates in State-wide and county-wide contests. Although a record number of candidates in each party filed during the early stages, the final line-up was reduced by withdrawals. On the Democratic State-wide ticket William S. Gordy, jr., for comptroller; Herbert R. O'Conor, for attorney general, and James A. Young, for clerk of the Court of Appeals, are unopposed, while on the Republican side there is no opposition for court clerk, attorney-general, and Representatives in Congress except as to the governorship nomination. Locally the Democrats have fights on hand for all posts except State's attorney and four of the seven county commissioners.

The Republicans are much better off, their only contests being for sheriff and State central committee membership.

Col. John Phillip Hill, of Baltimore, in Annapolis today, expressed confidence that he will land the Republican nomination for United States Senator. He said he would carry every legislative district in Baltimore City, and a majority of the counties.

Salisbury Citizen Is Certain to Win Comptroller Post

By Staff Correspondent.

Salisbury, Sept. 4.—Regardless of what happens in the September primary election and in the general election in November, the next State comptroller will come from Salisbury, as he has for the last 12 years.

Both Republican candidates for comptroller are natives of Salisbury—Newton Jackson, son of the once powerful Republican leader, William P. Jackson, and Frederic P. Adkins, well known in the building supply business. The victor of that fight will face in the general election William S. Gordy, jr., also of Salisbury, the unopposed Democratic candidate and holder of the office since 1922.

Incidentally, four years ago Mr. Gordy was opposed by young Mr. Jackson, defeating him, both over the State and in Wicomico County. Mr. Gordy, cashier of the Salisbury National Bank, has held the office of comptroller longer than any other Marylander.

Oyster Credit Directors for 2 States Named

Loocherman and Northran Are Elected for Maryland.

Easton, Md., Sept. 4 (AP).—Maryland and Delaware directors of the Oyster Planters Production Credit Association were elected at a meeting of planters here today.

Charles A. Loocherman, of Crisfield, and W. E. Northran, of Solomons Island, were named directors for Maryland. I. W. Tarburton, of Dover, Del., was named director for Delaware. A secretary-treasurer will be elected at the final organization meeting Monday at Salisbury. Dr. R. B. Truitt, of College Park, holds the position temporarily.

To Attend Meeting.

The association was formed at a meeting at Newport News, Va., last week, to provide credit to oyster planters in the Chesapeake Bay area.

About 40 planters from Maryland, Delaware and Virginia attended today's meeting. Swepson Earle, Maryland State Conservation Commissioner, and J. Wilkcutts, chairman of the Delaware Shellfisheries Commission, were present.

Earle promised the planters adequate police protection for their beds and urged cooperation with the credit association.

Purposes Explained.

J. Richards Nelson, of the Farm Credit Administration, said application may be made for the loans at once, or as soon as the final organization was effected.

Explaining the purposes of the new agency, Nelson said it was designed to extend credit to oyster planters on the same basis that crop production loans were made to farmers.

The loans will be made at 5 per cent interest for 12 months, although it is not compulsory to repay them within that time.

Two District Firemen Are Given Promotions

Sergt. J. E. Allman of the fire department yesterday was promoted to lieutenant to fill the vacancy created by the recent retirement of Lieut. J. J. Liston. Private B. R. Ihrie was promoted to sergeant. Both men had been receiving extra compensation of $5 a month for outstanding efficiency.

Legion Crowns Mattie Jackson 'Miss Virginia'

Lynchburg Convention Opens Today With Elections.

By Charles Clark.

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 4.—Miss Mattie Jackson, of Lynchburg, tonight was crowned Miss Virginia of 1934, an honor carrying the prestige of the Old Dominion's most beautiful girl, as 3,000 citizens and American Legionnaires and their women folk cheered the decision of the three judges who had narrowed the competitors down from 67.

The contest climaxed three days of play. Tomorrow the 800 or more legionnaires and members of the auxiliary get down to the final business of the sixteenth annual convention.

The legion and auxiliary will select officers tomorrow for the new year.

Robert L. Inskó, of Lorton, is the only candidate for State legion commander. Mrs. Felix Parker, of Roanoke, probably will be named to head the women's organization, and Virginia Beach appears certain to be selected for the scene of the next frolic.

The selection of Miss Virginia climaxed a contest that involved more than 4,000 Virginia girls. Tonight's winner will go to Miami next month to compete with the State beauties from all over the Nation for the honor of Miss America of 1934.

Legion Parade Held.

Amid the cheering of half the population of Lynchburg the legion parade was held this afternoon.

The Forty and Eight completed its program today with the election of the following officers:

West Virginia 8 and 40 Officers Are Elected

Parkersburg, W. Va., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—West Virginia American Legionnaires and their women's auxiliary members today held business sessions, receptions and a joint commander's banquet. Both organizations will close their four-day convention tomorrow after electing officers for the year.

New officers of the Eight and Forty women's organization are: Mrs. Roy E. Hale, Parkersburg, la chapeau; Mrs. Lester Harmon and Mrs. George W. Kinsey, Fairmont, vice presidents; Mrs. C. D. Montgomery, Wheeling, historian; Mrs. Blake Bolyard, Montgomery, Lanaumonier; Mrs. Bernice Clem Clarksburg, le concierge, and Mrs. C. W. Sieg, Wheeling, la surintendante.

John Thomas Taylor, of Washington, D. C., National legislative committee chairman, in an address last night discussed needed legislation for the welfare of war veterans. Mrs. William H. Bioster, jr., National president of the American Legion Auxiliary, was another banquet speaker.

A resolution, introduced by Louis A. Johnson, of Clarksburg, past National commander, urging dismissal of Frank T. Hines, veterans administrator, recalled charges made by Johnson regarding presentation of facts to the Administration on pensions.

Dentist Is Dead In Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Dr. Walter M. Delavan, 50, dentist here for the past 22 years, died at his home suddenly about noon today of a heart attack. He had been in impaired health for more than a year.

He was the son of the late Rensselaer and Alice Delavan and was born in Malden Bridge, N. Y. He took his professional training at Baltimore Medical College.

Surviving are the widow, formerly Miss Bingley, of this city; a son, W. M. Delavan, jr., of New Jersey; a sister, Miss Edith Delavan, of this city, and a brother, Ralph Delavan, of Elsmere, N. Y.

Club Chairmen Named.

Mrs. O. B. Livingston, president of the Falls Church Women's Club, announces the following committee chairmen for the coming year: Program, Mrs. J. L. Crupper; social, Mrs. A. H. Barbor; library, Mrs. Samuel Styles; membership, Mrs. J. W. Garner; publicity, Mrs. Guy Ervin; foundation, Mrs. Byron Austin. Chairmen will select their assistants.

Sinclair Sees Favor Hinted By Roosevelt

Cordiality Marks Talk of Nominee With President.

"All the money the railroads owe the Government doesn't total the value of our road alone."

Mr. Pelley said he had not resigned his presidency of the N. Y. N. H. & H., to take a position as head of a new railroad association, as reported under contemplation. Such an organization has been proposed to take the place of the American Railway Association and the Association of Railway Executives, and Mr. Pelley is understood to be under considerable pressure to assume the leadership.

As to this, the railroad chief would not talk. He did say, however, that he discussed with Mr. Roosevelt the rate increase asked by the railroads and the prospects of Federal regulation of bus, truck, waterway and air competitors. He said he was "hopeful" of legislation along these lines at the next session of Congress, but added, a bit ruefully:

"Of course, I have been hopeful of that for some time past."

The railroad situation, he said, "is about like it has been. I can't say there's been any great improvement. But with an increase in rates and regulation of competitors we would get along all right."

Berle Another Visitor.

Whether Mr. Berle also took up the railroads on his visit could not be learned. One of the original members of the Brain Trust, he has been given several jobs by the President in addition to studying the railroads. With Mrs. Berle, he drove here for lunch and could not be reached by newspapermen.

Mr. Kennedy, en route to Washington from his summer home at Cape Cod, stopped over to report that the new stock exchange commission would be ready to take over supervision of the exchanges by October 1, and that regulations for floor brokers and specialists would be issued within the next week of ten days. Questions concerning exemptions of smaller stock exchanges also remain to be decided, he said.

In answer to questions as to the current dullness in Wall street, Mr. Kennedy declared that "no regulation of the commission, nor intimation of regulations, can be blamed for that condition." He indicated he expected volume on the important exchanges to fall off as a result of the outlawing of pool operations, but expressed the opinion that swings upward and downward will continue "when conditions are right."

Sinclair Is Happy Man.

The most-talked-about candidate for public office in many months, Mr. Sinclair came away from the Roosevelt estate obviously a happy man tonight. It was equally apparent, although the meeting was strictly "off the record," that he was convinced he and the New Deal are traveling the same road.

Sitting in his shirt sleeves, Mr. Sinclair told his interviewers in glowing terms of the President and his epic plan for California. He is a slight, spry man, bronzed and white-haired, who has spent a lifetime campaigning for Socialism. But not one word would he say of what he discussed with the President, beyond this story:

"The President said that he had only one grudge against me. That was, that when he was young, his mother read 'The Jungle' aloud to him at the breakfast table. I asked him, 'and it spoiled your lamb chop?' and he sail 'yes.'"

"The Jungle," one of Mr. Sinclair's first books, concerned the condition of workers in the stockyards and packing plants.

Parley Held Significant.

Unusual significance was attached to the conference because of the implications of a Socialist campaigning as a New Dealer. Furthermore, the President had set the meeting apart by decreeing that "politics" was not to be discussed, thus seeking to prevent the White House from becoming involved.

Mr. Sinclair entered into the arrangement with a will, and went a step further by interpreting the injunction to mean that nothing said between the two was to be repeated. He explained that he had no desire "to use the President's home to exploit my own ideas," or to cause him any "embarrassment."

Questioned about the latter, he said, "If I did, the President concealed it very well."

Interrupting his conversation with wary looks in the direction of Marvin H. McIntyre, Presidential secretary, in whose apartment the interview was held, Mr. Sinclair said that the EPIC plan last year was "a projection of the New Deal." But since then, he added, "the New Deal has caught up with it."

This he explained with the statement that the Federal Government at present is making mattresses in Ohio, stockings in Massachusetts and canned products in California—all "production for use" as contemplated by his "end poverty in California" platform. He added:

"The Administration is putting it into effect in the District of Columbia. They have 80,000 people dependent there; and they are putting them out to grow food and they are putting them into factories, in and around the District, and they are arranging a system of exchange of food and manufactured articles."

Calls President "Marvel."

Concerning the President, whom he described as a "marvel," Mr. Sinclair said:

"I told him I had met two Presidents of the United States. The other was Teddy, and I don't know which is the franker. That isn't intended for a pun. That pleased him very much."

As for his campaign, he said he was "naturally of a confident nature." Asked if he is counting on the support of Senators Hiram Johnson and William Gibbs McAdoo, of California, Mr. Sinclair replied that he was "hopeful but have no knowledge—I intend to see Senator Johnson as soon as I get back."

Mr. Sinclair took occasion to pay his respects to former President Hoover for his article attacking the New Deal, with the statement, "the rights of the millionaires are the ones being snowed under—the millionaires are all he ever thought about."

Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, for criticism of the EPIC plan. He said it was "unfortunate" that Mr. Thomas had not taken the trouble "to find out what the EPIC plan really is."

After his visit, Mr. Sinclair hastened to New York City to make a radio talk and see Postmaster General James A. Farley. When asked the subject of that conference, he said:

"I want to talk about whatever Mr. Farley wants to talk about. I want to make his acquaintance and to assure him of my loyalty to the New Deal."

From New York he will go to Washington to confer with Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and other officials.

Confers With President

UPTON SINCLAIR, Socialist writer and Democratic nominee for Governor of California, as he arrived in New York en route to Hyde Park to confer with President Roosevelt. He will visit Washington today.

Sinclair Due Today For Parley on Relief

(Associated Press.)

Federal relief funds already are being used in a number of States as Upton Sinclair wants to employ them on a gigantic scale in California.

The Democratic nominee for Governor of California—who conferred at Hyde Park yesterday with President Roosevelt—intends to confer with relief officials here today regarding the use of Federal funds to help finance his "epic" plan of unemployment relief.

Sinclair wants to use the bulk of Federal relief money to buy or rent factories in which he says the unemployed could support themselves. State relief administrations so far have been permitted to use Federal funds in only a limited field of industrial activity.

The most extensive enterprise in this direction has been in connection with the slaughter of cattle from the drought area and its distribution among the needy.

The State relief administrations are required to pay prevailing wages on all work relief projects, and not less than 30 cents an hour if the prevailing rate for common labor is below that.

Local forces are required in many instances to pay part or all of the cost of materials used in relief enterprises.

Spokesmen for the Federal Relief Administration repeated yesterday they desired to take as many persons as possible off direct relief and give them work relief jobs.

They estimated between 1,500,000 and 1,750,000 persons were employed on work relief projects, which range from cattle processing and mattress making to road building, playgrounds improvements, construction of lakes in the drought area and the like.

Latest available figures indicated 1,399,000 families and 81,300 single persons in the United States were supported by work relief of various kinds during June.

In the same month, 2,709,000 families and 458,000 single persons were on direct relief. The proportion of work relief has been increasing every month.

Contract Is Let For Anacostia Junior School

City Acts After Long Delay, Accepting $388,010 Bid.

The long-delayed contract for construction of Anacostia Junior High School was awarded yesterday by the District Commissioners to Charles H. Tompkins Co., Inc., for $388,010. The Tompkins corporation was the lowest bidder.

Work has been delayed for more than two years because the commissioners refused to order construction until they were assured the building would be completed.

An appropriation of $150,000 was made by Congress at the same time it authorized District officials to contract for its completion. This is the normal procedure in providing for schools and other public buildings in the annual District appropriation bill.

Preparations of plans took several months and when the Commissioners were about to advertise for bids Budget Bureau officials notified them they would not approve inclusion in the next appropriation bill the amount required to complete the building.

Consequently, District officials withdrew the advertisement for bids and shelved the project until Congress, in the last session, appropriated the full amount.

Bids were opened several weeks ago, but all were rejected because the lowest was more than the total appropriated. Plans were revised and new bids called for.

Eight Are Sent To U. S. Prison

Jail and Reformatory Long Termers Leave for Atlanta.

Eight long-term District prisoners were sent from the District Jail and Reformatory to the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta yesterday.

Their terms ranged from 3 to 7 years to 30 years and their crimes ranged from robbery to second-degree murder.

James H. Harley, convicted of grand larceny and sentenced to prison for from three to seven years, was one of those sent to the penitentiary. Harley recently escaped from the District Jail through the skylight.

John D. Washington, convicted of second-degree murder and sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment, and Hank Allen, also convicted of second-degree murder and sentenced to 30 years, were the other two men sent from the jail. Allen is wanted by Richmond, Va., police, from whom he escaped.

Arthur W. O. Leigh, second-degree murder, 30 years; Bernard L. Downey, robbery and escape, 12 years; Elzear John Howder, robbery, 15 years; Walter Jordon, robbery, 10 years, and Lawrence Boston, robbery, 10 years, were sent from the reformatory.

Edward McGlynn, chief clerk of the jail, was in charge of the journey, accompanied by Guard Best, Burdette and Timms.

Bond Theft Suspect Held for Nashville

Chicago, Sept. 4 (AP).—Jack Wellborn, alias J. O. Williams, 29, today appeared to have lost his fight against a return to Nashville, Tenn., to answer a charge of forgery of $136,000 in county bonds.

Chief Justice Frederic R. de Young of the Illinois Supreme Court refused to grant a writ of supersedeas delaying his return pending appeal of a criminal court decision overruling habeas corpus proceedings. Authorities at Nashville were asked to send back their messenger, who had returned pending outcome of the legal contest, to get Wellborn.

Roper Hails U. S. Trade Recovery

Lauds Government Policies in Alabama Talk.

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 4 (AP). The Nation has already put behind it "that zero hour of nameless terror which gripped the masses of our people as we sank deeper into the quicksands of economic disaster in the early spring of 1932," Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper said in an address here today.

Speaking on "Trade and Commerce in Perspective," the Secretary praised the Roosevelt Administration's ecomonic policies throughout.

"In a year and a half our economic gains have been greater than the corresponding losses of the year and a half preceding March 4, 1933, a condition never before recorded in our history," the Secretary said.

LOW FIRST COST plus . . . a 112-inch wheelbase

V-8 PERFORMANCE

NO wonder Washington acclaims the Ford V-8! Delivered prices for this completely modern car are now lower than at any time this year.

Consider what those prices include—a V-type, 8-cylinder engine—this powerful, dependable engine (and no other) is standard regardless of what model Ford you buy. You get a 112-inch wheelbase with roominess that is possible only with a compact V-type engine. You get complete equipment without extra cost. De Luxe models actually give you Safety glass throughout, two matched-tone horns, twin cowl lamps, colored wheels, cigar lighter and ash receptacles, fenders matching body, two sun visors, and 14 gallons of gas.

Then, to low first cost, V-8 performance and expensive-car roominess, add low Ford V-8 upkeep costs. These costs—for gasoline, for oil and for maintenance—are lower than for any car Ford has ever built.

No wonder Washington owners are saying, "My Ford V-8 has everything!" No wonder wherever smartness counts, but economy is considered also, people are choosing the Ford V-8! Ask your nearest Ford dealer for a demonstration car. Test its performance, roominess and economy for yourself.

The TRUTH about Wheelbase: The Ford V-8 comes to you in only one wheelbase—a full 112 inches. There is no doubt or question about this. When we refer to the Ford V-8, we always mean this car in this size . . . And it is important to realize—in addition—that because the V-8 is a compact engine, every Ford has added expensive-car roominess—V-8 construction saves engine space which becomes usable body space.

The TRUTH about Delivered Prices: At no time this year have Ford V-8 prices been raised. Instead, they have been reduced. When choosing a car you should consider and compare delivered prices—not merely advertised F. O. B. prices. And you should consider what equipment the delivered prices include.

The TRUTH about Equipment: The following equipment is included on all Ford De Luxe Models without extra charge. It is part of the delivered price. Safety glass throughout; two matched-tone horns; twin cowl lamps; 14 gallons of gas in tank; colored wheels; cigar lighter and ash receptacles; fenders matching body; two adjustable sun visors.

The TRUTH about Economy of Operation: The New Ford V-8 costs less to operate than any other Ford ever built. It is extremely economical on gasoline and oil and its upkeep is slight also. You get Ford V-8 performance, faster pickup, an ability to get places without driving strain, but you pay no extra running costs.

Topsy-Turvy Politics.

Politics is always fraught with anomalies and contradictions. Shifting scenes and changing colors (of opinion) are what make the game interesting. It is true, as Pope says, that:

Old politicians chew on wisdom past,
And totter on in business to the last.

But in the "tottering" one may find more strange quirks than are exhibited by all the other professions combined.

Labor Day brought forth an unusual crop of political speeches, sufficient at least to bewilder the public, not only because of the diversity of views expressed, but because of the strange sources of familiar homilies. In California Senator Johnson assailed his Republican colleagues for assailing the New Deal. In Chicago Mayor LaGuardia of New York, former Republican member of Congress, laid aside his onerous municipal problems to say a few disparaging words about the Federal Constitution and to demand a new social order. Upton Sinclair, Socialist who captured the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in California, and who has been repudiated by the Socialists and old line Democrats alike, was en route to Washington, seeking Federal money to carry out his Utopian program.

Former President Hoover's pen and Senator Borah's more facile tongue were enlisted in the cause of "liberalism," while the voice of Frances Perkins, New Deal Secretary of Labor, was raised in defense of business profits. Then, as if to cap the climax of political incongruities, Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, leader of the forces advocating monetary inflation, piously referred to himself as a conservative.

It is enough to make one's head swim. Has the world of politics really gone topsy-turvy, or did all the Labor Day speakers suddenly decide to take Shakespeare's advice?—

Get thee glass eyes;
And, like a scurvy politician, seem

End The "Blind Bars!"

Purely as a matter of sanitation the argument for the abolishment of "blind bars" in the District carries considerable weight. In fact, there appear to be far more reasons why the mixing of drinks should be in plain view of patrons than there are reasons why the process should be hidden in cramped quarters. If the argument for "blind bars" were carried to its logical conclusion, then the myriad liquor stores of the District should be compelled to keep their wares in cupboards away from the view of prospective customers.

Whatever reason lay behind the ruling in the first place, experience has proved it distasteful to a majority of patrons. Testimony has been offered that patrons often do not get what they order, and that not infrequently fruit which has been left in a cocktail glass is salvaged for use in another order. This would be eliminated if mixing bars, with clean glasses, the liquor and other ingredients in full view were allowed. Hiding the bartender and his wares smacks of hypocrisy, anyway, and has no salutary effect upon the open and above board consumption of wine or liquor in a public place.

Sentimentally, of course, everyone who has divested himself of the secret drinking habits of the prohibition era would like to see the bartender at work. A bartender is no longer a criminal. He was called back from obscurity by the voice of the people and almost everywhere, except in Washington, may now be seen at his profession, honestly and openly. The District, however, by its strange ruling keeps alive the old speakeasy atmosphere. Any day now, if the ruling is not changed for the better, they'll be serving the chianti in coffee cups again!

Another General Booth.

Evangeline Booth has been elected to lead the Salvation Army, and again the family name of the founder of this world-wide and universally respected charitable organization is to appear at the head of its general staff. The result of Monday's election in London will be applauded by everybody except, perhaps, the defeated minority.

That minority never made public any argument which justified its opposition. Its sole audible complaint was that the choice of Evangeline Booth would tend to create a "Booth dynasty." Such a chance is small; but, were it large, why should it cause any disquiet? Why should there not be a dynastic leadership for the Salvation Army—if the dynasty provides good leaders? The sole legitimate question to be asked about a candidate for that leadership is the question of the highest capability.

William Booth founded his army in noisome Whitechapel and led it, against physical opposition and bitter ridicule, into every corner of the civilized world, into the esteem of the great, into the hearts of the wretched. The one-time Nottingham pawnbroker's clerk succeeded because he had a genius for both exhortation and organization, because he could look through bodies and see souls, because he possessed a fiery faith in God and man, because no hardships could shake his belief in heaven and because no betrayals could diminish his conviction that any human being can be raised from any depth.

Those qualities are also qualities of His oldest daughter and 1934 successor. Her past has demonstrated it.

"The Challenge To Liberty."

The excerpts from Herbert Hoover's forthcoming book, as printed in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post, fall into two divisions. This is natural, for we are told that this preliminary fare constitutes only "a portion of the introduction," and a small part of the body of the text. But it is somewhat unjust to the former President to judge the quality of his political philosophy on the scissors and paste job here revealed.

With that reservation it must be said that there is much which is both platitudinous and meaningless in the former President's observations on the philosophy of individual liberty and its relation to the state. It sounds well to say that "liberty is an endowment from the Creator to every individual man or woman upon which no power, whether economic or political, can encroach, and not even the Government may deny." But every jail throughout the land refutes the validity of the assertion.

Similarly, when Mr. Hoover cites the graves at Appomattox and other battlefields as shrines dedicated to the preservation of liberty, he neglects to confront the basic issue of whose liberty. The Civil War, fought to enforce the will of a central government on seceding States, is a poor illustration to use to denounce Federal encroachment today, unless the intimation is that only those who wore the gray are being honored. And the Indian doubtless has a very different conclusion from ourselves on whether the graves of white men along the old Western frontier cover those who "died that the human spirit might be free."

There is happily in the United States today no real difference of opinion as to the desirability of human liberty and its preservation from regimentation. There is great difference of opinion as to the most effective way to preserve a maximum of liberty for all in a society so complex that freedom for one means servitude for another, and so halting in its economic workings that to many the very name of liberty has become a pure abstraction. In considering the point it is well to remember Anatole France's cutting reference to that majestic equality of the law which forbids rich and poor alike to sleep under bridges, steal bread and sneak into circus tents.

But when Mr. Hoover turns from philosophizing to a critical consideration of the extent and bearing of the restrictions on individual freedom being applied by the state at present, he is on firmer ground. This is not so much because these restrictions have contracted the liberties of some as because they have failed to expand the liberties of others to anything like the extent which such a sacrifice demands. To a restriction at one point which brings liberation at others Mr. Hoover makes plain that he has no hostility. But what, he properly and cogently asks, is the value of a regimentation which not merely brings no accretion of freedom elsewhere, but by its nature calls for more and more regimentation in a futile effort to make effective that which has gone before.

To the fact that the country actually confronts this progressive limitation, not on individual but on human liberties, Mr. Hoover is inviting the attention of his fellow citizens. He perhaps does not adequately realize that the problem is inherent in the character of our civilization, and is far from a superficial political matter. But others will take up the thinking at the stage where he has left it. They will do so because they soon will have to do so.

A Serious Indictment.

NRA policies have never been more sharply indicted than is the case in the joint letter of resignation submitted by the entire National code authority for the retail fuel industry. That governmental organization is accused of being vacillating in policy, of undermining a code upon which the industry and NRA officials had previously agreed, of failure to enforce the retail fuel code and of frustrating its operation through delay and inefficiency. Coming from a code authority, chosen because of its faith in the original objectives of NRA, these charges acquire unusual significance.

Complaints of the retail fuel code authority seem to fall into two general categories: First, the requirement that minimum prices—which are worked out in about 700 different trade areas—must be submitted to Washington for approval is regarded as an impossible subordination of local autonomy to centralized control. Second, the general policies of NRA are in a state of such confusion "that there is no hope for effective administration or enforcement" of the codes. Recent orders emanating from the White House and the current reorganization muddle in the NRA tend to support at least the latter count.

Several days ago The Post called attention to the fact that the NRA is moving away from the policy of industrial self-regulation. Here is another instance in which officials apparently are trying to modify a code by fiat instead of by agreement among the parties concerned. The tendency is toward arbitrary control from Washington. As former President Hoover points out in his current magazine article, regimentation may involve the sacrifice of liberty even when it is fair and efficient. When such control is undertaken by an organization of shifting personnel, confused objectives and contradictory policies, the effects may be not merely regrettable, but ruinous.

In the view of the retail fuel code authority, the agreement between that industry and the Government was originally constructive. But now the NRA has changed its position, making the code a "futile and unworkable thing"—to use the code authority's words—over the protest of its own administrative agency in this field. "If the fundamentals of a code are to change with changes of viewpoint and changes of personnel who utterly lack understanding of the problems of the industry," the letter of resignation continues, "then this is truly a government of men and not a government of law. * * * To continue to attempt to function under these conditions is impossible."

Regardless of the selfish motives which doubtless enter into these accusations, it is all too evident that the NRA is losing prestige for want of a consistent and reliable administrative policy. Industry is suffering the consequences of internal bickering and confused maneuvering within the recovery organization. Unless immediate steps are taken to put NRA on a more solid footing, it will progressively forfeit the confidence of the business community.

The Taxation Problem.

New taxation probably will be one of the major issues in the next session of Congress. It is apparent that the budget for the fiscal year 1936, which is already arousing concern in the Treasury Department, can not be balanced without an enormous increase in revenue. The resignation of Lewis W. Douglas as Director of the Budget is only one of many indications that the Administration's spending program will continue. Congress will be confronted by the issue of raising more money or sanctioning another huge deficit.

President Roosevelt's desire to stop increasing the National debt during the current fiscal year is well known. In forecasting, last January, an unprecedented deficit for the first two years of his Administration, the President committed himself to the objective of a balanced budget in 1935. But new obstacles have arisen, including the drought and a lag in the recovery program. There is an inclination in some official quarters to postpone once more the establishment of an equilibrium between revenue and expenditures. In the last analysis, of course, this decision will have to be made by Congress. That body will be directly confronted by the issue because of the expiration next year of levies that are now yielding approximately $500,000,000.

New taxes would be, in some respects, a brake on recovery. But it is questionable whether they would be a greater deterrent to economic activity than continued anxiety resulting from deficit-financiering. Soon or late we shall have to turn to the reduction instead of the happy-go-lucky accumulation of debt. And the bulk of the necessary revenue must be raised through taxation. In fact, higher taxes are one of the few presumably certain results of the New Deal.

Congress has tried several times during the last three years to balance the budget by enacting new tax laws. Each new statute has been a disappointment. Some industries as well as individuals have been subjected to high levies, but these have been too restrictive in their application to produce a maximum of revenue. Any new effort to put the New Deal on a pay-as-you-go basis now seems to foreshadow adoption of the general sales tax, regardless of the theoretical injustice ascribed to such a levy. As the budget begins to take definite form, including, as it undoubtedly will, vast sums for relief, the choice between a general impost of this kind and further increase in the National debt will become more clear-cut. Paying the fiddler becomes an embarrassing necessity, even when extravagant outlays are intended to serve a worthy purpose.

At Eighth and Chestnut.

Green's is going!

That is news, and sad news, to newspapermen throughout the country. For Green's in Philadelphia was par excellence the American newspaperman's hotel.

Since the days of "The" Centennial, as Philadelphians still call the 1876 Exposition, Green's has held its proud pre-eminence. An astonishing number of newspapermen have worked "on" Philadelphia newspapers, and Green's was for each of them his second home. Nearly every newspaperman has at least stopped in Philadelphia, and, if Green's was not the hotel at which he registered, it was sure to be the hotel to which he would be taken for refreshment by his friends among the local fraternity.

Many are the historic "beats" which originated over a foaming amber glass on that long piece of mahogany at Eighth and Chestnut streets—and those which did not originate there were there again and again recounted. In the days when newspaper "fakes" were shockingly regarded with laughter and lenience, a legion of the merriest and most mendacious rose from the depths of Green's famous Toms and Jerries. Doubtless Green's was occasionally patronized by paying-guests distinguished in other walks of life; but at Green's the fourth estate ever had the preference.

And now the Philadelphia Zoning Board of Adjustment—whatever that collection of vandals may be—is going to let the landmark be destroyed to make way for an open-air parking lot! The most hard-boiled copy reader will put a sentimental "head" on that "story"—for the sake of old times and companions dead and buried, and for the enlightment of a callow generation. But a whole "front page" could never convey to lay readers what those three words convey to the craft:

"Green's is going!"

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

AN ARROW-SHAPED German army kept piercing closer to the forts of Paris. The seat of the French government was moved from Paris to Bordeaux. England issued a call for more troops. Russian troops took Lemberg, capturing a large supply of war stores, and continued in pursuit of the fleeing Austrians.

CARDINAL GIACOMO DELLA CHIESA, Archbishop of Bologna, Italy, was elected Supreme Pontiff of the Catholic Church on September 3, in succession to Pope Pius X, who died August 20. The coronation of the new Pope was set for September 6, and he was to reign under the name of Benedict XV.

For Merit Only.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: When your correspondent, S. Magruder Simpson, recalls that the present violations of the merit principle in public service have good Republican precedents, he follows a pernicious tangent which has unfortunately diverted much needed criticism of the spoils system.

Patently, there is nothing about a party label which places its bearer upon a higher moral plane than that occupied by his political antagonists. Of course, there have been abuses on both sides. But the situation at present is just this: Good government is being aborted by a system of choosing public servants, not on the basis of ability, but as a reward or an inducement to partisan service. It will not help to answer that it has always been thus. The only constructive answer is to consider ways and means of removing the evil.

How infrequently a discussion of civil service leads to this constructive analysis. The discussion all too frequently ends in the conclusion of Mr. Simpson—that the Republicans were just as bad or worse, and will have other opportunities in the future—or that the civil service was not effective, anyway, in eliminating political preference.

The first of these conclusions is certainly true, and the second may be. But they get us nowhere. Our thought should be given to an improvement in the effectiveness of public service. Indisputably, this can be accomplished by placing employment on the basis of merit only. That the Republicans were also wicked only implies that the spoils system is evil. That the civil service is not effective in removing politics from public service suggests only the need of improvement in civil service legislation and administration. This need can be fulfilled only by recognizing it and not by pursuing arguments which lead away and divert attention from the real problem. E. E. B.

Possum Hunters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Doing lip service to the profit motive is coming to be a favorite pastime with Administration spokesmen, it seems.

Of course, not even the most radical planners can succeed in any campaign to eradicate profit as the basis of industry among a free people. But much can be done to distort profits and upset the industrial applecart in so doing; and, before it can put the profit motive in good order again, the Administration must withdraw definitely from the attempt to set up "industrial self-government" on a quota basis with voting rights involved that are apportioned on the basis of production quotas. Industrial "democracy," forsooth!

Can it be seriously supposed that the brain trust has figured out a way to eliminate competitive profits and yet preserve the services of the profit motive as a balancing stimulus in industry? Or is it now acknowledged that competitive, marginal elimination, and not Governmental allotment, is the correct method for reducing production? And that an artificial "parity" of prices is also unsound and the Agricultural Adjustment act should be repealed? Has Senator Byrd been barking up an empty tree?

Did NRA admit all along that prosperity goes with high wages or high prices only when they result from an increasing proportion of profits (capital income) in the total income of the community? And just where do human rights and property rights part company, anyway?

Economics seems to me
Like hunting possums with a pup;
There are many trees to bark
But very few with possums up!

The Administration has been hunting with pups; and now the Liberty League Hunt Club seems about to enter the field with a pack of hounds that have lost their last scent!

Henry George.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The old saying that a prophet is not without honor save in his own country was illustrated in the career of Henry George, who was born in Philadelphia on September 2, 1839, and became more famous in England and Scotland than he had been at home. Indeed, it came to be commonly assumed that Henry George was an Englishman.

He left school at an early age; went to sea before the mast; learned the printers' trade; went to California in the early days; was inspired to write "Progress and Poverty," and spread the philosophy which, for want of a better name, was called the single tax, by lectures, essays, sermons, magazine articles and other publications. He ran for Mayor of New York City in 1886, when Theodore Roosevelt was also a candidate, and again in 1897, when he died a few days before the election.

Some 40 years ago, the writer asked Mrs. Henry George for her choice of a quotation for his birthday and she sent the following, "If I go this night where I may over the civilized world, I would find men who would gladly clasp hands with me—if it has been given to me to help forward a great movement—it is through no merit of mine; it is not from my energy; it is not from my ability—it is from the simple fact that, seeing a great truth, I swore to follow it."—Speech in Sidney, Australia, March, 1890.

Again: Esperanto.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "Enciklopedio de Esperanto," of which the first volume has quite recently been published in Budapest, Hungary, says that the International Labor Office, to which President Roosevelt recently gave adhesion, has published its bulletin in Esperanto since 1921. It was found that in no other practical way could the investigations and comparisons of labor conditions throughout the world be made available to more than 40 countries. A printing in one language—Esperanto—sufficed to cover the great majority of these countries.

President Roosevelt in affixing his signature was acting in accordance with a joint resolution of both houses of Congress just before adjournment. It is believed that this action will stimulate the interest in Esperanto, already considerable in Washington.

The Constitution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: September 17 will be Constitution Day. I wish you would publish on that day a copy of the United States Constitution, as many of your readers have never read it nor do they possess a copy. Years ago when I was a child in Washington we had to learn it "by heart," but I suppose it is too old-fashioned now.

I think you would be serving our glorious country and the many who read your fine paper if you publish the full text on that day.

"Giving Place to New."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is my first visit to Washington in ten years—and how things have changed, both physically and morally. The social, political and routine life have all altered. Many things that were regarded as necessaries are gone; perhaps new and better things have taken their place, but old customs have changed, and it is difficult to adapt oneself to the new ones. Pennsylvania avenue was once a bee-hive of activity; now it is a rendezvous for the unemployed; but the unemployed seem to be better off than the unemployed in those days, so that this may be merely the growing pains of progress.

I have been here three weeks. The first week I saw a beer truck delivering beer on Sunday. The next Sunday I saw a gasoline launch dragged through the streets on a trailer. The next Sunday I saw a wholesale liquor truck deliver its wares to the railroad station. This could never happen in the old days. Perhaps this, too, is merely a sign of progress and merely shows the advantage of liberal liquor and Sunday laws over the old moral standards. G. E.

Where's the Bear?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note in The Post of August 31 a letter written by Mr. W. E. Ryan regarding Sam Patch's jump. As a good Rhode Islander, and not an old one either, I have read a little of my local history and can set Mr. Ryan right.

Sam Patch was a native of Pawtucket, R. I., and made his first jump from the roof of the mill into the river just below Pawtucket Falls. None of the accounts of his exploits which I have read say anything about a tame bear jumping with him. I have seen an old woodcut showing his first jump, and no bear is in evidence. He made two jumps into the falls of the Genesee River, the first successful—the second, some years later, ended his career. PAUL N. FRANCIS.

Has He Stopped a War?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an average American and a potential soldier in the event that our country is involved in a war, I wish to make known my most profound gratitude to Adolph Hitler for his avoidance of starting a European war after the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria.

The bloody event in Vienna that sent the "little Napoleon" to eternity created a situation similar to the one which followed the assassination of another Austrian at Sarajevo in 1914. A world war followed that Sarajevo tragedy, with Germany under the Kaiser the butt of all blame. But when the entire world expected that a misstep on the part of Hitler would precipitate a European conflagration, the present head of the German Reich kept his calm counsel.

Hitler prevented a war. That is a great accomplishment. The world should be grateful to him. All lovers of peace should thank him. As an American, I take off my hat to Herr Hitler—and I am not an American of German descent, but a simple American who loves his country. JOSEPH G. McKENNA.

The Post Impressionist

A Green Old Age.

Postoffice, Wednesday.

ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON, profoundly remarked that "the old order changeth, giving place to new." And we ourselves have frequently noticed this tendency. The old order has kept on changing ever since Tennyson's time. There are moments when we believe that it must have been changing for a long time before. There are even moments when we suspect that change has been its habit always and that, since there is a limit to finite variety, the old order will soon exhaust its possible changes and have to begin going through the list again. Nor can it do that too fast to alarm us, if it will only bring gack Green's Hotel to the Quaker City.

Dispatches announced that this 65-years' old rendezvous of newspapermen, now for some years in decline, was to be torn down to make way for an open-air parking lot. We immediately planned a sentimental Column in memoriam—and, behold, among the copy for today's editorials, we find that one of the rapid-fire editorial-writers has memorialized the place to the extent of six short paragraphs! He has exhausted our tears. All we can do is to supply a few of those details which "lend an air of verisimilitude to an otherwise bald and unconvincing narrative."

* * *

That lot at Philadelphia's Eighth and Chestnut streets had a history long before Ralph Paine and the other war-correspondents of the Spanish War foregathered there. While Franklin was a printer, the Shippen house stood upon the site. From it went forth pretty Peggy Shippen to marry Benedict Arnold, and to it came George Washington as a visitor. On the day when, three blocks down-street, a certain bell "proclaimed liberty to all mankind," there must have been a dinner-party in celebration of the event at the home of the Shippens.

Anyhow, in celebration of the event, Philadelphia eventually held the Centennial Exhibition of 1876, and the proximity of the Shippen lot to Independence Hall made it a good "stand" for Pete Dooner to set up a beer-saloon. And Peter had a prince of barmen in one Thomas H. Green—and Tom eventually started a hotel there, and all the lawyers from the nearby courthouse, and all the newspapermen from the nearby newspaper-offices, and all sorts of artists and literary folk, native and visiting, were soon friends and patrons of Tom.

* * *

Walt Whitman always stopped in at Green's bar when he came to Philadelphia to see his publisher. Whitman took his beer and sandwich near the end of the bar devoted to oysters.

One evening he observed a young reporter sprinkling drops of some red liquid over an "order of half raw."

"That's pretty stuff," Whitman remarked. "What is it?"

The reporter said it was an innocous sauce called tabasco. He poured a tablespoonful into a whisky-glass for the poet to taste. Whitman tossed it off, but his eulogy was more vigorous than poetic.

* * *

Late of an afternoon, years after, a goggled Englishman from India called at the Seventh and Chestnut street offices of the Philadelphia Press and showed some short stories to Talcott Williams, who later became the first dean of the Pulitzer School of Journalism. The Englishman, we like to believe, was told that he would be given a decision over a dinner at Green's. So it would be there that Williams said to him:

"I like your work, and your price is just our column-rate. But my chief feels these stories are too strong meat for our audience—Mr. Kipling."

* * *

It was probably at the bar at Green's that Stephen Crane poured libation in honor of one of his first and rare pieces of good fortune. For all the Press staff went to Green's as soon as they quit work—or, indeed, when any excuse offered—and the Press, through Sunday Editor Melville Phillips, was among the very few newspapers to buy pre-book-publication rights to "The Red Badge of Courage." That time, however, Talcott Williams scored—perhaps too heavily. He wrote an editorial warning the paper's subscribers that whoso neglected to read this serial missed a new classic.

* * *

Certainly Richard Harding Davis went to Green's while he was R. H. Davis, reporter. At Green's has often been told the history of his Fourth of July assignment.

The city-editor thought Davis could write "a pretty fair descriptive story" and sent him to cover a display of fireworks in Fairmount Park. After he had been back for half an hour, the city editor asked him for his "copy."

"I haven't any," said Davis. "Just as the exhibition was to have started, something exploded and killed a lot of people, so the whole affair was called off."

* * *

Newspapermen ate at Green's—when they had the price. They slept there when their morning assignments were too early or too late to warrant going home. One of them, Bruner Kauffman, writes us: "Handed down by newspapermen to their 'bub' listeners, the story goes that, at the start of his career, Tom Green said, 'The way to succeed in the hotel business is to mind your Three B's—bread, butter and beds.' And nobody ever ate better bread and butter, or slept in a more comfortable bed, than he got at Tom's."

* * *

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

An American Trait.

APPROACHING RUSSIA—Dear Aleck: I am of the opinion that the Soviet government owes Prof. Tugwell and those others in the Administration at Washington who have been associated with Communism a free trip to Russia, with stops at the best hotels and a general good time thrown in. They have made it a place of interest, I am satisfied, more than any highly organized travel bureau could do.

BARGERON

I was told before I left Washington—at the Soviet Embassy—that American travel to Russia this year was comparatively heavy, that it had enjoyed a greater proportionate increase than that of any other European country. I am now fully prepared to believe this.

On this boat, primarily a freighter and carrying only 85 passengers, there are 52 Americans, 37 of whom are women, making their first trip to the country. Some came direct from the United States, others got on the boat at Copenhagen and still others at Helsingfors. Inquiry among them develops that none have any mission or business or any particular purpose in visiting the country. They simply want to see it because it has been talked about so much at Washington. There is a scattering of school teachers among the women's contingent, but they make no profession of going over to study the country. As a matter of fact only 12 of the 52 intend to travel in Russia. The others are "on tour" and intend to return on this same boat four days after their arrival.

They are a study. Strangely enough, nearly all of them have silly apprehensions about the place, some quite seriously entertained and others more or less held lightly. The weirdest stories are passed about the boat and fairly generally swallowed.

* * * *

Most of them, I am satisfied, are convinced that they won't get enough to eat in the country, that they won't be able to bathe, that they are very likely to get knocked in the head by some roving criminal. But if anything, this increases their curiosity about the country. I am afraid they will be downright disappointed if they don't suffer or have any unpleasant experience of some kind.

None of them are particularly interested in the form of government of the Communists or whether there is any foundation for the charge that our Administration in Washington is going communistic. In fact, I find that generally speaking, they have paid no attention to what is going on in Washington except that Mr. Roosevelt has put a mighty lot of people to work and seems to have plenty of money, far more than Mr. Hoover had.

In short, they have simply heard that Russia is a very tough sort of a place and they are going there—not particularly to see, because the brief visits most of them are making will not permit them to see very much. In Leningrad they intend to see the palace in which the czar and his family lived and the place where that man Rasputin was killed. Oh, they will see the museums, too, and in so doing they expect to lose all their clothes and their money if not landed in jail.

* * * *

It reminds me, of the Wall street bomb explosion several years ago. In the course of their investigation of it the police announced that they had uncovered a plot to bomb the sub-treasury building at a certain time on a particular day.

When that particular time on that particular day came the police had difficulty getting through the crowd that had formed. The California and Flordia boosters ought to get on to this quirk of our psychology and quit denying their earthquakes and hurricanes. They should advertise them instead—like Russia. For we Americans crave our excitement.

To keep in the character, the Russians should knock at least a few of us on this trip in the head.

Randolph Lewis Dies; Veteran Film Writer

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 4 (AP).—The death of Randolph C. Lewis, veteran scenario writer, at a hospital here Monday was disclosed today by friends.

Lewis, 72 years old, worked years ago as a newspaperman in New York and Philadelphia. He once was editor of the New York Herald magazine. Lewis went to England to collaborate with Rudyard Kipling when the latter's "Without Benefit of Clergy" was adapted to films.

Tough Luck Dogs Farmer, Climaxed As House Burns

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 4 (AP).—Joseph Sosalla's farmhouse burned today and though the $7,000 loss is heavy to him it only climaxes a week of travail.

Gravely ill, his wife, Theresa, was taken to a hospital Wednesday. On Saturday Sosalla was accused of larceny as bailee. The same day his six daughters, from 5 to 12 in age, were injured in a motor accident.

Alone in his house, Sosalla groomed himself today for his court appearance, pressing his trousers. Perhaps, he says, he left the iron connected, for a few hours later flames burst out. Neighbors saved only a few sticks of furniture.

U. S., Belgium To Map Trade Pact in October

(Associated Press.)

Reaching out to recapture lost European trade, the State Department announced yesterday that negotiations would begin immediately for a new reciprocal trade agreement with Belgium.

Open hearings on the treaty will be held in Washington on October 29, closely following hearings on proposed agreements with Brazil and Haiti.

The trade agreement negotiations are designed to give further impetus to increasing American sales abroad. Department of Commerce figures made public yesterday showed that during the first seven months of 1934 American exports amounted to $1,197,856,915, as compared with $813,438,098 during the same period in 1933.

Decline in Imports.

Total exports in July were $161,786,571 against $144,108,767 in July, 1933. Imports during the same month were $127,341,977 against $142,980,034 last year.

Decline of Belgian-American trade and Belgium's recognition of the trade decreasing effects of tariff barriers were said to be the chief reasons for beginning negotiations with that nation, the first European country with which an agreement will be concluded.

In 1929, the peak year of American exports, goods valued at $114,854,492 were sold in Belgium, but by last year sales had dropped to $43,267,566. Imports from Belgium during the same period decreased from $74,047,843 to $23,163,235.

Belgium, the Netherland and Luxemburg are already signers of the Ouchy convention, which was designed to bring about modification of trade restrictions with other countries as well as among themselves.

Chief Exports Listed.

The chief American exports to Belgium are cotton, gasoline and other petroleum products, lard, wheat, oil cake, rice and other grains, leaf tobacco, copper, automobiles and trucks, typewriters, calculating machines and radios. The principal imports from Belgium are certain kinds of cotton manufactures, woven fabrics, diamonds, fertilizers, radium salts, furs, cement and glass.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States in its review of business affairs yesterday, said the Commerce Department's figures suggest the United States is having more than its proportionate share in the increase of physical volume of trade among all countries.

American exports during the half year, the chamber's report said, brought 55 per cent more dollars than in the corresponding period last year, while imports cost only 40 per cent more dollars and the physical volume of both increased.

Exports to Europe in July were approximately $6,000,000 less than in the same month last year and the State Department's negotiations with Belgium are the first to attempt to increase sales in that area. July sales in all other geographical divisions were larger than in 1933.

Evangeline Booth Describes U. S. Job As 'Bottlewasher'

London, Sept. 4 (AP).—Evangeline Booth, new supreme commander of the Salvation Army, sails Saturday for the United States to wind up her job there as "chief bottle-washer."

That was the term the 68-year-old daughter of the army's founder, chosen yesterday to succeed Gen. Edward J. Higgins as the organization's general for the next five years, laughingly applied to her 29 years' work in the United States, as she discussed her plans for the future.

The first woman to head the army and the heir to the Booth tradition of leadership said she would return to London about November 10 for her formal inauguration at Albert Hall.

Today she declared she planned no immediate changes in the army's organization, and has not yet considered her own plans for the future. She may, she said, visit Australia in 1935.

Virginia Girl, 16, Hunted on Coast

Arrest of Former 'Secret 6' Agent Starts Search.

Los Angeles, Sept. 4 (AP).—Search was started today for 16-year-old Ramona Winegar, of Galax, Va., wanted by the district attorney's office for questioning in connection with the arrest of Ed Dudley, former investigator for Chicago's "Secret Six," who, police said, attempted suicide yesterday.

Dudley was held in the Long Beach Jail on suspicion of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. Long Beach police said their fingerprint files show Dudley was wanted August 9 in Charleston, W. Va., on a charge of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

District attorney's investigators said Dudley was seen recently with Miss Winegar and that the girl's mother requested she be located here.

Boy, 3, Struck by Cab Reported Near Death

Struck by a taxi when he darted into the street from between two parked automobiles yesterday, 3-year-old Carl Wilson Oney, of 1107 Tenth street northwest, was reported near death in Emeregency Hospital last night.

Physicians said the boy suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries. He was playing near his home and ran into the street without looking, witnesses reported. The taxi driver was not held.

The Once Over

The Minor Consideration.

("With a solid Democratic organization we can work for those whose hearts beat for the common good and we will not be stampeded by the ridiculous question, 'Where is the money coming from?'"—From a speech by a Connecticut assemblyman.)

O, with zeal and zest
We will do our best
To make all lives bright and sunny,
And we need not care
How or when or where
We will get that thing called money.

With our hearts aglow
(Disregarding dough)
We will meet the wolf and slay it;
When the bill comes in
Let us simply grin,
Never caring how we pay it.

Side by side we'll fight
With our faces bright,
Spreading sunshine as it's needed,
And should some one say,
"Where's the cash to pay?"
We will never be stampeded.

Let us spend and spend
To the bitter end
As all earthly woes diminish;
Let us boo and hiss
Any cracks like this:
"Who will settle at the finish?"

When the times are bad
Let no man be sad;
We will spend in gayest fettle;
Vote for things galore
As we all ignore
How and when we have to settle.

Let us keep our head
When we're in the red
And distribute milk and honey,
Shouting, "We don't care"
To the question, "Where

Rooseveltian Soliloquy.

This is the question that's Thinning my hair;
What'll I do about
Upton Sinclair?

If I embrace him
The slams will be hot,
And I'll be roasted
If I do not.

Choosing a course is
Not such a snap;
Why did they put that
Guy in my lap?

It must make the faces of some of our high-pricer baby specialists red when they read Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe's simple story of how those Dionne quintuplets were born.

A justice in White Plains, N. Y., has come out for display advertising of foreclosure sales, instead of the traditional agate type notice carefully hidden away in far corners of the newspapers. He seems to think a better price might be secured for a house if more people knew about it.

From kings and queens
To franfurts
And beans.

The more one observed all those vacationists battling to gain an inch or two over some other automobile, the more one understood why they call it Labor Day.

70 Pierpoint Kin In Family Reunion

Woman, 90, of Alexandria, Oldest at Gathering.

Leesburg, Va., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Seventy descendants of Henry Pierpoint, who came to this country from France in 1635, held a reunion yesterday at the original ancestral home, near Paeonian Springs.

The ages of those present ranged from 4 to 90 years, with Mrs. Roberta Pierpoint, of Alexandria, Va., the oldest member of the family present. John Pierpoint, 88, came from Fairmont, W. Va., and others were present from Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Washington, D. C.

The National Pierpoint Association was formed and plans were made to celebrate the 300th anniversary of the coming of the first Pierpoint to America, which will be held on the last Sunday in August, 1935, at the ancestral home in Loudoun County. Arthur Pierpoint, son of O. J. Pierpoint, now lives on the place where six generations of Pierpoints have resided.

The Rev. William Pierpoint, of Martinsburg, W. Va., was elected president of the association; Mrs. Hermione Helmick, of Fairmont, W. Va., secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. William Pierpoint, of Martinsburg, W. Va., historian.

Marland Asks Hopkins To Maintain Relief

Representative E. W. Marland, Democratic nominee for Governor of Oklahoma, yesterday asked Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, to make no change for the present in the set-up in relief in Oklahoma, the Associated Press reported, saying he made that request because W. B. Pine, Republican gubernatorial nominee, had protested any change now.

Marland asserted Pine had said it would be "playing politics" to make a change prior to the general election. Marland was reported last week to have been offered actual responsibility for and authority over relief in Oklahoma even before the general election. Yesterday's conference, which lasted almost two hours, apparently gave confirmation.

Treasury Maps $500,000,000 In New Taxes

Sharp Rise in Deficit Leads Morgenthau to Seek Remedy.

(Associated Press.)

Treasury conferences will start today on how to suggest that Congress raise half a billion dollars in taxes.

In the initial discussion, Secretary Morgenthau will talk with his special assistant, Dr. Roswell Magill, who has just returned from a study of tax methods employed abroad.

In disclosing to reporters yesterday that the work here was beginning, Morgenthau declined to predict what kind of new taxes would be proposed to replace those which expire July 1, 1935.

Magill has been making a special study of English income taxes, which are much higher than those in this country. England, however, is free from complicated and overlapping local and State taxes.

Expenditures Soar.

The Treasury chief also expects to receive a report soon from Dr. Jacob Viner, another special assistant, who has been conducting a taxation and currency survey at the head of a corps of statisticians, composed largely of college professors and instructors.

This report will be scrutinized in connection with that of Magill and with the findings of L. H. Parker, expert of the joint Congressional Tax Committee. The object will be to draw up a program to provide large amounts for relief and other purposes.

Announcement of the conference with Magill followed publication of figures showing that the Government's expenditures for the first two months of the fiscal year reached $979,973,605 compared with $580,687,515 in the same period last year.

Of this amount, $545,461,760 went for emergency purchases with the Federal Emergency Relief Administration getting $265,817,097.

Emergency Outlay Heavy.

Expenditures for August alone reached $513,699,696 compared with $309,716,804 in August, 1933. Emergency expenditures in the 1934 month were $309,582,844 against $138,650,775.

Ordinary receipts of $286,266,217 compared with $187,788,487 in August last year. Figuring largely in this year's total was an item of $42,934,687 seigniorage on silver coinage. Seigniorage is the "profit" resulting from the issuance of silver certificates on the basis of $1.29 an ounce against metal purchased at lower figures.

August custom receipts of $22,952,077 were sharply below last year's total of $32,690,281. Processing taxes reached $43,043,300 against $9,134,166 in August last year, but these are paid out to farmers cooperating in crop reduction.

Voting Completed By C. & O. Clerks

Richmond, Sept. 4 (AP).—Results of the balloting by Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. clerical employes as to whether they shall be represented in collective bargaining negotiations by an American Federation of Labor affiliate or an independent organization will be made known by Thursday.

The balloting was completed tonight, Newport News being one of the last system points to cast ballots.

Approximately 2,300 clerical employes are affected by the voting. Every point on the C. & O. system, from Chicago to Newport News, took part in the balloting.

Missouri Legion Asks Munitions Exposure

Kansas City, Sept. 4 (AP).—The Missouri American Legion, at its annual convention today, adopted a program calling for exposure of wartime profits and the "interlocking directorates" of munitions companies.

The program would forbid Americans to hold stock in foreign munition firms, and would prohibit foreigners from holding shares in American companies. It also proposed that munitions be shipped out of the United States only with written permission of the Government, and with full publicity.

U. S. Starts Survey On Hatchery Project

Richmond, Sept. 4 (AP).—United States engineers have begun a survey of the property in Charles City County, at Harrison's Pond, which the Federal Government plans to use as a fish hatchery.

Officials of the Department of game and inland fisheries here say construction will begin soon. Federal authorities allocated $75,000 for the propagation of bass and other warm water game fish.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

Fred Perry the Champion.

Frederick John Perry, champion of the world at lawn tennis, has just published his autobiography, called "My Story." He is only 25 years old, but he can not rise higher in his profession than he stands at this moment; being the recognized leading tennis player of the world, having won the American, the Australian, and the British tournaments, and having played an essential part in giving last year the Davis Cup to his native land, and in retaining it this year. So he has no more worlds to conquer; but he is such a good fellow, such a fine sportsman, writes so modestly and yet so exultantly about his rapid rise to the pinnacle, loves to play tennis so ardently, is so fond of America and Americans—that I am glad he did not wait before writing this big book, but wrote it in the first flush and heyday of success.

As a prophet he is certainly as remarkable as he is on the court; he wrote this book and it was printed in England a few weeks before the tournament at Wimbledon and before the later round of the fight for the Davis Cup. He predicted the outcome of the English championship, the survivors and final issue of the struggle for the Davis Cup, the winner of the woman's championship at Wimbledon, and a good many other things which have come to pass.

His father was a Labor member of Parliament; but he was so interested in his son's early successes at tennis, that he permitted him to give up business altogether (though the family has no independent income) and go "all out," as the English say, for the championships of South America, Australia, United States and Great Britain. Fred Perry is tremendously grateful to his father; to whom his book is affectionately dedicated; and the father contributes a final chapter. As showing how the English love sport, when the decision was made, Stanley Baldwin, Lloyd George, Ramsey Macdonald, and others congratulated both father and son, and wished the youth success.

He has written a very exciting book, provided you are half as interested in tennis as I am; it is a succession of thrills. The young author is perfectly frank in describing the psychology of the game, his feelings before and during a terrific match, and in giving his estimates of his leading rivals in all countries; a difficult thing to do and thoroughly well done.

He states that if the tennis championship of the world could be won by a team of eleven or even of eight, instead of two, the United States would outshine all other countries. True enough; we have at least eight high-class players, who can give any man in the world a good game, but we have not even one who is absolutely first-class in singles; that is, of the stature of Tilden or Vines or Johnston.

I saw Perry at the French championships at Paris in 1932; I had a good talk talk with him and watched him play; it seemed to me then he ought to become the world's best player, as he has every qualification. The only thing that could beat him would be nerves; he is very high-strung. He can not endure thunder and lightning during a match, and as these celestial phenonena are extremely common during the French championships, he is usually not at his best there.

It is right to hope that an American will win our championship this September; but if Perry wins, we may be sure the cup has been taken by a man who is a fine upright, generous sportsman. Read his book and see the pictures in it.

Lynchburg Sees Higher Tax Rate

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Meeting a probable deficit of around $200,000, to arise by a shrinkage of about $10,000,000 in the 1935 real estate assessment, will give City Manager R. W. B. Hart a difficult job in the preparation of the city's budget for the year beginning January 1.

The loss results from a real estate slump, which is guiding the land assessors in fixing values for the new assessment.

The city manager is proposing a head tax of $1 and other sources of revenue are being searched for, but it is expected that most of the loss will be taken care of by an increase of the present realty tax rate of $2.10 to $2.60 or $2.70.

Lack of Management Fault Of Democracy

By Robert Quillen.

When history describes some ancient king as a great builder, it usually means that he was a good housekeeper.

He regarded his empire as a private possession and managed each unit of it for the good of the whole.

Want of power or desire to manage the country in that manner is the chief fault of a democracy.

In a land governed by representatives of the people, it is natural that each representative should be interested primarily in holding his job. And since his job depends on the good will of one small section, it is natural that he should devote his energies to matters that directly concern the voters back home.

An Oklahoma Congressman can not make votes by advocating a larger navy, nor a New Jersey Congressman by advocating drouth relief.

Thus the President alone is required, by the nature of his job, to visualize the Nation as a unit. And he lacks the power to be a good housekeeper.

Such power would seem to threaten individual liberty, but the individual has no rights that would do injury to the whole people.

Speaking without reflection, you would say that the individual farmer has the right to drain his land, plow up grass and refuse to plant trees.

Yet when many farmers exercise that right in a semi-arid region, the result is ever-increasing drouth, crop failure, dust storms and economic ruin.

A nation's granary becomes a desert, and all of the people must be taxed to relieve the distress of the few whose exercise of their individual rights caused the disaster.

If all must pay for the damage, then surely all have the right to prevent it.

If you own a horse in common with four others, you have no right to kill your fifth of it.

U. S. and Soviet Resume Debts Talk This Week

Moore Declares America's Attitude Is Extremely Liberal.

An official expression that the United States was being "extremely liberal and generous" yesterday accompanied an announcement that America and Soviet Russia this week will renew negotiations for settlement of debts and claims totaling more than $500,000,000.

R. Walton Moore, Acting Secretary of State, said he and Alexander Troyanovsky, Soviet Ambassador, agreed every effort should be made to reach an agreement.

Denies U. S. Is Responsible.

Moore insisted the State Department was not responsible for the fact that negotiations in Moscow and Washington dragged out seven months, and added:

"Since Foreign Commissar Litvinoff left Washington after President Roosevelt accorded recognition to the Soviet Union, we have exerted ourselves in Moscow and in Washington to dispose of the matter speedily.

"When the facts are all revealed, it will be found that our attitude has not only been conciliatory, but extremely liberal and generous."

Credits Block Agreement.

Although no official statement has been made, it is understood the chief obstacle in the path of a settlement is an agreement on credits to be extended to Soviet Russia, and adequate payment of American claims.

The Soviet Union desires long-term credits, extending 15 or 20 years, while the State Department is understood to have offered credit facilities for a shorter period, preferably five years.

State Department officials, it is said, do not believe that the payment of a small portion of the total claims over a long period of years, would adequately take care of the American claims.

Greenwood Fair Holds 24 Contests

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Greenwood's joint Community Fair and Community Day, held in the high school auditorium, attracted a large attendance. Approximately 100 exhibits were entered in 24 different contests.

Some two dozen exhibitors competed in the contests sponsored by the Girl Scouts and 4-H Club girls. Mrs. Bessie Dunn Miller, county home demonstration agent, was judge.

The competitions included canning, preserving, jellying and lunch packing. Besides these there were clothing contests for school girls and a baby show.

Dining, Dancing Places Here Offering Many New Features

"Night in the South Sea Islands" on Program at Shoreham Terrace; Victor Herbert Music to Be Heard at the Lotus.

By Kay Ware.

One way to be popular is to be sophisticated.

One way to be sophisticated is to know how to do the right thing at the right minute.

One way to do the correct thing, is to know beforehand where to make merry, at any time of day or night. The amusement you pick out of a grab bag is likely to be a bit damp.

Palm trees, reflected darkly in the water, warm sand, and a wind trailing music—so much for the tropics. Some of this colorful atmosphere may be had in Washington, without benefit of ocean liners. The Shoreham Hotel Terrace makes port tonight with "A Night in the South Sea Islands."

Sharing honors with Sue Rousseau this week at the Shoreham are La Fayette and La Verne, who excel in the widely different fields of ballroom dancing and an Apache dance. The Apache number leaves one a trifle breathless. It must leave La Verne, the lady who gets tossed about, without any breath at all.

Susan Hall and Walter Dee round out the program with a fast tap, a strut and an acrobatic number by Susan Hall. Framing the evening, there is Barnee and the rest of Maxim Lowe's orchestra.

Seeing Celebrities.

If you want to do some celebrity head-hunting on your own, and find out whose name is associated with whose, information can be found at the Powhatan. Socialites gather there; you see the sleek gold hair of the newest debutante brushing the perfectly tailored collar of the most eligible bachelor.

The not-too-distant past is echoed by Mary Olcott, soloist at the Lotus this week, who is specializing in ballads and the music of Victor Herbert.

Tap-dancing, by Paige and Merle, and further varieties of dancing, by L'Angelo and Porter, set up enough rhythms to furnish an excellent invitation to the dance floor. Bill Strickland's orchestra is always ready for those who prefer to do their own steps.

People who want to see what this rhumba business is all about, anyway, are flocking to Club Michel. Eva and Raoul Reyes are there this week, putting on the rhumba with a fine shade of polish.

As promised, Arthur Godfrey clipped a week off his vacation and returned to his public. If you want to see why, note his reception.

Very Smooth Music.

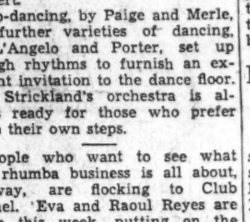
White and gold furniture, mirrored walls, a dance floor and very, very smooth music characterize the Mayflower Lounge. The ceiling is palacially high, there's a sploshsplosh of a fountain at the back and real fish swimming around.

One nice thing about the Mayflower: Two or more unescorted ladies can go there, receive excellent service, and not look as if they expected a pick-up. So girls, if your college roommate drops in for a few hours, or your smart young aunt from New York wants to find out if you know the right places, let the Mayflower be your selection.

To add to your list of what to drink, and where: On the Arlington Roof is the New Orleans fizz, mixed personally by Costello, roof host. The secret of its composition is carefully guarded by Costello, but its popularity has grown to such an extent that the host has almost been compelled to turn bartender.

The proverbially glassy dance floor, Harry Albert's music and the vocalizing of Russ Cullen and Bill Hopkins keep the Arlington Roof high in favor among the younger dancing set. To say nothing of the high quality and low prices of food and drinks. Slogan: Always a breeze, never a cover charge.

In addition to preparing a new program of dance music every night, Harry Albert is most ready to take on the personal musical programs of the patrons.



Today's Mottoes.

Birds of a feather need more than one in cold weather.
To make virtue of necessity is easier said than done.
Never cross a bridge partner.
All's well that ends swell.

Now that the weather has returned to normal, the Carlton Garden is again serving luncheon and dinner parties. Gregory Franzell and his Viennese Orchestra provide the menus. Leisurely dining is a specialty of the garden.

The Showcase, at Connecticut avenue and Albemarle street, was opened 17 months ago with Fred Kelley and his band as the attraction. They still remain. It is now rumored the plans are under way to enlarge this dine-and-dance night spot, and Mr. Kelly's chest is swelled way out to here, taking no small amount of credit for the increased patronage.

When life seems just one thing after another, the Hamilton's cocktail lounge is the place to rest. Relaxation seems to drift from corner to corner.

Also recommended, as the locale when there are plans to be settled, business or otherwise. You may find one of the few uninterrupted conversations in captivity.

Lou Hurwitz, at the Cotton Club, will introduce his new winter floor revue at a private showing for the newspaper folk on Thursday preceding the regular evening performance. These entertainers have appeared in sepia night spots in Philadelphia, and Mr. Hurwitz has given his assurance that they will not be disappointing.

Sale of Utilities To TVA Blocked By Court Order

Judge Overrules Alabama Public Service Body.

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 4 (AP).—A court order today blocked the transfer of electric light and power systems in 14 north Alabama municipalities to the Tennessee Valley Authority by the Alabama Power Co.

Judge Leon McCord, ruling on a petition of Alabama ice and coal companies which asked that the transfer be delayed, held the Alabama Public Service Commission had erred in approving the sale of the properties and ordered the approval canceled.

Under this decision, the sale must be brought before the public service commission a second time, and notice of 30 days given interested parties before the transfer is approved or denied.

Attorneys for the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Alabama Power Co. did not announce today whether they would appeal from Judge McCord's ruling.

Under the terms of the agreement between the TVA and the Alabama Power Co., light and power systems in the cities and towns in the Muscle Shoals area were to be sold to the TVA for approximately $1,000,000. The TVA planned to operate the systems until the municipalities could purchase them, with payment to the TVA to be made from operating profits.

Navy Plans Inspection Of Virginia Reserves

The Navy said yesterday an inspection would be made of naval reserve units at Newport News and Norfolk, Va., September 25, and at Richmond the following day, the Associated Press reported.

The inspection board will be made up of Capt. Rufus W. Matthewson, Commander William I. Causey and Lieut. Comdr. Harold F. Ely.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

THRIFT is the object of all the credit unions in the Departments, especially the one in War Department which is open to members of Local No. 261, National Federation of Federal Employes, NFFE officials point out. With thrift as a theme the War Department NFFE Guild is planning a "thrift evening" this month.

BAKER

This old credit union plans to have each member bring a War Department employe guest to the meeting at 710 Fourteenth street northwest for an evening of entertainment and instruction. The purpose and operation of the guild will be outlined, with the opportunities for saving stressed. The program will include refreshments, entertainment and a play under direction of Miss Lena G. Parks, Finance Office.

New applications for membership have been filed in large numbers recently, Dr. F. LeRoy Murray, guild president, says. Another report, due September 10, is expected to show additional gains, Miss L. P. Herring, guild treasurer, states. Miss Gertrude Coyle (*), Finance Office, is president of War Local, No. 261, NFFE, which offers this exclusive membership feature.

Two Navy employes, Atherton Macondray and Morris Smellow (*), have collaborated in inventing and obtaining a patent for a metallic safety seal for envelopes and similar containers.

FOLLOWING a beautiful wedding Saturday night, John W. Austin, Justice, and his bride, the former Miss Mildred M. Hanson, Bureau of Air Commerce, are spending their honeymoon with their families in Kansas and Missouri. Mrs. Austin is a native of Concordia, Kans., and has held a secretarial position in the bureau here two years.

Mr. Austin is from Albany, Mo., and has lived in Washington seven years, having been with Veterans Administration and later with Justice.

The wedding ceremony took place in front of a pair of "marrying palms" at the home of John S. Collins, assistant chief of the Administrative Section, 4424 Third street northwest. The palms were brought to Washington from Arizona and have been the background of six weddings, the Hanson-Austin nuptials being the seventh. Five of the couples joined under auspices of these palms were present at the reception Saturday night.

A pilgrimage to the National Cathedral and an old-fashioned picnic supper Sunday afternoon are planned by the California State Society, Mrs. Gertrude Scott, secretary, Veterans' Administration, announces. Buses will leave from the south of the Treasury Building at 2:30 p. m. Californians and their friends are urged to communicate with officers of the society.

Diary Guest Tickets.

If your name is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary Editor. You will receive tickets to Loew's Columbia (Robert Montgomery in "Hideout") or to Loew's Palace (Joan Crawford and Clark Gable in "Chained') or to Loew's Fox (screen, David Holt, Lee Tracy and Helen Morgan in "You Belong to Me;" Frolics of 1934, with Joe Morrison).

Diary office hours are: Daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m. and 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturday, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

Vacation Daze.

I was planning my vacation, and I had 15 days;
To Maine I would be going, with its mountains and its bays.
But, my teeth all needed fixing, and so leave I had to take;
The way it disappeared other plans I had to make.

Now, one day my car broke down, so I was late for work,
I overslept one morning, my wife was taken sick—

I'll never get to Maine to see its glorious coast
'Cause all my leave has petered out and given up the ghost.
So, now, some Sunday morning, if everything goes well,
I'm bound for Alexandria, my vacation's shot to —

Library of Congress Activities.

Library of Congress Lodge No. 18, American Federation of Government Employes, has already mapped an active schedule for the fall, covering both business and recreational projects. The executive committee, just appointed by Leo La Montagne, lodge president, includes: Mrs. M. S. Harris, Mrs. H. H. B. Meyer, D. J. Haykin, C. H. Hastings, Samuel Croft, Miss C. H. Eberly, J. R. Johnston, C. J. McLane, Mrs. E. C. Mearns, Miss M. A. Peck, Mrs. L. A. Shepley and Miss Mary Van Casteel.

John Mosely, Copyright Office, has been appointed chairman of the bowling committee and has issued a challenge to all lodges in AFGE to one or more matches. Library of Congress Lodge is leading a movement for the formation of an AFGE bowling league. The lodge invites other AFGE lodges to join in the program and contact Chairman Mosely.

Postettes.

Killer Testifies Against 'Pals' In Amick Trial

Defense Scores Heavily; Hearing at Marlboro Opens, However.

One of the men the State already has convicted in the Bladensburg Tea House murder yesterday was pitted against two of his alleged accomplices in an attempt to send them to their death for the killing of Grover Amick, one of the victims of the holdup and murder.

The men on trial in a special session of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court are James D'Alexandro and James Orlando, both of Philadelphia, who are accused by the State of having been members of the band which entered the roadhouse on the night of November 22, 1931, and opened fire on 25 patrons after robbing them.

Defense Attorneys Charles E. Ford and J. Wilson Ryon scored heavily when they obtained an admission from James Wallace, who is under an 18-year sentence for his part in the murder, that he had received a promise of a substantial reduction in his sentence if he would turn State's evidence against his alleged accomplices.

Wallace testified that he was brought to the Upper Marlboro jail several weeks ago and identified the defendants as members of the gang that "shot up" the teahouse.

Defense attorneys, however, immediately placed witnesses on the stand who testified that Wallace was unable to identify the men when nine prisoners were lined up together inside the jail.

The State also introduced as witnesses George Osborne and his wife, both of Washington, who said they accompanied Amick to the tea house. Mrs. Ohborne said she remained outside and saw only the "lookout man."

Osborne, however, when asked if he saw any of the holdup men in the courtroom, testified that he "could not positively identify the defendants."

Witnesses for the defendants testified that D'Alexandro was at a birthday party in Philadelphia at the time of the killing. Orlando's friends told the jury that he was at work in a Philadelphia bakery on the night in question.

The entire panel of the jury was exhausted before the attorneys could agree. Deputies were sent out into the streets of Marlboro to bring in prospective jurymen after the first panel was exhausted.

Cotton Cut Protest Passed to Georgia

Secretary Wallace yesterday told Senator Russell (Democrat), Georgia to consult with State officials regarding his protest over Administration of the Bankhead act in Georgia, the Associated Press reported.

"State and county officials now have full instructions for use in apportioning county allotments under the cotton act to producers," Wallace said.

Russell in a telegram to Wallace last week said small cotton farmers had protested that they were discriminated against in the allotment of certificates.

Work of making allotments is progressing "about as well as could be expected," the Secretary said.

No Ready-Made Tricks.

The longer one plays Bridge, the more fully he realizes the truth of the fact that there are no certain tricks at Bridge—not even the Ace of trumps, which might be lost by reason of a revoke. It is of course true that Aces are reasonably safe tricks, and a player holding three Aces can not be charged with undue optimism if he doubles a contract of six, especially when that contract has apparently been reached unwillingly. However, East, playing the hand below, did have the satisfaction of fulfilling his Small Slam contract because he found a fortunate void in one suit in the Dummy and was himself void of another.

North, Dealer.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1◇	2♡(1)	2♠	Pass
3◇	3♡(2)	4◇	Pass
Pass	4♡	Pass	Pass
5◇	5♡(3)	Pass	6♡(4)
Dbl.(5)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—With a seven-card suit East decides to make a Jump Overcall, hoping to make the bidding difficult for his opponents. With such a strong hand East should have bid one or four hearts, however—preferably only one.
2—Still strong enough to bid, despite West's pass.
3—Why East elected to bid five hearts rather than double five diamonds was not disclosed by my correspondent. Five diamonds certainly appears to be set, while the chance of making five hearts with a passing partner seems slight indeed.
4—West, with a void in the diamond suit, has shown great restraint throughout the bidding. His hand justifies a double raise, which he should have given long before. However, with no Aces whatever he shows great courage in undertaking a contract of six. Probably with his spade length and the freakishness of the hands disclosed through the bidding he feels reasonably certain that East is void of spades and that whatever outside strength he has is in the unbid club suit. The Slam bid, however, is unsound.
5—The Double is natural enough. The Slam was not reached logically, and at worst North feels that he can at least cash the Ace of spades and the Ace of clubs.

Played at five diamonds North would not have been punished severely. At worst he would have been compelled to give up two trump tricks, two clubs and one heart, but a 450-point penalty, after all, is rather large for a player who does not know that he is defending.

At the six-heart contract East had no trouble. He merely drew trumps and conceded the Ace of clubs to North, whose other two Aces were worthless to him.

Tomorrow's Hand.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

False Statistics Support NRA, Schall Charges

Senator Says Misleading Data Is Being Issued by Government.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 4 (AP). United States Senator Thomas D. Schall (Republican), Minnesota, charged today in another attack on President Roosevelt's Administration that Government departments are issuing misleading statistical data to support the NRA, the AAA and "other bold experiments upsetting American industry."

The blind Senator, who for a year has been a bitter critic of the New Deal, also claimed he had evidence to back up a recent charge of press censorship against the President, of which the latter demanded proof.

"All Government departments are now putting out false and exaggerated statistical data to support the NRA, the AAA, and other bold experiments, upsetting American industry," Senator Schall said. "For example, Johnson claims that the NRA has added 4,000,000 to the employed, though President Green of the American Federation of Labor, on August 30, showed that since July, 1933, when the NRA started, the unemployed had increased by 600,000 and today stays at 10,772,000, or where it stood at the low month of the depression."

"Every avenue of communication," Senator Schall said, "every instrument of public speech, every agent and medium for expression of the public will, is swiftly going under Federal domination in the United States, as in Italy, Germany and Russia—the four outstanding 'New Deal' dictatorships."

Unless "public sentiment and voters prevent," Senator Schall claimed the country would have a "Federalized National press service run by those in power to perpetuate them in power."

Schall charged the American Publishers Association was turned down by President Roosevelt in its request for one reservation, adding to the press code article 8 of the Bill of Rights providing for free speech and a free press.

He also claimed the President approved "something like" 20 NRA codes "invoking drastic powers of Federal control over every industry turning out newspaper equipment and materials," and over book and magazine publication.

Accounts of the English exchequer used to be kept straight by the use of notched and split sticks—a method which has some points in common with ultra-modern accounting systems.

The exchequer tallies were sticks of seasoned wood. Receipt of a sum of money paid to the government was acknowledged by writing the sum on one side of the stick, and writing the same sum on the other side, together with the payer's name. Notches were then cut in the stick to identify it as representing a transaction of a given classification. The stick was split down the center; half going to the payer and the other half remaining with the exchequer.

When the payer presented his stick for payment it was identified by matching it with the half retained by the government. This precluded the possibility of counterfeit—for nobody can counterfeit the grain of a piece of wood he never saw.

This system of keeping accounts is not so unrelated to modern methods as it may seem. The United States postal money orders are protected from being raised by the irregular way they are torn out of the book. The use of notches in the old exchequer tallies for purposes of classification is not greatly different from the modern use of holes punched in cards for the same purpose.

Admiral Horne Hurt in Crash

Hand Smashed as Auto Upsets; Wife Escapes Without Injury.

An automobile driven by Rear Admiral F. J. Horne careened over on its side in the Lee highway yesterday, with the result that three fingers of the admiral's hand were almost severed. Though she was pitched from her seat and had to crawl from the car, which had burst into flames, Mrs. Horne was unhurt.

The accident occurred at the junction of the Lee highway and the Arlington-Fairfax Railway. The Admiral and Mrs. Horne were traveling west when they swerved to the right to escape hitting a Fairfax bound trolley. Horne tried vainly to steady the car.

The Fairfax Volunteer Fire Department extinguished the flames and Dr. R. E. Feagans, of Fairfax, treated the injured hand. Admiral Horne was then removed to the Naval Hospital.

Admiral Horne, a native of San Pedro, Calif., is attached to the Navy Department here. He and Mrs. Horne live at 1661 Crescent place northwest.

Girl, Blind and Deaf, Receives School Fund

Helen arrived here today en route to Perkins Institution at Watertown, Mass., where she will be taught the manual alphabet to put her in touch with the rest of the world. A fund totaling more than $2,000, contributed by newspaper readers, is financing the trip.

Back-Firing Checks Idaho Forest Blaze

Spokane, Wash. Sept. 4 (AP).—Reports of progress came today from fighters attempting to control the tremendous Pete King Creek fire in north central Idaho, the only major forest conflagration giving trouble in the inland Northwest.

The advance of the 100,000-acre blaze was halted on the east and by back-firing.

Suicide Killer of Two Gives Colorado Mystery

Longmont, Colo., Sept. 4 (AP).—Authorities tonight were seeking the motive that caused Dr. Max C. Handley, 38-year-old osteopath and civic leader, to snuff out the lives of his two children and himself in Peaceful Valley today.

Sheriff George A. Richart said Dr Handley apparently had been despondent for weeks and made careful preparations yesterday before he took the two children, Catherine, 5, and Charles, 3, to the valley and killed them with carbon monoxide fumes which he piped into his car from the exhaust.

Aviator Finds Ross Sea Open

Byrd Aid Says Ships May Navigate South Polar Waters in Winter.

Little America, Antarctica, Sept. 4 (AP) (Via Mackay Radio).—William McCormick, of Montclair, N. J., who reached a height of 7,200 feet today in an autogyro, reported on his return to Little America that beyond the Bay of Whales the Ross Sea was entirely open.

Scientists attached to the second Byrd Antarctic expedition were impressed by the discovery and expressed the opinion that, contrary to the popular belief, the Ross Sea actually remains open during the winter.

The menacing ice pack which makes summer navigation hazardous, may be fed by the great masses of ice released by thawing from coastal bays and the thawing of great sections of the barrier, they believed.

Previously it has always been considered necessary for South Polar expeditions to complete the sea navigation during the summer months to avoid being frozen in. McCormick's discovery, it was pointed out, opens up the possibility of year-around navigation in the waters of the Antarctic.

Girl, 24, Licensed To Practice Surgery

Los Angeles, Sept. 4 (AP).—Berthella Jarvis, 24, of Huntington Park, today was licensed by the State board of medical examiners to practice medicine and surgery in California.

Local authorities said Miss Jervis, slim, blonde and attractive, is the youngest woman ever admitted to the practice of medicine and surgery in this State, and possibly the youngest in the Nation.

For good digestion

—there is nothing that can take the place of your own gastric, digestive secretions. Frequently, poor digestion is due to lack of tone in the stomach walls—because of low blood strength. S.S.S., the great, scientifically-tested medicine, is specially designed to fill a two-fold purpose in this respect... it aids in stimulating the flow of natural stomach secretions... and by building up deficient red corpuscles, with their hemo-glo-bin, it restores to a more normal functioning the secretions of the stomach digestive juices... so necessary for good digestion. This double value of S.S.S. is important.

By all means try S.S.S. for better health and more happiness. Its benefits are progressive... accumulative... and enduring. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetising food and good digestion... sound sleep... and renewed strength. This is why many say "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, Jr.

N. B. C. was rubbing its palms yesterday over what appeared, ostensibly, to be a sports "scoop." At second sight, however, a tour of the situation reveals a faint scent of skullduggery . . . nay, something akin to Danish mayhem.

Bill Coyle, N. B. C.'s sports announcer, found Jack Dempsey suddenly flung in his lap Monday night. So he put him back on the air at WMAL. That was O. K. and Bill did a good job. But Jack also had an "exclusive" date to appear with Arch McDonald on his WJSV sports review an hour later. Jack did not show up . . . studio attaches stood at the elevator waiting . . . finally Arch was forced to make apologies to listeners.

Jack, it seems, knows little about the local radio set-up. All he knew was that he was to "go on the radio" . . . he had no idea where. Suddenly WMAL announced that Dempsey would go on with Bill Coyle at 6 p. m.

Jack went on, revealed pride in his new-found parental joys, commented on Carnera and Baer and left the studio convinced, no doubt,

ADELE RONSON, a very winsome lassie indeed, who appears as the heroine, Lieut. Wilma Deering, in the Buck Rogers series on C. B. S. networks at 5 p. m. Mondays through Thursdays. Right now she's trying to evade "Trouble on Saturn," the title of the series.

Seems somewhere in the dim past we've heard about college fraternity boys "boxing" up desirable material. So Jack had a good dinner discussing boxing with the boys.

Meanwhile Arch's "exclusive" interview drizzled away with the rain. Later Dempsey told Arch that his failure to show up was entirely unintentional.

N. B. C. explains vaguely that arrangements were made with Dempsey "weeks ago" . . . but no announcement was made because their "arranger" was waiting for last-minute details.

* * * *

AFTER a frantic all-day chase we located our very good friend, Bill Coyle, who got scooped once himself when Maxie Baer failed to show up to be interviewed on WMAL. Here's what Bill said:

"Dempsey told me he had another date at 7 o'clock. He left here at 6:20 after pictures were taken. There were none of our representatives with him. It's just one of those things, you know. Of course a fellow feels set up when he gets a program on the air first. It's natural. That's how I feel and I'm sorry that this all happened."

UPTON SINCLAIR, perennial pamphleteer and occasional prophet of social doom, who is currently licking his chops over being chosen to lead the Democratic pack for the Governorship of California, will chide the air waves today from the National Press Auditorium.

WJSV will carry his falsetto remarks at 1:15 p. m. and WRC mikes will further inspire his fancy at 1:30 p. m. He was heard from New York last night over the A. B. S. network.

EVER alert to local news breaks and scenting something big yesterday in the Senate's public hearing on the munitions traffic, N. B. C. engineers had equipment set up to air proceedings. C. B. S. officials, equally alert, raced down to the "Hill" to chime in, but the committee voted down requests to broadcast.

C. B. S., however, had been busy elsewhere. After lines were installed in the New York office of George A. Sloan, representative of textile employers, who spoke yesterday over C. B. S. networks, local WJSV officials had lines piped into the office of Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the textile strike committee, at Tenth and K streets.

Whitecaps.

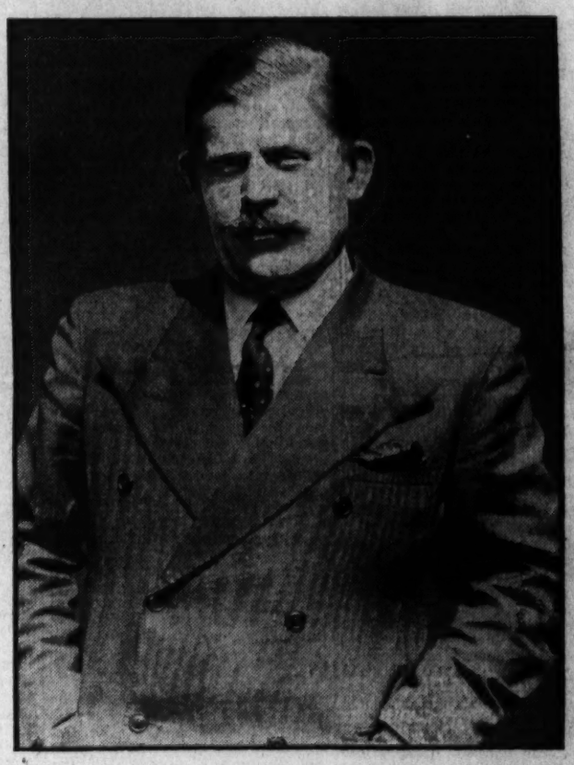
"The Depression is About OVER"



Says Major L. L. B. Angas

In the Current BEST SELLER

"The Coming American Boom"

(Published by Simon & Schuster)

Is given its first newspaper publication in The Washington Post . . . Major Angas, in a series of articles, tells just why he is convinced of "the coming American boom."

These articles are presented for whatever our readers think they are worth . . . We feel the major makes some interesting points, although many of his views are not indorsed by us.

'The Fountain' Turned On at RKO-Keith's

A Word or Two About Dick Powell and Things in General.

By Gerald G. Gross.
(Batting for Nelson B. Bell).

It was a sinister night as we emerged from this home office, The Post, just 25 hours behind the time this is being written. Rain was falling, not in a lusty, clean-cut and aboveboard manner, but drizzly and surreptitious-like as though its sneaking drops were an accessory to some horrible crime. The air was filled with mist which, with just a little more encouragement, could have become a duplicate of one of those highly publicized London fogs.

We were bound for the Metropolitan, there to take in "The Dragon Murder Case," so the outside atmosphere was perfect quite. We pulled up the coat collar and swung into a rapid stride as the five-block walk commenced, shuddering from time to time as searching raindrops triumphed over our meager protection and trickled triumphantly down and across the neck.

In a doorway, at about the halfway mark of the trip, lurked a dangerous-looking character nervously fingering an unlighted cigarette. Had that ominous rain not been falling he would have been simply standing; as it was he was lurking. On a fair night he would probably have been taken for some husband impatiently waiting for his wife to keep that street corner appointment, which was very likely the case. But in the atmosphere of which we speak, he had to be set down as a hired gunman trying to summon courage to obliterate some hapless victim, a soulless kidnaper awaiting the "snatch" hour, or some other type of criminal.

The Rain Is Wet.

It was delightful. By this time we were pretty wet from top to bottom—the water was even beginning to seep through the soles of these aged shoes—and the chill was playing tricks with the tonsils that ought to come out but the discomfort was most pleasing. What a night. Bulldog Drummond, what a night!

"The Dragon Murder Case" let us down somewhat after this excellent build-up, but that isn't the point. In fact, we're not even so sure there is a point to this meandering. Unless it is that we are especially fond of good, old-fashioned plays and pictures and stories about ghosts and crime detection, vampires and Frankenstein monsters, secret passageways and slamming shutters. As though what we're especially fond of is of the slightest importance!

It is this favoritism of ours toward such movies as "Frankenstein" and "The Bishop Murder Case" and such plays as "The Bat" (the picture version wasn't so hot) and "The Spider" which prompted that final paragraph of last Monday's column: "Who remembers the slinking, homicidal somnambulist in 'The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari?'" That is one performance we are sure we will never forget.

So we thought it was a pity that the sun was shining brightly and everything looked so doggoned up-and-up yesterday when we set out for the sixth floor of the Earle Building to attend an early screening of "Crime Without Passion," the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur picture which goes on general display Friday at the Metropolitan. The trailer had led us to believe here was a grim fantasy incompatible with shining suns and singing birds and now (so we thought) the weatherman was conspiring to spoil the atmosphere.

"Crime Without Passion."

We were, on account of that darn trailer, mistaken. It developed that "Crime Without Passion" is a picture to be enjoyed whether you're entering the theater out of a rainstorm or out of an atmosphere filled with Pollyanna faces. There is nothing supernaturally or fantastically the matter with Lee Gentry (Claude Rains of "The Invisible Man" glory). He is simply an unlucky fellow who, in a human sort of way, is too smart for his own good.

"Crime Without Passion" has its faults, being a bit draggy now and then, and its appeal will be limited. If you like an introspective film, one that attempts to take a man apart and find out what makes him tick (as the hero says), you'll care much for "Crime Without Passion." It is, of course, strictly adult entertainment. That "Furies" prelude in itself is enough to give little Willie the willies.

But more later about "Crime Without Passion."

Today it's to RKO-Keith's to see "The Fountain," with Ann Harding, Brian Aherne and Paul Lukas. And also Barbara Barondess, a newcomer to pictures. We'll be particularly on the lookout for her for we dimly remember a Barbara Barondess having a very funny role in the very funny comedy, "Lost Sheep," several years ago. Presumably it is the same girl.

Fox Birthday Anniversary.

Giving the calendar a 16-day ride, a bulletin reaches this desk bearing notification that Carter Barron, division manager, and Gene Ford, production manager, are making big plans for the observance of the seventh anniversary of the opening of the Fox Theater. The candles, if any, will be aflame during the week beginning September 21.

This humble substitute was not in Washington on the night the Fox opened, being instead in an Oxford, Ohio, dormitory, but natives undoubtedly will verify Lou Brown's reminder that Cabinet members, diplomats and society leaders all rubbed shoulders on that gala occasion.

Messrs. Barron and Ford have not yet decided on the anniversary stage and screen attractions. If they have, they're still mum. To flag your interest, though, they offer the assurance "that it will be a show so large and stupendous that it will remain in mind for many months."

All right, we're depending on that.

Apropos of plays and pictures that do things to the spinal column, "The Tavern" is being readied for exhibition next week as the closing production of the Roadside Theater. Which reminds us of the keen treatment Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coburn gave this Cohan comedy somewhere back in the 1920's. "The Tavern" opens as a terrific and colossal storm rages without. Hot dog!

Dick Powell Starts East.

Dick Powell, whom we haven't seen since 1928 when he was leading an orchestra in the same theater where the Dillinger family put on their show six years later, rushed through pick-up shots remaining on "Flirtation Walk" and flew to Indianapolis Monday. He made one appearance yesterday at the Indiana theater, scene of his triumphs in 1928 and the Dillingers in 1934, and then continued on to New York.

The ever-smiling Mr. Powell opens his personal appearance tour Saturday at the Pittsburgh Stanley, which, unless we're mistaken, is the house where he first came to prominence as a crooner, band leader and heart pilferer. After a week in Pittsburgh he faces a week in Philadelphia. Thence, girls, to the Earle.

Shirley Temple is achieving a reputation as something of a stretch runner in the contests being conducted currently at the Fox to obtain patrons' opinions on the relative merits of David Holt and herself. A trailer early in the balloting, she has gradually forged to the front until now she is leading the lovable David by 1,040 votes to 952. Yesterday she polled 333 markers (tish tish), while the youngest player in "You Belong to Me" was receiving 285.

"Agony! Agony!

"The Drunkard" goes on again at 8:45 p. m. tomorrow in the ballroom on top of the Willard Hotel, following a holiday respite of which several of the players took advantage to hie themselves to New York's Greenwich Village and find out how the same mellerdrammer is being performed at the Cherry Lane Theater. Several others in the cast went to Baltimore to help make arrangements for the play's premiere there on September 19, under auspices of the Play Arts Guild.

Getting back to the Willard's "Drunkard," the show also will be presented Saturday night in keeping with the regular schedule. There's still some doubt as to a Friday night offering this week to make up for yesterday's cancellation caused by the local chapter of A. I. B. taking over the ballroom.

Thanks, Frank, for the information that Conrad Veidt played that slinking somnambulist. We weren't trying to find out his name, though, but just trying to stir up reminiscences. Since you brought it up, however, this pro tem dramatic editor has to confess he'd forgotten who took the role.

All aboard, Seaside Park folks, or it will be too late. Tomorrow is the last movie night of the season. And the last chance at free dancing is Friday night. On Sunday the resort will be closed until next year.

Coming to the Fox and Earle

Straight From the Studios

By Speed Kendall.

HEATHER ANGEL.

They had known each other a year, but the romance did not get underway in earnest until about six weeks ago. Marriage was a subject never discussed between them until a few nights ago, when Forbes suddenly popped the question and was accepted. He went immediately to the telephone and told his mother, Mrs. Mary Forbes and she hurried over to where they were. On her finger she wore a family heirloom—the cut sapphire and diamond ring which was given her years ago by her mother. She told her son of the strange premonition she had that morning when something prompted her to wear the ring which had lain in her jewel case for months.

Mrs. Forbes gave her blessings to the marriage and presented Miss Angel with the ring. Then there was the question of a wedding band. His secretary, Jane Gray, stepped up and presented Forbes with a gold band which was a present to her. And then, when Forbes and his bride returned, Miss Gray was at the station with a brand new platinum wedding ring. Forbes will have a tiny piece of Miss Gray's gold band set in the platinum band. Theirs was a "hitch-hike" elopement because their car broke down outside of Yuma and they had to thumb their way to the altar.

King For A Day.

Royalty visited the M-G-M in the person of Prince and Princess Tsunendri Kaya and at the last minute it was discovered an extra interpreter was needed for the event. The assignment went to Eddie Imazu, a studio draftsman, and he was the proudest young fellow in all Hollywood yesterday.

Life of Riley.

A deep, dark mystery found Sir Guy Standing in the role of the principal yesterday. Standing is recuperating at Malibu Lake from the bite of a "black widow" spider. He spends his time fishing. Every day he is met at the boat landing by a beautiful, raven-haired woman who drives up in an expensive automobile. She does the rowing while Standing nestles back among a flock of pillows and casts for the elusive bass and trout. Standing is on location with the "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" unit and every member of the troupe is trying to establish the identity of his fair oarswoman.

Hard-Hearted Executives.

For weeks and weeks Gene Pallette, rotund comedian, planned a deer hunting expedition into the Santa Barbarba Mountains. With four pals he packed 20 miles into the heart of God's country. Just as he and his friends were preparing to go shoot, two rangers rode up and asked if Pallette was among them. Gene identified himself and he will never forgive himself. They gave him orders to return to the studio immediately. He had to begin a new picture, "Border Town," with Paul Muni.

Odd and Interesting.

Romantic couples observed at the premier of "Dames" at the Warner Hollywood Theater: Lyle Talbot with Peggy Waters, Glenn Boles and Nan Gray, Dick Powell and Mary Brian, Genevieve Tobin and Phil Reed, Josephine Hutchinson and James Townsend, Jocelyn Lee and James Seymour . . . These penthouse cocktail parties of Roger Marchetti, the attorney, atop the Hollywood Roosevelt are becoming more and more popular. His guests included the Archie Goettlers, Minna Gombell, Anna May Wong, Pert Kelton, Judith Allen, Gigi Parrish, Matty Kemp, Shirley Grey, B. P. Schulberg, Clara Lou Sheridan, Gloria Shea, Kathlyn Hayden, Grace Bradley and others.

The Cy Bartletts (Alice White) entertained the Louis Calherns . . . Ruby Keeler and Al Jolson yachted to Catalina over the Labor Day holidays . . . And there was a general exodus from Hollywood for the three days to such resorts as Agua Caliente, Lake Arrowhead, Santa Barbara and to the beaches.

Donald Woods gets in tomorrow night from Denver . . . Rudolph Amendt and Berthold Viertel are ping-pong hounds . . . Those impromptu shows nightly at the new Vanities Cafe in Hollywood are knockouts . . . Don Alvarado guest of honor at the Deauville last night . . . Regis Toomy was chosen for the lead opposite Steffi Duna in "The Sea Girl" because he was just the right height . . . Betty Furness is not superstitious. Her pet gray cat had four jet black kittens and she thinks it's good luck . . . Little Anne Shirley was put on the spot one day last week. Girls were needed for the schoolroom scene in "Anne of Green Gables" and about 12 of her chums from Hollywood High appeared. So as not to get in Dutch with any she let the casting director make the selections.

U. S. Captures Berlin (N. J.) in Attack on 'Foe'

'Black' Army's Defense Aided by Rain; Air Force Enters Battle.

By Harris B. Hull.

General Headquarters, the American Army, Raritan Arsenal, N. J., Sept. 4.—"Berlin has been captured."

The memories of leading officers stationed at General Headquarters here raced back 16 years when this brief message was received today from the headquarters of the First Corps in the field.

But in this istance Berlin is not the ultimate objective of the American attacks. It is a litle station in the south central portion of New Jersey and until today was included in the "enemy's" lines.

As officers on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's staff studied the new American position following a night of continuous fighting in the paper warfare now raging, they noted other features which reminded them of 1917-18.

The names of two soldiers whose records in the A. E. F. are military legend were prominent in today's capture of Berlin. These are Maj. Gen. Dennis Nolan, commanding the First Army, and Maj. Gen. Fox Conner, commanding the First Corps under Gen. Nolan.

The same brilliant tactics displayed by this pair when the Twenty-eighth Division went into the Meuse-Argonne, and in other prominent engagements were displayed again in the American advance today.

Lead Intelligence Work.

Gen. Nolan went to France with Gen. Pershing as chief of military intelligence. His accurate estimates of the situation and almost uncanny calculations of enemy intentions brought him into the limelight as probably the most outstanding chief of military intelligence in the World War on either side.

Fox Conner went to France in charge of operations section of the A. E. F. Here he directed the movements of the American soldiers on the western front with so much skill that he was signally recognized by Gen. Foch as well as Gen. Pershing.

There is no vitally important change in the battle situation as it now exists. The "limited obective" attack which was undertaken yesterday and fought last night under cover of darkness in an effort to gain a strategically important ridge prior to the start of a major push met with some opposition and difficulty. The enemy forces put up a stiff fight and were not completely overcome.

Rainstorm Slows Advance.

In addition, it was found that the American officers leading the advance experienced some trouble in the control of their men and in the efficient distribution of their fire power. The move was undertaken under cover of darkness, and a heavy rainstorm added to the company commander's difficulty.

The umpires, so far, have not been too generous in their rulings as to the amount of ground taken by this first preliminary American attack. Additional troops are being rushed into the sector of this objective in a new and determined effor to take the entire ridge now partially held by the opposition forces. If this is successful, it will place the American forces in a strategically advantageous position for the impending general push to defeat the enemy along the entire New Jersey line.

Nine bombing planes ordered here from the West Coast passed over headquarters at 4:30 p. m., completing a flight from March Field, Calif., interrupted by bad gasoline and unfavorable weather. The planes under the command of Lieut. Col. Henry H. Arnold, simulated a bombing mission on an enemy position near Belmar, N. J., and then flew to their base at Mitchel field, Long Island. They are expected to participate in further attacks by the American Army.

Navy Enters Maneuver.

The Navy entered into the general maneuver picture today when submarines from the New London, Conn., base again began hindering the further landing of enemy troops and supplies off the coast.

In addition, naval authorities supervised the arming of a number of private yachts which have been drawn up in the entrance to Delaware Bay. These ships, although not equipped with guns of sufficient range to fire on enemy targets on the shoreline, will be able to present considerable opposition if the invading forces try to get into Delaware Bay to effect further landings and to reinforce their positions from points close to their present lines. The comparative narrowness of the bay will aid the converted yachts in carrying out an important naval function while the regular American fleet is engaged in the Pacific area.

Naval authorities are also cooperating extensively with the high command of the Army in the operations of the military communications network and especially in the dissemination of pieces of intelligence which, when patterned together, may give MacArthur's staff some inkling as to the next move of the "Black" forces.

Ohio Dry Party Marks 20th Year; 20 on Hand

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 4 (AP).—Ohio's prohibition party—during the repeal campaign the State was called the "Birthplace of Prohibition" — celebrated its sixty-fifth birthday today with a political convention. Twenty persons attended.

Dr. Charles A. Bame, of Ashland, the party's prospective gubernatorial candidate, remarked that the attendance was "very disappointing." The party will have a State campaign if by Friday it can obtain 26,000 signatures to place its candidates on the ballot for the November 6 election.

Health Service Shifts Slated

District Set-up Will Be Studied by Federal Department Aids.

Aid of the United States Public Health Service in reorganizing the District Health Department will be asked soon, Commissioner George E. Allen announced yesterday.

Experts of the Service and others thoroughly conversant with latest developments in municipal health regulation will be given the task of studying the existing machinery and conditions under the Commissioner's plan.

Recommendations of these experts would be embodied in a report to the Commissioners. Whether suggested changes could all be made effective by the Commissioners must await receipt of the recommendations, Mr. Allen said. Additional legislation may be necessary and that probably will take time.

Dr. William C. Fowler, veteran health officer, is to retire on November 24, when he reaches the 70-year age limit. Who will be named to succeed him has not been determined.

"I haven't the least idea," the Commissioner said. "We are going to try to get the best man available. It might be we will find the best man already in our organization. My proposed request of the Public Health Service certainly does not mean that we have determined to appoint some Federal official or turn the local department over to the control of the Service."

D. C. Trade Association Heads to Hear Nelson

Washington Trade Association executives will hold their regular luncheon meeting tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. at the Carlton Hotel. D. M. Nelson, vice president of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and a member of the NRA Advisory Board, will speak.

Banking Needs Trained Minds, O'Connor Says

Tells Institute Graduates' Responsibility Greater Than Ever Before.

"Because of the sweeping changes that have taken place in banking practice," the need of "trained and flexible minds" in the profession is probably greater than ever before, J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, told graduates of the American Institute of Banking at commencement exercises in the Willard Hotel last night.

Thirty-two Washington graduates of the institute heard the address. Graduates of institute chapters in 200 communities throughout the Nation listened by radio.

"The banker by training is conservative," Mr. O'Connor said. "Responsibility usually has this effect. He is a fiduciary, exercising important functions concerning the property of others. While many bankers have been in the very forefront among the leaders for constructive and progressive legislation, the great majority have rather taken the view that whatever is—is right, regardless of fundamental changes elsewhere in our National life.

Banking Crisis Reviewed.

"Honest men admit that intolerable abuses crept into banking practices. The better bankers did not approve, but were powerless to prevent or correct them. Evils must be corrected by legislative action . . . no banker worthy of the name approved the practice of officers and directors borrowing for their own account the entire capital and surplus of a bank."

Mr. O'Connor reviewed the banking crisis which led to the March 4, 1933, holiday and subsequent events. He said that between February 15 and March 4, 1933, $1,630,000,000 in currency was withdrawn from banks and that gold and gold certificate withdrawals amounted to $300,000,000.

At the end of the bank holiday, he said, there remained 1,407 unlicensed National banks. Of these, 1,019 with deposits of $1,728,794,000 were reopened by August 13 of this year, he declared. In approximately the same period $520,502,092 was distributed to depositors of banks that could not be opened, he said.

Mr. O'Connor returned to his original theme of the trained intellect to say:

"Any government which . . . neglects to call trained minds to its aid would be contemptible because needlessly incompetent, and would crumble before the blistering wrath of an outraged public opinion. When Calvin Coolidge put a trained economist and college president on the Tariff Commission, thoughtful public opinion justly acclaimed him."

Ellery Host at Dinner.

At a dinner preceding the commencement exercises, given by Charles Ellery, of Newark, N. J., president of the institute, the Currency Comptroller was the guest of honor. Other guests were:

Frederick P. H. Siddons, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association; Robert T. Whitton, N. E. Towsom, James A. Soper, Walton L. Sanderson, president of the Washington Chapter of the institute; R. J. Roberts, Frank M. Perley, Richard A. Morris, J. Earle McGeary, T. H. Leith, Robert H. Lacey, A. E. Henze, Aubrey O. Dooley, James C. Dulin, W. A. Cady, Harold W. Burnside and Richard W. Hill.

At the graduation exercises brief addresses were given by Mr. Sanderson, Mr. Siddons and Raymond B. Dickey, dean of the faculty of the local chapter. Certificates and prizes were presented to the graduates by Katherine McCalmont, secretary of the District chapter.

Prizes in the standard courses were distributed as follows: Arsena Fopless, American Security & Trust Co., $30;; Howard D. Dodge, Union Trust Co., $20; George E. Earnshaw, National Metropolitan Bank, $10. In the prestandard courses prizes were awarded Eugene F. Case, Riggs National Bank, $20; Doris E. Strobel, office of the Comptroller of the Currency, United States Treasury Department, $15; Brice D. Duckett, Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co., Hyattsville, Md., $10. Arsena Fopless, of the American Security & Trust Co., was awarded the $25 prize donated by the Bank Women's Club of Washington.

Tokyo Transit Workers Strike.

Tokyo (Wednesday), Sept. 5 (AP). All members of the Transport Workers Union, estimated at 11,000, went on strike today, tying up the municipal tram and bus system.

Allen to Push Housing Plans

Commissioner to Confer on Low Cost Units With Federal Officials.

Back at his desk after a vacation of a month, Commissioner George E. Allen yesterday announced his purpose to push plans for low-cost housing projects in the District.

Tentative plans call for two centers of about 160 houses each. They would be inexpensively but soundly constructed and be equipped with all modern sanitary conveniences, he said.

Welfare and relief officials have been gathering data on the subject and their report is expected within the next day or so.

Federal relief and public works officials are to be congratulated inasmuch as the District has no funds with which to carry out such a project.

Relief officials would have a direct interest in the plan, inasmuch as families on relief rolls would be given quarters in the new houses. The housing would not be limited to destitute families under the tentative plans, however.

O'Connell Named By Costello Post

John H. O'Connell was elected commander of the Vincent B. Costello Post of the American Legion last night at the annual meeting in Odd Fellows Temple.

Other officers elected were Elliot M. Clark, first vice commander; George W. LeDane, second vice commander; Meyer Taske, third vice commander; Matthew G. McIntyre, quartermaster; Henry I. Pahlow, sergeant at arms James F. Harold, master at arms, and the Rev. Louis C. Vaeth, chaplain.

Hale Will Keep Seat, G.O.P. Official Predicts

Chicago, Sept. 4 (AP).—Representative Chester C. Bolton of Ohio, chairman of the Republican Congressional campaign committee, predicted the reelection of Senator Frederick Hale today upon his return from a trip to Maine.

Bolton also said he was optimistic over the chances of the three Republican Congressional candidates in the forthcoming election in that State.

Bandits Lose

Merchant Flees and Saves Day's Receipts.

A pair of agile legs saved the day's receipts for Samuel Goldberg last night when he took to his heels as three colored holdup men confronted him in his store at 900 G street southwest.

Police said the same trio had held up Israel Pomerantz in his store at 1837 Nineteenth street northwest a few minutes earlier and took $10.

Victim of Holdup Attempt Stabbed

Says Two Attacked Him on Refusing Money.

Stabbed in the side and arm by a would-be holdup man, Kasper West, 42, of Bennings, D. C., was reported in a critical condition at Casualty Hospital last night.

West told police he was walking near First street and Virginia avenue southwest early yesterday, when he was accosted by two colored men. One drew a long knife and demanded money, he said.

After refusing, West declared, he started to walk away. A moment later both men jumped on him. One held him while the other slashed and stabbed with the knife. They fled on foot.

Physicians said West suffered a punctured lung, several deep cuts and a stab wound in the left arm. He said his assailants did not rob him.

Arkansas Republicans Sharply Hit 'New Deal'

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 4 (AP).—Arkansas Republicans, gathered in annual convention here today, turned sharp darts of criticism on the New Deal and "brain trust" policies.

"People who grasped at promises of recovery in the election of 1932 are now being blindly led to destruction by the New Deal," Judson Hout, of Jackson County, representing the Young Republican organization, told the gathering, which elected Charles B. Atkinson, of Fayettesville, as permanent chairman.

Studio May Be Roosevelt Son's Home

Converted Manor Chapel Rumored as Winter Residence.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The lovely old estate of Mrs. Eliphalet Andrews, at Seminary Hill, Va., where many delightful parties have been given, both in the manor house and in the studio, which is a "converted" chapel, is attracting attention, for it is rumored that Mr. Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, with his charming wife and their small daughter, have leased the studio, and will make their home there during the coming winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt have spent much time in the Capital during the past month searching for an attractive and suitable home, and it seems that they have about decided on this unusual and delightful place.

The studio was originally the chapel on the estate until several years ago, when Mrs. Andrews converted it. Today it is one of the most charming places near Washington.

Tapestried Walls.

The main part of the chapel, which is two stories high, has been turned into the living room and decorated in keeping with the ecclesiastical architecture and the handsome stained glass windows.

The walls are hung with beautiful old tapestries and on the far side of the room is a large open fireplace. A small staircase leads to the choir loft which the bedrooms open.

The manor house, which will probably be occupied this winter by Mrs. Andrews and her attractive young daughters, is a spacious old house with a large veranda. Upon entering one finds a large hall from which open three beautifully decorated rooms suited to the Victorian style of the house.

Relics of Feudal Times.

Extending from the drawing room is a study which has windows of stained glass. Hanging on the walls of the study are old shields and breast-plates, reminiscent of the romance of bygone centuries, with old muskets and beautifully hand-tooled revolvers.

Mrs. Andrews for the past few years has made her home in this house during the summer and in the late autumn moved into the studio for the winter.

On this estate is another house which is always referred to as the cottage. It has been leased by Mr. Albert L. Miller, of the Federal Relief Administration, and Mrs. Miller. Mrs. Miller will arrive in the Capital shortly from their home in Warren, Conn., to take possession of their new home.

Miss Marie Homer Sets Wedding Day

Fairfield, Conn., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Miss Marie Homer, daughter of Mrs. Charles Leb Homer, of Unquowa road, Fairfield, has selected Friday, September 28, as the day of her marriage to Mr. Thomas Gilchrist, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Gilchrist, of Lawrence Park, West Bronxville, N. Y.

The wedding will take place at 4 o'clock in Trinity Church, Southport, with the Rev. William Schroeder officiating. A small reception will be held after the wedding at Little Orchard, Fairfield.

Miss Homer is the daughter of the late Charles Leb Homer, of Fairfield and Philadelphia, and a niece of Associate Justice Owen Roberts of the United States Supreme Court and Mrs. Roberts, of Washington and Philadelphia. She was graduated from St. Mary's School, Peekskill, N. Y., and made her debut in Philadelphia several seasons ago. She is a member of the Junior League.

Mr. Gilchrist was graduated from the Loomis School, Windsor, Conn., and was a member of this year's graduating class at Yale University. He is a member of Alpha Sigma Phi.

Miss Morrison Weds Saturday

Miss Rose Lawton Morrison, niece of Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis, has selected Saturday as the day for her wedding to Mr. Hiram Bingham, jr., son of former Senator and Mrs. Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut. The ceremony will take place in the Grace Episcopal Church in Waycross, Ga.

After spending a few days in the home of the Binghams in Connecticut, Mr. Bingham and his bride will sail to London, where he is secretary at the United States Embassy.

Miss Morrison was presented at the Court of St. James in June and recently returned to this country.

Mr. and Mrs. Matheson To Give Informal Dance

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Matheson have issued invitations for a dance to be held next Tuesday at their home, Wellington, on the Mount Vernon highway, in honor of their two daughters, Miss Peggy Matheson and Miss Lucy Matheson, and their son, Mr. Malcolm Matheson, jr.

The dance, which will be informal, will commence at 9:30 o'clock in the evening.

To Be Wed September 12

Veverkas Sail; Debut Planned For Daughter

Envoy of Czechoslovakia and Family Will Visit Prague.

Although members of official and diplomatic society are returning to the Capital each day in great numbers from summer vacations, one popular family is leaving to be away several months. The Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Veverka with their daughter, Miss Nella Veverka and their son, Mr. Ferdinand Veverka, jr., sailed last night from New York for Europe.

They will go to their home in Prague, where the minister will be with them for about six weeks. Mme. Veverka, and the other members of the family will remain in the Czechoslovakian capital until after New Year's, and during the Christmas holidays, Miss Veverka, who was one of the popular debutantes of Washington last season, will make her bow to society in Prague.

Among those who are returning to the Capital this week, are the Minister of Venezuela and Senora de Arcaya, with their seven children and Senora de Arcaya's niece, Senorita Hercille Urrutia, who arrived in New York yesterday from their home in South America.

Dr. Arcaya and his wife, with their son, Pedro, jr., and their small daughter, Ignacia, sailed last April for France, and after spending some time in Paris, went to Venezuela, where their other children joined them at the close of the school year in June.

The First Secretary of the Peruvian Embassy, Dr. Juan Mendoza Almenara, returned to Washington yesterday from New York, where he was joined for the holiday week-end by Senora de Mendoza, who came from Dexter, Me. Senora de Mendoza has been spending the summer at the Maine resort and has returned there for several weeks more before joining her husband in the Capital.

The Secretary of the Legation of Guatemala, Senor Dr. Don Enrique Lopez-Herrarte, also returned to the Capital yesterday from New York, where he spent the week-end. The Attache of the Legation, Senor Don Francisco Palomo, returned yesterday from a holiday spent near Boston.

Mlle. Lanniee, Smith Simpson Plan Wedding

Belgian Consul's Daughter Engaged to Arlington County Man.

Washington society learns with interest of another engagement in diplomatic circles. M. Marcel Lanniee, Belgian Consul in Geneva, Switzerland, and Mme. Lanniee, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mlle. Henriette Stephanie Lanniee, to Mr. Smith Simpson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hendree Paine Simpson, of Arlington County, Va.

Mlle. Lanniee, who was born in France, attended school in Geneva and completed her education in England and Germany. She is now a member of the staff of the International Labor Organization in Geneva.

Her father was made a Knight of the Order of the Crown of Belgium for his services to the late King Albert. Through her mother, Mlle. Lanniee is descended from an old Huguenot family of the south of France.

Mr. Simpson was graduated from the University of Virginia and in 1931 he received the degree of bachelor of laws from Cornell University. Formerly he was special labor adviser and junior executive of the National Recovery Administration and is now assistant manager of the Asphalt Shingle and Roofing Institute in New York.

On his mother's side, Mr. Simpson is a lineal descendant of Dominie Everadus Bogardus, a minister of the Dutch Reformed Church, who was sent to New Amsterdam in 1633 to represent that church in this country, and whose son, William Bogardus, later became treasurer of New Amsterdam.

Through his father, the prospective bridegroom is descended from John Hendree Diefendorf, who changed his name to John Diefendorf Hendree and was the founder of the Hendree family in Virginia. Another of his ancestors was Edward Courtenay Palne, one of the early trustees of the University of Georgia.

Mary Meredith Engaged to Wed

Mr. and Mrs. William Farragut Meredith, of Princeton, N. J., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Morris Meredith, to Mr. Edwin Tyson Goodridge, son of Mrs. H. Perry Goodridge and Dr. Malcolm Goodridge.

Miss Meredith attended Miss Fine's School in Princeton and the Greenwood School in Baltimore. She is a member of the Junior League and was presented to society two years ago at the bachelors' cotillion in Baltimore.

Mr. Goodridge attended the Hill and Exeter Schools and was a member of the class of 1932 at Princeton University.

Col. Henry L. Roosevelt Ends Visit With Family

The Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Col. Henry L. Roosevelt, who spent the past week-end at Roosevelt Hall, his country home at Skaneateles, N. Y., with Mrs. Roosevelt and their daughter, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, will return to the Capital today.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Roosevelt, who have been in Skaneateles most of the summer will return to Washington the end of the month.

Mrs. Percy Quinn Hostess at Washington Club.

Mrs. Percy E. Quinn, widow of Representative Quinn, of Mississippi, will entertain at a reception this evening at the Washington Club in honor of her house guest, Miss Sue Fay Nall, of McComb City, Miss.

The reception will follow a program of poems, plays and character impersonations which Miss Nall will give at 8 o'clock.

Miss Nall, who is State president of the Speech Education Association and director of the McComb City Little Theater Movement, has been the honor guest at a number of luncheons, teas and dinners during her visit here, and her hostesses will assist Mrs. Quinn at the reception this evening. Miss Nall will return to Mississippi tomorrow evening.

Mrs. Bliss in California Until Middle of Month

Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, wife of the former United States Ambassador to the Argentine, has gone to California, where she is spending some time in Santa Barbara.

Mrs. Bliss will join Mr. Bliss at their Georgetown estate, Dumbarton Oaks, about the middle of the month.

Miss Ruth Souder Is Wed to Mr. Gue

Couple Leave on Wedding Trip to Chicago.

The wedding of Miss Ruth Purdum Souder, daughter of Mrs. Archie W. Souder and the late Mr. Souder, to Mr. Irvin L. Gue, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse M. Gue, took place Friday morning in the Methodist Episcopal Church parsonage in Damascus, Md. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Raymond Hunter Brown.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left on a motor trip to Chicago and Canada. They plan to return by way of Niagara Falls.

The bride is a graduate of Maryland State Normal School and has taught school at Woodfield for several years. The bridegroom attended school at Western Maryland College. They will make their home in Damascus.

Ball Will Honor Miss Welbourne

The Rev. and Mrs. J. Armistead Welbourne, of Leesburg, Va., will present their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Welbourne, to Baltimore society this winter and have issued invitations to a ball to be given in her honor Wednesday, September 12. The guests will include members of the younger sets of Baltimore and Leesburg and nearby country.

Mr. and Mrs. Moncure Lyon, of Purcellville, will entertain at dinner before the ball, in honor of their daughter, Miss Constance Lyon, who also will make her bow to Baltimore society this winter.

Mrs. Lambert Jones Gives Dinner Dance

Mr. and Mrs. Lambert Emilin Jones entertained at a dinner dance at the Columbia Country Club Monday night.

Among the guests were Mrs. Landon Head, Miss Doroothy Dial, Miss Nancy Berry, Miss Louise Turner, Ensign Minter Dial, Mr. Lynn Anderson, Mr. Murry Borden and Mr. John Brosnan.

Sylvan Theater Dance Recital Set Tomorrow

Bolling Field Officers and Wives Invited for Festival.

Many officers of the Air Corps stationed at Bolling Field will attend the summer festival program to be given by the Marian Chace dance group in the National Sylvan Theater at the Washington Monument tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. The festival will be preceded by a brief concert by the Marine Band at 7:30 o'clock.

The dance group includes Virginia Elmendorf, daughter of the late Capt. H. M. Elmendorf, of the Air Corps, and Mrs. Elmendorf, now of Washington. Little Miss Elmendorf will lead the junior group of dancers in a "Plastique" number, assisted by Eleanor King, daughter of Senator and Mrs. William H. King; Joanne Leasure, Marian Lester Shafer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Shafer, and others. She will also be seen in a "Suite for Trio" with Eleanor King and Marian Shafer.

The music for the "Suite for Trio" was written for the dance group by Edward Dawson, Washington composer, who will play the accompaniments for the concert.

In case of bad weather the dance program will be held Friday night.

The ushers will be members of the Players Club, headed by Miss Alice Louise Hunter.

Mr. and Mrs. James T. Jardine, of Foxhall Village, have had as their guest, Mrs. C. L. Forsling, of Ogden, Utah. Mrs. Forsling has been on an extended trip in the East, first visiting her former home in Tennessee. Mrs. Forsling is now visiting in Philadelphia and will go to New York before returning to Utah.

I LOST 38 POUNDS
—without diet or exercise
I was so fat people laughed behind my back. I tried everything I had ever heard of to reduce . . . diet, exercise, purgatives . . . but nothing helped. Purgatives weakened me. Exercise left me exhausted. And I lacked the will power to diet when all my friends were eating the rich, sweet foods I adored.
Then, when I'd almost given up hope, I learned about a simple corrective for abnormal obesity, known and prescribed by physicians the world over . . . a corrective that would change the food I ate into energy instead of excess fat. I found out that this simple corrective was put up, in convenient tablets containing the right quantity, by one of the best-known medical laboratories in America.
And so I took Marmola—4 tablets a day—and quickly my excess fat began to disappear. What delighted me even more was the way I felt as a result of taking it—so mentally alert, so full of pep!
Now I'm down to normal—and never again will I let myself put on that deadening load of useless fat. Whenever I start to gain again, I take Marmola. It keeps my weight exactly right.
That in brief is what thousands who have reduced the Marmola way might well tell you. Since 1907, more than 20,000,000 packages of Marmola have been purchased. Could you ask for any better recommendation than that?
Today—buy a package of Marmola, and start at once. You will soon experience Marmola's benefits. When you have gone far enough, stop taking Marmola. And you will bless the day you first discovered this marvelous reducing agent.

Doll Winners Owe Victory To Personality

Judges Discover Montrose Park Contest Is No Dumb Show.

THERE is dignity about an old doll, whose dress has been washed a hundred times, and whose wax face is lined with weather-beaten creases. There is beauty, too—the sort of beauty that goes more than bisque deep, and worlds of personality. So the judges, called to choose the winners in the doll contest held this week at the Montrose Park Playground, had a ticklish task.

There were six classifications, with four awards to be made in each. Hundreds of dolls were entered by girls 2 to 12 years old. Possessively maternal were these "mamas," who were certain their own darlings would be either the prettiest, the most unusual, the largest, the smallest, the oldest or the cleverest boudoir doll present. What's more, they had anticipated the event for two long weeks.

"Picking the prettiest doll was the most difficult," said a judge. "Perfection of workmanship and fancy clothes have a way of entering in. But we went beyond that. We based our judgment on the educational premise that character means beauty, and that a faded, time-worn dress need not detract from a lovely, expressive countenance.

"A doll that has given long service and brought comfort and joy to a little girl's heart, usually reflects the personality of its possessor. Even the doll's clothes take on the character of the owner in time. A certain beauty and charm results—an intangible something that the newer doll lacks."

The Prettiest Doll.

Lucy Abell, 10, whose baby doll was comparatively small, and obviously enjoyed, won first place in this classification over larger and fancier dolls submitted. Second prettiest were the twin dolls of twin sisters, Giovanni and Dolores Mattarre, while third place went to Beulah Sullivan and fourth to Sylvia Levinson.

Judging the most unusual doll was not so hard, and infinitely more fun, said the judges. A quaint dwarf doll, with hunch back, whiskers and detachable glasses was judged winner, much to the delight of its owner, 12 year-old Marian Silcott. A doll, made of palm leaf and garbed like a Sister of Charity, came second. It was owned by Carol Torreyson. Third place went to an Indian squaw doll, with real, straight black hair, shawl and beads, owned by Anora Mattarre, and fourth place to a colored mammy doll whose head was made of a black nipple, owned by Peggy Rhodes.

The next most interesting classification was for the oldest doll, the single honor going to the group of little women dolls, entered by Mary Westlein, 12. Belonging to her greatgrandmother, Mary's dolls, representing Amy, Jo and Beth, of the Louisa Alcott story, are said to be 100 years old. They are made of fine porcelain, their period costumes lined with lace and net.

First honors in the largest doll classification went to the one entered by Claire Mortfield, 9, the be-frilled "baby" being almost half the size of its owner, and wearing the latter's first coat and bonnet.

Home-Made Toy Wins.

Cassie Baker, 12, who made a beautiful boudoir doll of green organdie, won first award in that classification. This entry, because of the initiative and ingeniousness of its owner, nosed out fancier "candidates" of the more commercial variety, according to the judges.

First award in the contest was a treat of a movie, with Mrs. Pauline Woodruff, playground supervisor, acting as hostess. Second, third and fourth honors were indicated by blue, red and white ribbons pinned by the judges on the entries.

"Prizes should be eliminated, however," said Mrs. Woodruff. "Play contests and exhibitions should be held for the love of the work involved—not with competitive awards as a goal. Such objectives often prompt parents who can not afford it to purchase dolls for their daughters to enter. Then, when they do not win the prize, there is disappointment and sometimes, even bitterness."

"The main benefit derived from a doll contest, for instance, is the stimulation of constructive interest on the part of the doll owners. It teaches them to appreciate character rather than superficiality in the make-up of their toys."

Costume Jewelry Shines With Gold

Chicago, Sept. 4 (AP).—New fall costume jewelry has gone on the gold standard. Gold-finished bracelets, some of them two inches wide, necklaces, clips and earrings are being widely shown as smart accents for fall costumes. Also gold-finished metal is being used cleverly in combination with wood and either crystal or jade.

But if one is looking for something very novel there are bracelets styled like the rim of a gay, merry little red drum. And the latest version of "bells on her fingers and bells on her toes" is bells on her bracelets and bells on her clips. Several strands of colored beads form a bracelet, and from the outer edge at intervals dangle tinkling little silver-finished bells.

If these aren't unusual enough, there is the cock's comb jewelry. In a modernistic way bracelets and clips (it is to be noted that bracelets and clips are closer pals than ever this season) are fashioned in gold or silver-finished metal after the lines of a rooster's crest. Sometimes they are called cogwheel jewelry.

Another new item, dubbed "direct from Paris," is the leaf clip. Perched atop a leaf about an inch long of moss agate is a perky little frog of semiprecious stone.

Amber jewelry is especially good.

A Better Baby Doll and Her Owner

PILLAR TO POST

DIANA, goddess of the hunt, has a modern prototype in Mrs. Robert Glass Vance, National woman champion of skeet. As she moved over the green grass of the National Capital Skeet Club, with her gun pointed at the flying targets, the galleries were struck with her lithe grace, the perfection of her profile. This "gun-woman" is all that is feminine, with a lovely color in her cheeks that deepens with the excitement of the game.

• • • •

She was the "leading lady" in a colorful scene last Sunday at the local skeet club. The September sunshine was golden, and the white station markers and trap-houses against the deep, green grass and trees provided a beautiful background for bright sports frocks and shooting coats emblazoned with insignias of out-of-town clubs. There was a holiday atmosphere with automobiles ranged in a semicircle four and five cars deep; the call of the shooters; the smart sound of the guns; sometimes sunlight glittering on target fragments.

• • • •

Mrs. Vance is the wife of a Boston physician, who is a member of the all-American skeet team and who made the best individual score among the men in this North-South skeet championship. The couple are representative of "skeet's shootin'es famblies," which is the label on a file kept by the National Skeet Shooting Association.

• • • •

The Petmecky family of Texas is probably the Nation's most outstanding example of the benefits of skeet as a sport for everyone. There are some 13 Petmeckys shooting skeet, covering three generations and both sexes. The Williams family of Chevy Chase is also remarkable for skeet playing. Lawrence E. Williams, sr., scores over 90 per cent, Mrs. Lawrence Williams was runner-up in the recent woman's championship match, and Larry Williams jr., 11 years old, holds the world's junior championship. (He is also noted in Washington as the editor of the Thornapple Street News.)

• • • •

When Mrs. Williams was married she was terrified upon finding out that her husband always slept with a gun under his pillow. She was so afraid of guns that this practice almost caused her to go home to her mother. Every morning she would gingerly lift it from under the pillow, carefully pointing away from her, and put it in the bureau drawer. Came a night when burglars ransacked their house with the Williams' sleeping peacefully through it all (gun under pillow), and the practice was discontinued.

• • • •

About a year ago Mrs. Williams' fascination for the flying targets overcame her fear of guns. The spinning targets, black and round, are imbued with something which made her want to step up with a gun and break them like she had seen her husband and son do so many times. And it wasn't long before she could shoot par in skeet (which is "25 straight") and she was made a member of the Twenty-fivers Club and given a button to wear.

Other women skeet enthusiasts here are Mrs. William C. Coe, champion for the State of Maryland; Mrs. Edmund Jones, Mrs. Shannon Butts, Mrs. Houghton, Mrs. A. F. Prescott and Miss Wright.

Underthings Lacked Allure In Romantic Medieval Era

Underthings as they were and weren't in the centuries-long era synonymous with romance, the Middle Ages, are described in this, the third article in a series on scanties.

By Irene Hasbrook.

WHEN knights set their faces East to fight the Holy Wars, troubadours sang gayly and sadly at the feet of every lovely chatelaine, the courts of love were in their glamorous full flower, feminine underthings contrarily hit one of the most undecorative spots in their long erratic career.

The dress of the women of the early Middle Ages was a sort of sartorial hangover from classical antiquity, mixed not very judiciously with clothes ideas borrowed from the barbarian Gauls. The same type of underthings worn by Grecian and Roman well-dressed women were carried over into the later era, increased in quantity and decreased in attractiveness.

Gracious Exterior.

The outer dress of the early Middle Ages lady had beauty of line and an easy grace. The women looking from the stained glass windows of great Gothic cathedrals give an idea of the gracious suavity of clothes of the time. But underneath it was another thing again.

A tunic such as Roman women wore occasionally was in fashion. it was rather brief but evidently quite shapeless and lacking in allure. Then there was still another tunic, this one longer. Other garments are mentioned by medieval commentators, but in such a hesitant manner no clear idea can be formed of them except that they were many and probably not attractive.

Of scanties, panties, bloomers, drawers and the other varieties of that great fashion family—there was none. This lack was bequeathed by classical ladies who never had heard of anything of the sort.

Fancier and Uncomfortable.

Somewhere in the tenth century a dormant, decorative sense reasserted itself and underthings became a little fancier. The tunics or petticoats were bordered with ornamentation, usually of embroidery. Color, which had been out for several centuries as far as underthings were concerned, returned to fashion.

But this style renascence brought discomfort in its track. The former easy flow of the outer dress was brought to sudden stop at the new tight waistline. And whenever in dress history waistlines become defined, something is done to make waists smaller. So the corset, or some form of it, started on the upcurve of its long career.

Exactly what it was like can't be determined. "By the 12th century, at the latest, portraits represent the dress as indisputably fitted over something decidedly hard," writes Robert Cortes Holliday in his "Unmentionables," a survey of the undergarment situation through the ages. So it is obvious the sex was already conditioning itself for more and tighter lacing yet to come.

Isabelle's Fashion Coup.

One cheating fashion foible of late medieval times was started by Isabelle, of Bavaria, Queen of Charles VI of France and a great power in the style world of the time. She innovated the craze of wearing linen underwear, a craze which only queens and nobility could afford in those days of scratchy wolls. Dresses were slashed at the sleeves and at the hips better to show off these luxuries.

As some buildings present faces of shining white stone and sides and backs of cheap brick, so medieval ladies, after the great Isabelle, kept their linen showing through the slashes, but forgot to mention that where the slashes weren't the underthings were of the much-despised wool.

Read in tomorrow's Post how the flirtatious ribbon is added to underthings and scanties start emerging from their several thousand years of obscurity.

Reduction of Suicides Possible, Says Doctor

Most suicides could be prevented by proper psychiatric treatment, Dr. William L. Russell, psychiatric director of the New York Hospital, said yesterday in the annual report of the hospital.

"The large majority of persons who commit suicide are suffering from depression from which they would, if treated, recover. A better and more effective understanding of the subject by physicians and the public would result in the saving of thousands of useful lives," he asserted.

Wisconsin U. Operates Night Club of Its Own

College authorities, usually so dampening to young students who want to go night-clubbing, have pulled an about-face at the University of Wisconsin and established a night club on the premises.

It is hardly what might be called a hot spot—nothing stronger than 3.2 beer is sold — but it draws crowds of collegians and coeds. It has operated on a week-end basis all summer and has been so successful it will be continued through the college year.

Bashful Talker Requests Secret of Making Conversation.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Can you give me any suggestions on how to become an interesting conversationalist? Since early youth I have been very backward in this respect. I was taught that a child should be seen and not heard, and while that may be all right in its way, I am finding the habit of silence very hard to overcome now that I am grown, and I also observe people haven't much time for a person who can't make light conversation.

• • • •

Once in a while, when I am moved to make some contribution to conversation going on in a group, it seems to me a hollow silence follows and people immediately switch to some other topic.

I seem to be cursed with a faculty for killing their interest in what they are talking about. How do you explain this? And what can I do about it?

DUMB.

Be a Good Listener.

DEAR DUMB: The first thing you can do is rid yourself of apologetic self-consciousness about your disinclination to talk. An agreeable, attentive, listening silence is a great social asset which needs only an occasional word or sentence to show it to excellent advantage.

A strained, awkward, laboring silence; a brooding, inattentive silence; or the nervous silence which labels its possessor as waiting the first opportunity to thrust the oar of his opinion into the stream of talk, are the silences to be avoided.

• • • •

The ability to engage in light conversation can be developed. Three things will be helpful: A well-informed mind, a genuine interest in what the other person has to say about the subject under discussion, and a retentive memory.

The well-informed mind never takes the attitude of knowing all there is to know, or all it wishes to know, about the subjects with which it has dealt. Rather, it seems filled with eager desire to compare notes with the other person's findings along the same lines. It is a mind which effortlessly yields up topics for others to talk about.

• • • •

Genuine interest in the other person's point of view has almost limitless value. It lights up one's face, adds to one's understanding of human nature; gives the other fellow a high estimate of one's intelligence; and invites a confidential self-giving on the part of the speaker which creates a subtle bond of kinship between him and his listener. It makes for mutual friendliness of feeling. It never offends, as even the best meant words sometimes do.

• • • •

A retentive memory permits one to reflect in solitude over conversations one has listened to, or had part in. It gives one ideas for new angles from which to approach a hackneyed conversational topic; it sometimes reveals an unexpected insight into another's personality, which passed unnoticed at the time the words were spoken; and it is always flattering to man or woman to have some word of wisdom uttered on a past occasion recalled to mind at a later date, before a new audience.

• • • •

As for the hollow silence which you feel follows your every conversational offering, that might only be your imagination. People who talk little are usually introverts, and introverts are usually afflicted with a sense of inferiority, not necessarily well founded.

If it isn't imagination, it might be due to one of several causes. Perhaps you give a dogmatic sound to your sentences. Perhaps you say flatly, or curtly—or at least, speak with such nervous quickness as to sound curt—"I think so-and-so," or, "I don't think so-and-so."

• • • •

Perhaps you only can speak to disclose what you know about a subject; never in applause or appreciation of what others have said. Or it may be, in embarrassed desire to let others know you can articulate, you offer inanities and banalities and hackneyed phrases in place of thoughts with an original flavor and a pleasing turn.

• • • •

Try to develop a speaking silence which best suits your own personality. A quiet, absorbed silence, attentive to each speaker, if you are essentially a serious type of person, or a lively, vital silence—mute eloquence of a dynamic, impressionable mind—if you are potentially vivacious. Then wait your conversational turn, and when it comes offer a footnote of applause to others' opinions, rather than try to interject your own.

Once you have found the key to others' confidences, and are more socially at ease, you can begin to develop initiative in conversation.

Piccard Scares Wife With Pair of Trousers

Brussels, Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Prof. August Piccard frightened his wife white with a pair of trousers recently, so one story goes.

The professor seemed to have only one suit of clothes, a student noticed. The student, son of a cloth manufacturer, begged the professor to accept a suit as a gift. The professor assented, the suit was made and he set off to the university garbed in it.

Mme. Piccard found his presumably only pair of trousers hanging over the end of the bed and was disturbed for hours by the thought her husband was roaming the university pant-less.

She Claims a Clean-Up

Underwood & Underwood.

Women voters have kept the pledge of the early suffragists—they have improved politics, says Mrs. James H. Wolfe, acting chairman of the women's division of the National Democratic committee.

Women at Last Achieve Uplift In Politics, Division Head Says

EARLY suffragists were prone to ask the ballot on the plea of making the world better. Chief implied reform was the ousting of fat, check-suited political bosses.

Men laughed at these promises and they laughed again after women had taken their fling at the ballot. Things were no better, no worse—so it was repeatedly pointed out. After all, there was no sex in politics.

Now these conclusions are questioned by a modern feminine political leader. Women have made and are making the world better with their ballots, maintains Mrs. James H. Wolfe, acting chairman of the women's division of the National Democratic committee. Mrs. Wolfe, who recently came here from Utah, where she was first vice chairman of the State Democratic committee, also regional adviser for the Seventh District, is typical of the modern woman in politics.

More Realistic Than Men.

Conviction—not even the influence of a Democratic husband—led her to her political faith, she maintains, and she believes women today, more than men, are casting aside sentiment and tradition in their voting.

"Instead of being swayed by whim or emotion women are approaching political problems with a realistic, scientific attitude," she said.

While some of the early suffragists may have thought of the ballot chiefly as a weapon for political reform, Mrs. Wolfe points out, the modern woman thinks of it in terms of social legislation.

"Women of Congress," she said, "have given loyal support to social welfare legislation. It has been the same in State Legislatures. At one time we had five women in the Utah Legislature and they introduced most of the social measures that were passed."

Unlike those who say woman should have the vote as a matter of justice and that it is nobody's business what she does with it, Mrs. Wolfe believes women as a sex have a definite responsibility in politics—the promotion of the welfare of mothers, children, the aged, the handicapped and the underprivileged.

Jobless Insurance Disciple.

In her own public career, which has included activity in church and clubs, with the adult education movement, with the League of Women Voters, of which she is a past State president, and with parent-teacher organizations, Mrs. Wolfe has been especially interested in unemployment insurance, minimum wage laws and the prevention of child labor. The mother of five children, all of school age, she is keenly alive to the problems of youth. Most women, she believes, carry this maternal solicitation into politics.

"Undoubtedly women have influenced the stands and platforms of their parties along social lines," she says. "Even though they have not overhauled politics in the way some persons expected."

Mrs. Wolfe's children, who have been on their grandfather's ranch this summer, will soon come to Washington to spend the winter with their mother and attend school.

Mrs. Wolfe is acting as chairman of the Democratic women's division during the leave of absence of Miss Mollie Dewson.

Care of Hair Is Individual's Own Problem

Here's Advice on Methods of Treating Three Types of Scalp.

By Frances Mangum.

GENERALITIES do not apply to hair. The routine shampoo with just any kind of soap is well enough for cleanliness, but it will never correct individual scalp and hair problems. There are specific treatments for different troubles and each one should be followed carefully to have beneficial results.

If you have dry hair:

1—Avoid sunburning your hair and scalp.
2—Do not wear a tight hat that binds the head and constricts circulation.
3—Avoid excessive heat on dry hair.
4—Do not shampoo oftener than once every two weeks.
5—Hot oil shampoos are fine for your hair.
6—Use a waving lotion instead of water to set your wave.
7—Massage your scalp every night with a lubricating scalp pomade or oily tonic.
8—Brush your hair to stimulate natural oil glands.

If you have oily hair:

2—Drink ten glasses of water a day.
3—Wash your hair once every week or ten days.
4—Use tar shampoos frequently.
5—Between washings keep your hair clean by using a special dry shampoo.
6—Brush your hair daily.

If you have dandruff:

1—Brush your hair morning and night and make sure that your brushes are kept scrupulously clean.
2—Have a hot oil shampoo every week.
3—Massage your scalp every day with an oily tonic.
4—If the dandruff is an oily kind with a greasy scale, and there are red splotches on the scalp when it peels off, consult a good hair specialist or dermatologist.

Needle Wizard Does Wonders For Loveliness

That Disturbing Trace of Mustache Is Erased With Skill.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

With 12 years of experience back of him he wields his 10 electric needles with amazing skill. In 20 minutes time he has successfully cleared a small area of its unsightly growth for all time to come.

Those who know about electrolysis will immediately realize that a man who can work 10 needles at once is little short of a wonder. It takes skill to use three or four needles, for each one must touch the papilla and put that out of whack before the hair growth is permanently destroyed. But this gentleman deftly and unerringly works so quickly that almost before you know it, your hair troubles are definitely extinguished.

To a great many women electrolysis has a terrifying meaning. They imagine a kind of ogre plunging a highly charged needle into their skin and demanding a small fortune for his trouble. If they are bothered with distressing growths of hair on the face, chest or hands, they would do well to drop by and have a sensible discussion with this master electrolysist. They will find his rates are extremely reasonable and the "operation" isn't half as bad as pulling eyebrows.

Ash Trays for Gifts.

A set of four ash trays, all looking beautifully "cloisonned," is one of the most attractive gift suggestions in a local gift shop. Those who manage to resist its appeal as a gift for somebody else usually end by buying it for a gift to themselves.

Each little tray is in a different design of colorful figures. Fifty cents for the four.

Tissues for Travelers.

A beauty expert, famous for her long list of fine preparations and her luxurious salons that dot the world, never fails to come forward each season with some new beauty item. Already one of her most popular is a pack of travel tissues, neatly done up in a pink cardboard folder, flat and square. The tissues are easily removed from this in convenient sequence.

They are a lovely soft shell color, soft as down, and extremely absorbent. You won't want to be without them on your travels.

Weight Test for Hose.

Five hundred and six pounds of automobile motor hang suspended from the ceiling by the strength of one pair of hose!

A woman can see this extraordinary sight with her own eyes. When she reaches her own conclusions she can't miss realizing that any hose that will support a motor must be strong and sturdy. And strong and sturdy hose, she deduces, will last her long and well.

The hose proven in this manner are carried exclusively by one store. Two types, chiffon and service weight, both sell for less than a dollar.

How Do Your Lashes Grow?

Long, luxuriant eyelashes are the fond dream of every woman, and easily within her grasp if she has patience, perseverance, and a jar of eyelash cream.

There is a cream which has been warmly praised by numbers of women who have tested its efficiency. Of course there are those who say, "It doesn't do a bit of good," but they are the ones who have used it only a week or two, and haphazardly, even then.

It should be applied to the lashes every morning and every night, and then with a small eyelash brush. It gives them a shiny, lustrous look, and a brand new incentive to grow.

Sweater Suits at $5.95.

Needed: A Paul Revere to ride through the country and warn women here and there that they'd better buy while the buying is good. Already there is talk of higher dress prices and in many instances there are higher prices.

A local shop, however, has some jaunty little sweater suits selling now for $5.95.

Almost everyone has seen the typical $5.95 sweater suit, and many people who have bought have been greatly annoyed to see how many similar suits there are. In this case there are such a number and variety of styles that one is not likely to be constantly embarrassed by meeting her twin costume.

Long-Lived Flowers.

Flowers that will last this winter and the next, too. Flowers that are like crystallized ice flowers reflecting the colors of a sunset. Flowers like spun crystal with silver stems. Blown glass bubbles growing off of silver stems from clear glass.

A Connecticut avenue store has a number of flower centerpieces designed by an artist for artistic table decoration. They are exquisitely wrought from glass and delicately tinted. The stems are silver threads, and the leaves green glass.

Bags, Like Costumes, Follow Tailored and Dressy Styles

Simple Outlines With Conservative Trimming Bring Accessories Into Strict Harmony With Autumn Silhouette.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—"Simple outlines. Little trimming, and what little there is quiet and restrained and blending in with the outlines." Sounds like another description of the fall costume silhuette, doesn't it? But it's a description of new fall handbags—the ones you carry with the new simplified costume.

And that shows how closely allied the costume and its smart accessories are * * * when a description of one fits the other.

And just as the trimmings on both costumes and handbags blend in with the outlines, so the smart handbag blends in with the outlines of the costume, becoming, really, another bit of trimming.

When you go to select your new bags, you'll find yourself separating them into two distinct classes. Of one you'll think, "That would be nice with my tailored dress." While the next will just as definitely seem to belong with your dressy coat.

Not Fussy, but Formal.

The dressy bags aren't fussed up * * * that's not the reason they seem dressy. It's just that they seem a little more formalized in material, with their trimmings slightly softer and more delicate. Just the way the fashion goes in dresses.

And you won't call the tailored bags absolutely plain, either. They have many interesting things about them in the way of shape or material or fastening.

For instance * * * the envelope bag of medium size is still the one most women like best to carry with a tailored costume. And that, of course, is not a new fashion. But neither need it be a dull one.

Look at the bag sketched at the upper left in the illustration. That's a fine example of new fall envelopes such as you'd carry with a tailored outfit. It's simple in outline and its trimming blends right in as part of the outline. For the trimming is just those curved lines made by the welting in the bottom. But it is new looking and makes the bag not absolutely plain.

Combinations of Material.

When it isn't an envelope bag, the one most often carried with a tailored costume is the bag with a frame at the top. In these the only decoration * * * a combination, perhaps, of metal and composition.

It's easy to carry * * * either with the hand over the handle or, when the handle is deeper, with the bag swung over the arm.

More Dressed Up.

When you come to dressy bags you'll still find envelopes and frame bags * * * just a bit more dressed up than the tailored ones.

They'll have rows and rows of stitching, tucks, pleats or dantier fastenings such as marcasite. But all these details will still blend in with the bag's outlines.

And there are more individual bags, too, such as the third bag in the sketch. This has a deep frame with a scalloped top which makes it look dressy, and the bottom flares out in a skirt-like way. Such a bag might have its top of leather and its skirt of fabric braid.

And this is a fine example of how dressy a bag can look though it is very simple in outline and entirely minus fussy extra trimmings.

Bags of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Trichinosis.

The human family is afflicted with several diseases caused by parasites. Some of these are acquired through eating the flesh of infected animals.

Trichinella spiralis is the name attached to a wormlike parasite that infects swine. It is particularly dangerous as the encysted form may live for a long time in the muscles of an animal.

In human beings the disease caused by this parasite is known as trichinosis. When infested meat is eaten the outer wall of the worm cyst is digested and the worm liberated. The worm itself is able to withstand digestion. The parasites breed in the intestine, and when the larvae are discharged from the adult females the young make their way into the muscles via the blood and the lymph.

The symptoms accompanying this infection in humans are fever, an acute inflammatory reaction in the gastrointestinal tract, nausea and vomiting, and diarrhea accompanied by pain and prostration. After a few days there is a characteristic swelling of the face, particularly of the upper eyelids.

In many cases there is gradual recovery from the acute symptoms, followed by severe muscular pains due to the invasion of the muscle fibers by the parasite. In mild cases the disease usually terminates at the end of two weeks; in severe infections six to eight weeks or longer.

Reliable statistics indicate that about 2 per cent of swine in the United States are infested with trichinae, and the the disease in human beings follows the consumption of infested pork that has not been properly cooked. Occasionally epidemics have been traced to improperly cooked hamburger, which is presumably ground beef. When this occurs it has been found that pork has been mixed with beef, or that beef has been passed through a machine that has been used for grinding pork.

Treatment is usually ineffective unless it can be started before the young worms invade the muscle tissue. If the disease is recognized early the physcian knows the importance of clearing out the gastrointestinal tract by means of vigorous cathartics.

Capital Kitchen

By Susan Mills.

PEOPLE like to reminisce, even in cooking. Sometimes old-time cooking goes back farther than memory is able, and here are some recipes that you won't remember, but will enjoy.

Old-Fashioned Ginger Cookies.

Add 1-3 cup cold water to the contents of a package of gingerbread, mix well, and drop mixture by teaspoonfuls on a greased baking pan. Bake in a moderate oven about 12 minutes or until slightly firm to the touch. Makes about 30 cookies.

Virginia Spoon Bread.

½ cup corn meal
½ teasp. salt
2 cups milk
2 eggs.

Place the corn meal and salt in a saucepan; stir in 1½ cups milk. Stir over direct heat until a thick mush is formed or about 2 minutes. Remove from stove and stir in 1 egg, unbeaten. Mix thoroughly and turn into a buttered baking dish suitable for serving at the table. Beat the second egg slightly in the saucepan in which the mush was cooked, stir in the remainder of the milk. Pour the egg and milk mixture over the mush; cut the mush with a knife so that the two mixtures are only partially mixed. Bake in a moderate oven 375 degrees F. for 30 minutes or until the top is puffed and brown. Serve from the baking dish with a spoon. Eat with butter, salt, and pepper or with butter and syrup.

Colonial Tea Cakes.

Add 1 cup of water to the contents of a package of gingerbread mix. Mix thoroughly, and pour batter into oiled muffin tins. Bake in a moderate oven. When done, remove from pans, cut a cone-shaped piece out of the top of each little cake. Fill hollows with apple butter, replace top piece. Serve warm.

If you prefer, use whipped cream and nutmeats for filling.

Summer Diet Finds Variety In Chop Suey

"Convertible" Recipe Uses Choice of Vegetables and Meats.

CHOP SUEY is a sort of family name for dishes of a kind, just as we have various stews or chowders. It does not necessarily contain the same ingredients every time. The Chinese like their food shredded or chopped up—in fact it is a rule of the ancient Chinese philosopher, Confucius, that "the proportion of meat should not be more than that of vegetables," and that the Chinese should not eat anything that was not properly cut in small pieces.

The combination depends somewhat on what you can get at the season of the year when you make this dish. The meat may be pork or beef or chicken. The Chinese use such vegetables as water chestnuts, lily root, bean sprouts, and bamboo shoots.

In some places you can buy these real Chinese ingredients, but if you can't get them you can produce a very good chop suey by substituting American vegetables of similar texture and flavor.

Soy Sauce Is Hallmark.

Soy sauce gives the whole dish a characteristic taste, and it can be bought in bottles almost anywhere. So you can use celery, radishes, (in summer), Jerusalem artichokes (in winter), onions, and green peppers, seasoned with soy sauce. Of course rice always accompanies chop suey.

The Chinese like their rice cooked dry and flaky just as the best American cooks do. Two important points in making chop suey are to brown the pieces of meat and cook the vegetables only a few minutes, so that they keep some of their crispness.

The Bureau of Home Economics has worked out the following recipe for an Americanized chop suey. You can use cooked chicken instead of pork if you like. Chop suey is a good summer dish because you can make it entirely on the top of the stove and it is what we call a "one-dish meal," containing both vegetables and meat.

Pork Chop Suey.

1½ to 2 cups shredded cooked lean pork
2 cups shredded onion
2 cups shredded celery
2 cups meat broth or thin gravy
2 cups sliced raw Jerusalem artichokes or radishes
1 green pepper shredded
4 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons fat
1 tablespoon cold water
1 teaspoon cornstarch
Salt to taste

Brown the meat lightly in half the fat and remove from the skillet. Cook the pepper and onion in the rest of the fat a few minutes. Add the celery, meat, salt, broth or gravy, cover, and simmer for five minutes. Mix the cornstarch and water until smooth, stir into the mixture, and cook for a few minutes longer. Add the artichokes or radishes, or substitute for them 1 cup of sliced Brazil nuts. Add soy sauce in sufficient quantity to give the desired flavor and then salt to taste. Serve with hot, flaky rice.

What Today Means

"Virgo."

IF September 5 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. until midnight.

On this date it might be very advisable to refrain, if tempted to do so with the idea of being witty, from calling a subordinate, coworker or friend, by a nickname which might be construed as reflecting on his race, creed or color. Nicknames through the shortening of the full name, or inspired by affection, are extremely objectionable and are likely to cause resentment. Business should prove brisk enough on this date, to keep those engaged in it hustling, with results that should prove very gratifying. By making use of the telephone, to confirm any engagement you may have, might prevent your losing valuable time as well as the possibility of suffering disappointment. Impromptu entertaining of friends might give them a delightful surprise and be a very enjoyable way to pay off a social obligation, which it might be well to discharge. Married and engaged couples, as well as those seeking to win a mate, might find it advantageous to seek amusement this evening somewhere else rather than in one of their own homes.

If a woman and September 5 is your natal day you may find it will make you happier and more prosperous if you think more of the serious things in life and give less thought to simply having a good time. You should be a very good mathematician, so bookkeeping or work requiring quick and accurate figuring should interest you. You should be able to become quite an expert bridge and whist player, which might give you an excellent opportunity, through the giving of lessons, to make a comfortable income. Socially you have every right to expect popularity. Your success in matrimony may depend entirely upon your own attitude to your husband.

The child born on September 5, when old enough, should be encouraged to take an interest in things of a mechanical nature. It may prove a very practical type of child, not readily understood unless studied. It may not wear its heart on its sleeve, but it will in reality have a tremendous amount of affection and crave love.

If a man and September 5 is your birth anniversary, your leaning is toward things of artistic worth. You rise far above the sordid details of everyday business affairs, even if you of necessity have to let them absorb most of your thoughts. If only as a hobby you should take up some form of artistic work.

HONEYMOON MOUNTAIN

by Frances Shelley Wees

DEBORAH was staring at her.

"I don't think I care to discuss it any further," she said quietly, "if you don't mind, Pilar."

"There isn't much more to say, is there? Except that I suppose I ought to thank you for explaining it to me, Deborah. I have been . . . troubled. You can understand."

"Yes," she said.

"Bryn is very difficult," Pilar sighed. "I think this has been the worst fright he has given me. He's wildly interested in people, different kinds of people, the farther from his own kind, the better. But he always comes back in the end, I have discovered that. When he came back from Thibet," she said with a smile, "he brought me this ruby. Isn't it a beauty?"

The ruby flashed and glowed on her fingers.

"It is very lovely," Deborah said gently.

Gary tapped on the door. "Miss Deborah," he said. "Mr. Bryn would like a dry pair of shoes. Might I go through and get them?"

"Certainly, Gary."

He sidled past her and opened the door on the left. Pilar, glancing through, saw the narrow white bed against the other wall. With a deep breath, she looked at Deborah and smiled.

"It's all very romantic, isn't it?" she said. "Thank you for telling me, Deborah. It makes rather a difference."

Bryn had been over in the station talking to Joe. His father was on guard, with the spyglass and the horn, he told Bryn in a conspirator's tone. Bryn warned him again to be on the lookout tonight particularly at least until 9 o'clock. Grandther never stayed up later than 9, and if Graham was brave enough to attempt in the dark the unfamiliar mountain road, doubly precarious after last night's rain, they could take care of him without a warning.

He sauntered back toward the little bridge.

His eye caught the flutter of a skirt, and his heart turned a complete double somersault. If he had been in any need of proof as to his emotional condition, he had it then. But the skirt did not belong to Deborah. He went forward without interest to meet Pilar.

She was leaning over the railing to look into the water. Dusk had already crept beneath the overhanging willows. Bryn stopped beside her. "You know," she said, "I don't blame you for burying yourself away up here, Bryn. It's so far back in Nature that I don't suppose you've ever had quite the same experience before, have you?"

Pilar Had Technique.

"No," he replied. "Never."

After a moment Pilar said softly, "Are you cross because I came?"

"No. Only I don't think you'll find it particularly amusing, Pilar. A day or two will drive you mad."

"On the contrary," she said. "I find it tremendously amusing. Drama, Bryn, and romance."

Bryn turned his head, and their eyes met. Pilar's dropped, after a moment, in the old familiar way. It was part of her technique, that almost never failed.

"Deborah told me her story today," she said.

"Deborah?" he repeated.

"She seemed to think I ought to be told. Bryn. Had you . . . talked to ner about me?"

"Never," Bryn said promptly.

"Oh," Pilar murmured. "I had an idea you had. Whatever she knew, she wanted me to understand just what the situation was between you. Dear quaint little thing!

"What did she say the . . . situation was between us, then?"

"Why, simply that this wasn't, as all of us thought, a love match after all. That it was simply a marriage de convenance. I don't quite know why you, of all people, Bryn, had to tangle yourself in it.

Bryn's Decision.

"So she told you we weren't in love with each other?"

"Yes, quite without restraint. It seems rather queer that a girl could be so absolutely cool and business-like about her marriage. But of course it is not in the least romantic to her. She is a pretty thing, isn't she, Bryn?"

"Yes."

"Don't be stupid, Bryn. The girl doesn't expect you to stick it out. Look here, it's only a matter of money, isn't it? Why can't you give her the amount of her legacy, whatever it is, and get your freedom at once?"

Bryn laughed. To Pilar it was not exactly a pleasant laugh. "I'm not sacrificing my life," he said.

"What do you mean" she asked, sharply.

"Leaving here would be sacrificing my life, Pilar. Don't you understand?"

"Are you trying to tell me that you're in love with her?"

"That is my general idea."

"You're Mad."

Pilar was cold, motionless, "Have you told her so?"

"She doesn't give me a chance." She came a step closer. "Listen, Bryn," she said, under her breath. "You're bewitched. You're mad. You can't marry Deborah. You can't do it."

"I can," Bryn said happily. "I have."

She made a despairing gesture. "I mean . . . a real marriage. Why, she'd drive you crazy, Bryn! She's nothing but an ignorant child, pretty, I grant you, but as insipid as . . . brook water. In two years—in five years, what are you going to have for a wife? Don't be carried away by a pretty face. You need intelligence, companionship, a wife who is your equal, who understands your position in the world and can help you carry it off."

Bryn was looking at her, unhappily, compassionately. "I'm sorry, Pilar," he said gently. "I'm afraid it's not I who am making the mistake about life. You are not quite fair to Deborah, but we will pass that over. I never knew what it was to be in love until I saw Deborah."

Must See Deborah.

Pilar stood motionless, her hands clasped tightly around the railing, staring at him. He suggested that they go in, but she shook her head and did not answer, and Bryn did not wait.

Heaven only knew what Pilar had said to her, he told himself, as he raced up the long stairs. He reached the door of her sitting room. He straightened his shoulders. He rapped lightly on the door. She would be dressing for dinner, as everyone must be but himself and Pilar.

"Yes?" her voice answered, softly.

"It's I, Bryn," he said. "I want to tell you something."

"Just a minute." And, after the minute, she came out.

She was wearing a dress he had never seen, another old-fashioned one, the quaintest one possible, but her beauty in it took his breath away.

"You wanted to tell me something?"

Afraid to Tell.

Bryn looked at her. There she was, the girl he loved, with his wedding ring on her finger; and he had come racing to tell her that he loved her, and now that she was here before him, waiting, he was afraid.

"Aren't you going to tell me something?" Deborah repeated.

Bryn started. "Yes," he muttered. "Deborah, that is . . . did she . . . I mean, what did Pilar say to you this morning? Did she try to make you think that . . ."

Deborah shook her head. "It doesn't matter," she said gently. "I understand."

"You . . . you don't understand," he protested. "Im trying to say that whatever she told you was wrong."

Nailing Pilar's Lies.

Her glance dropped quickly to her hands, clasped together before her. "It is true," she said with conviction.

"What is?" Bryn said in desperation.

Deborah was silent for a long moment. "Let's not discuss it, Bryn. It isn't necessary."

"Did she suggest," Bryn demanded tensely, "that I was, or ever had been, in love with her? I suppose that's not a question a man ought to ask, but I think I'm justified. I'm just beginning to wake up to a number of things.

Deborah's eyes darkened. "She showed me her ring."

"What ring?"

"The ruby you gave her."

"Oh," Bryn said after a moment. He turned and walked away across the room. He couldn't stand being there so close to her without touching her, and there was still too much between them to think of touching her. "Did she suggest it was an engagement ring, Deborah?"

Business Transaction.

"I . . . it wasn't what she said. I thought that was what she meant. But you needn't explain these things to me, Bryn. The explanation, it seems to me, is due to Pilar herself. It must hurt her. I think you ought to tell her."

"I'm glad."

"Deborah, if I explain about that ring, will you believe me?"

Her eye met his steadily. "Of course. But . . ."

"Don't object, please. Listen, Deborah . . . it was as businesslike a transaction as this. When I went to the Orient I was headed for India. We had talked all sorts of nonsense about jewels. In one letter I had from her, she enclosed a check and asked me to buy her the most beautiful ruby I could find. That's the ring that she is wearing now."

Deborah did not speak. Bryn put out his hand and touched hers, gently.

Ring for Her.

"I have an engagement ring to give," he told her. "It was my mother's. It isn't a ruby, Deborah. It's a pearl. And the ring itself is much too small for Pilar's hand. I didn't realize it until lately, but I think I've been waiting all my life for a girl who could wear my mother's ring."

Bryn put his arms out. He put them around her, lifted her off her feet, held her close against his breast. She buried her face against him. He bent and kissed the tip of her ear.

"I love you," he whispered, then set her gently on the floor and went swiftly away lest he should be tempted to look into her eyes and so forgot what must be done at once for the sake of her happiness.

Bryn dashed madly down the stairs and out of the house. Halfway down the path to the little bridge he overtook Tubby and dragged him along, almost forcing him into the brook as they crossed the bridge.

Bryn flung open the narrow door at the back of the stable. Simon was already there.

Graham Arrives.

Simon moved. "There he is," he said quietly.

"It's Graham, all right," Bryn decided.

The car, a small decrepit roadster, slid along with protesting brakes to a halt beside Pilar's car. The driver stepped out, and one look at him was sufficient to assure Bryn that this was, without any shadow of doubt, Stuart Graham at last. He was in dark civilian clothes, a big blocky figure with tremendously wide shoulders. He was speaking to Gary. "Mrs. Larned expects me?"

"Yes, sir."

"Miss Mayne arrived home again safely?"

"Yes, sir."

"Any special idea in shutting gates and doors behind me?" he inquired.

"You're going to be staying, aren't you?"

"Yes," Graham said and laughed shortly. He caught sight of the three cars beside his own. "Where did all those cars come from?" he demanded suspiciously.

Bryn Greets Him.

"How do you do," Bryn said pleasantly.

Bryn lifted his eyebrows.

"And may I ask what you are doing here?"

"It will be much more to the point if we discuss what you are doing here."

"I suppose you did the noble rescuer act and brought Deborah home again?"

"Something like that," Bryn agreed equably.

"Hanging around ever since," Bryn repeated quietly. "And, now I should like to discuss with you your own position here. There was no time, after your letter arrived, to get an answer to you; or we might have spared you the trouble of this trip."

Argument Arises.

"What do you mean, spared me the trouble of this trip? Where do you come in, anyway? Butting in again, are you, where you're not wanted?"

"Possibly," Bryn answered. "Surely you understand that it was quite useless for you to come here, Graham. You must know that you put yourself quite out of the picture by your actions in San Francisco."

"That's your fault."

"I don't think so. It was fortunate for Deborah that somebody happened along to help her, but she would not have married you, Graham, even if she had had to work the answer out for herself. She was quite unprepared for the way in which you greeted her. It was entirely your own fault. If you had taken the trouble to act as a gentleman for the short time it was necessary to spend with her, she would have married you. She expected to marry you. I was only a chance passer-by."

"Is that so?" Graham said through clenched teeth.

Not His Affair.

Bryn regarded his knuckles thoughtfully. "Isn't it possible for you to discuss the situation quietly and reasonably?"

"Not with you. This is my affair. This is my business."

"No," Bryn said slowly. "Not any longer."

Graham's eyes narrowed. "Why?" he inquired. "Go on. Try your story out on me. See how far you get."

"Apparently you have already read my letter."

"Yes, Well, Deborah won't marry you. That's final."

Bryn regarded him. "Very well," he said. "You came up here expecting eventually to marry her. Am I right?"

"Oh," Graham murmured scathingly. And I suppose she's scared to see me and tell me herself, is she?"

"It isn't necessary for her to see you," Bryn explained. "Her marriage with you no longer depends on her own choice. She can't marry you because she is already married. To me."

"Do you expect me to believe that?"

"I hoped you would."

"Well, I won't. It's a lie. She couldn't marry you. I know the family. I know the circumstances they're in. I've had plenty of letters from the grandmother, and the girl, too. I'm the only man in the world they'd marry the girl to, and you know it."

Otto and Italy's Maria Receive Royal Blessing

So unostentatious was the arrival of Italy's regents, accompanied by the pretty Princess Maria, at the semideserted Villa Pianore, where the Bourbon-Hapsburg villa stands, that few residents of Viareggio knew they were within miles of the city.

A closed limousine brought the royal party from their summer residence at San Rossore, and they drove directly to the villa, where Zita has been living for the last month.

Hapsburg retainers saluted them as the gates swung wide, and Zita welcomed them immediately. They talked for an hour, the 19-year-old princess being present.

Details connected with the unofficial betrothal were quickly settled, aristocratic members of Zita's entourage said.

The former empress then introduced seven of her eight children to the royal visitors.

Otto Not Present.

The seven, from eldest to youngest, were: Princes and Princesses Adelaide, Robert, Felix, Charles, Rudolf, Charlotte and Elizabeth. Adelaide is 20; Elizabeth 12.

Missing only was Otto, who will be 22 November 20. He was hunting elk on Oland Island, off Sweden.

Lending their royal presences, however, were the duchess of Parma and her husband, Anthony of Braganza, and the Grand Duchess of Luxembourg with Prince Consort Felix.

The conclave over, King Victor Emanuel, Queen Elena and Princess Marie, all wearing simple civilian clothes, retraced the narrow country road leading to Zita's residence and, as unpretentiously as they had come, departed.

Archduke on Hunting Trip.

Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 4 (AP). Archduke Otto of the House of Hapsburg could not be reached tonight for comment on reports that he was engaged to marry Princess Maria of Italy.

With his entourage, the archduke is expected to leave Wednesday or Thursday for the Continent.

Italy Believed to Favor Otto for Austria Throne

Rome, Sept. 4 (AP).—The belief that Italy is swinging around to support of Archduke Otto's pretensions to the Austrian throne was strengthened tonight when his engagement to Princess Maria of Italy became known.

It was considered here hardly likely that the royal family and Premier Benito Mussolini would have consented to the marriage had they not strong faith in the improvement of Otto's present position.

Speculation followed immediately as to whether some definite step to put Otto on the throne at Vienna will come before the official announcement of the engagement is issued.

Held Austrian Solution.

Recalling that Italy during recent months has acted jointly with England and France on important matters of international policy, observers here believed that Italy would obtain at least the tacit consent of those two powers before coming out openly for return of the Hapsburgs in Austria.

Reestablishment of the monarchy, it has been reported frequently of late, has been one of the chief topics in discussions of ways and means to settle satisfactorily the Austrian situation.

Many statesmen here hold that with the Hapsburgs again in power, the danger of Austria's union with Nazi Germany would be definitely averted. Premier Mussolini has stated repeatedly that he would not permit such union.

When Il Duce conferred with Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria at Florence August 21, there were reports that they talked over Otto's status.

Made Debut Recently.

The youngest daughter of King Victor Emanuel and Queen Elena, Princess Maria is the only one still unmarried.

She celebrated her nineteenth birthday December 26, shortly afterward entering the capital's social world for the first time attended by her suite of ladies and gentlemen of the court.

Pretty and vivacious, the young princess likes music, swimming, skiing and is an excellent dancer. She speaks several languages fluently, among them English.

Since her sixteenth birthday her name has been constantly on the public's lips in connection with the frequent rumors of her engagement.

'45 Trunks Carry Clothes of Duke On Dominion Tour

London, Sept. 4 (AP).—With a mere matter of 45 trunks and suitcases as his personal luggage, the Duke of Gloucester, third son of the King and Queen, started off today on his first dominion tour.

He left in an airplane he borrowed from his brother, the Prince of Wales, and flew to Paris en route to Marseille, where he will board the British cruiser H. M. S. Sussex tomorrow.

The Duke is bound for Australia as the personal representative of King George to open the official centenary celebration of Melbourne and the State of Victoria October 18. The royal luggage—3 tons of it for duke and staff—was enough to fill two trucks.

Celebrate Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. McCully, of 2505 Palmer street southeast, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary yesterday. They were married 50 years ago at Idaville, Ind. They have lived in Washington nine years, during which time Mrs. McCully has been employed at the Hecht Co. They have four children, all married. There are seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Miami Building Boom Is Halted by Strike

Miami, Fla., Sept. 4 (AP).—Greater Miami's building boom was at a standstill today as union carpenters, on strike since Saturday, remained away from construction jobs.

Fred Morris, business agent for the carpenters' local, claimed the walkout was "nearly 100 per cent"—about 500 men laying down their tools. The carpenters demand a 25-cent-an-hour increase to raise the scale to $1.

Church 300 Years Old.

Scituate, Mass. (U.P.).—The First Congregational Church celebrated its 300th anniversary recently. It has a bell in its belfry which has been used for the past century, that weighs 1,022 pounds and is believed to have cost 28 cents per pound.

Capital to See Circus Parade

Procession September 17 Will Be First Here Since 1926.

Washington will have its first circus parade since 1926 on the morning of Monday, September 17, when performers of the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus, one of the two largest shows in America, will parade before their first performance at the circus grounds at Fifth street and Florida avenue northeast.

The show, which promises "more thrilling features than ever before," will give matinee and evening performances Monday and Tuesday, September 17 and 18. According to reports, "every display on the lengthy program is of gigantic proportions, and scores of them new to circus patrons."

Clyde Beatty, world-famous wild animal trainer, is again scheduled to thrill Washington audiences with his feats in the all-steel arena with 40 "wild and ferocious lions and tigers."

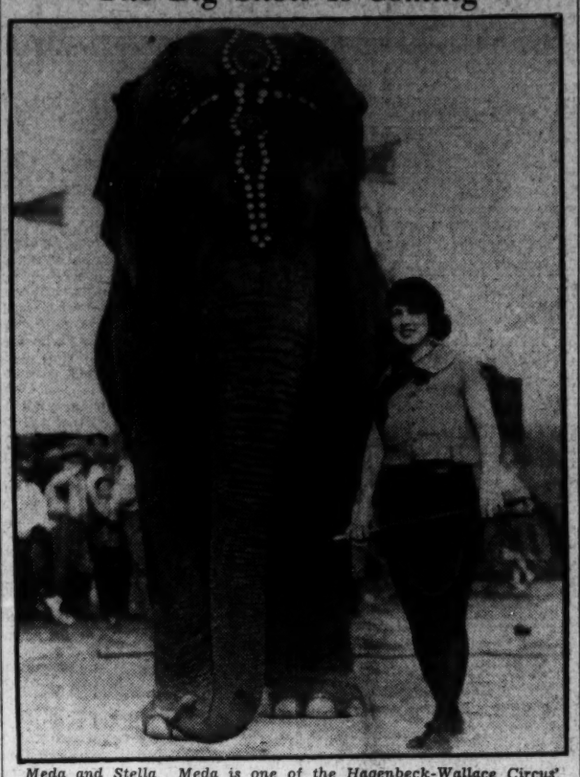
Other performers among the 600 men and women stars will be the famous Cristiani troupe of equestrians, direct from Europe; the famed Flying Codonas, in addition to over 100 other ring, track and stage displays.

The big double menagerie, the largest on tour in the world, is augmented by five large herds of performing elephants, 30 camels and 20 zebras. Performances will be given at 2 and 8 p. m., with the main gate opening an hour in advance.

Urged Collective System.

Isles of Shoals, N. H. (U.P.).—Dr. John Haynes Holmes, New York clergyman, urged those attending a Unitarian Youth Conference here to give all their surplus earnings, including income from investments, to the work of getting rid of capitalism and establishing "a cooperative or collective system of society."

The Big Show Is Coming



Meda and Stella. Meda is one of the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus' elephants. Stella Cronin is one of the show's elephant trainers. Both will be seen September 17 and 18 when the big tent will be pitched at the market grounds at Fifth street and Florida avenue northeast.

Doctor Takes Stand In Coed Killing Trial

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 4 (AP). On circumstantial evidence, the State of Alabama today began taking testimony to substantiate the claim that Harold Taylor, 29, son of a former city comptroller, killed Faye New, 19, Howard College coed, who refused his advances on their first date.

The first witness, Dr. George S. Graham, who performed an autopsy on the body that was discovered two days after the girl went automobile riding with Taylor, testified the girl had died from two stab wounds.

Coo Defense Loses 2 Acquittal Moves

Murder Trial Will Be Resumed Today.

Cooperstown, N. Y., Sept. 4 (AP). The defense lost two moves today in opening the active part of its efforts to save Mrs. Eva Coo, blonde and buxom, from the electric chair for the murder of her handy man, Harry Wright, as the court denied motions for a directed verdict.

First, it sought to have the middle-aged defendant released, contending the State had not made out a case against her. Then it tried to force immediate arraignment at this point of Mrs. Martha Clift, whom it called "the confessed murderess." She has been promised a plea of murder in the second degree, although indicted separately for murder in the first degree in the same case.

Her confession painted Eva as "the master mind" behind the killing, but said that she, Martha, drove a car over the man's body because she was "too nervous to stop" after Eva knocked Wright down with a mallet.

The trial will continue today.

Gallagher Rallies After 2 Knockdowns, Stops Galento in 12 Rounds

Terry's Blast Fails to Stir Cochrane

'Sure, He's Got a Great Team,' He Says With a Mean Chuckle.

Appears Like Man Who Praises Your Bridge, Then Sets You.

CHICAGO, Sept. 4 (AP).—Mickey Cochrane, diplomat, answered Bill Terry's latest blast with flowers today.

Instead of getting all burned up over Terry's remarks in Philadelphia that Mickey's Detroit Tigers would be easier to beat in the World Series than Washington and that Fred Marberry's fast one couldn't pierce a pancake, the soft-spoken pilot of the pennant-poised Tigers merely tossed posies at Memphis Bill and his crew of Giants.

Great Ball Club.

"If we get into the World Series," Diplomat Mickey grinned, "we will do our best to beat the Giants, but we realize they are a great ball club with a great manager. It is a smart team that played smart baseball in the World Series against Washington.

"From the regulars right down through the reserves, the Giants are exceptionally strong in a short series and we realize that. They have a very smooth-working infield with more experience than our own. Hubbell? He's a pitching genius and you can bet that he'll try harder to beat Detroit than any other club, perhaps, because he was with the Tigers on a couple of spring training trips. And Hubbell isn't the only Giant pitching star either. Yes, sir! Those Giants are almost invincible in a short series and we know it."

Chuckles at Remark.

Cochrane chuckled at Terry's remark about Marberry's fast ball.

"Hum, we haven't used Marberry much as a starting pitcher," he laughed with an inference that Terry didn't keep very close track of the Tigers. "Our starting pitchers are Rowe, Bridges and Auker, you know."

Mickey kept right on chuckling. Somehow, he appeared like a fellow who hands you a lot of compliments about your bridge game and then sets you five tricks doubled, vulnerable.

Lucky in Injuries.

But about the American League pennant, which the Tigers appear to have salted away, Mickey refused to talk much.

"We're worrying about each game as it comes along and not about the pennant exactly," Mickey said as he looked hopefully at the sky for a break in the rain that has kept his team idle for two days. "Lots can happen between now and September 30. We've been lucky to escape without any serious injuries so far and have our fingers crossed."

Harrisonburg's Nine Evens Series

Beats Culpeper, 8-7, in Valley League Title Play-Off Game.

CULPEPER, Va., Sept. 4.—Culpeper Athletic Club lost the second game of the interleague series to Harrisonburg here this afternoon, 8-7. Bob Cassell allowed the locals five hits, one being a triple by Metheny in the seventh, to score two runs ahead who were on by virtue of Cassell's first two walks.

The visitors touched Beall for 12 hits, including a Texas league single to left by Huffman, which was converted into three bases and scored three runners.

Cassell Helps Cause.

Cassell aided his cause by collecting three hits in four legal trips to the plate. The score today was by the same margin that Culpeper defeated Harrisonburg yesterday, knocking Johnny Keister, the leading pitcher in the Valley League, from the mound in the fourth. Culpeper goes to Harrisonburg tomorrow for the third game of the five-game series to decide the winners of the Valley League.

New Notre Dame Deal Finds 28 Players Lost

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 4 (AP). If sunshine follows the rain, watch out for Elmer Layden's "new deal" in football at Notre Dame.

"It's been raining at Notre Dame ever since I took over the coaching job," the new head man of the "Fighting Irish," who made football history as one of the Four Horsemen, said today as he talked over this fall's prospects. If sunshine follows the rain or if a rocky road leads to a smooth highway, maybe we'll start out with a good team after all this year.

28 Players Already Lost.

"To start with, it rained sad news on graduation day when we lost 13 of our best players, all but wrecking the line. Then 14 more were lost through ineligibility and two fine prospects were injured to make their chances of playing extremely doubtful. Then, to top it all off, Johnny Young, a great halfback whom we figured on as the key man of an inexperienced backfield, was cut down by death."

Crying crocodile tears is a favorite sport of college football coaches, but those of Layden's are genuine. He's in a tough spot for a first season as head coach with a junior team coming up. Yet, he expects a hustling, interesting team this fall.

"Everything has to be developed," he continued, "but I rather like that in a way. Sure, we're going to lose games this fall, especially through the line where there are gaping holes to be filled by inexperienced men.

Must Be Aggressive.

"Frankly, it takes four games for a coach to get a fine line on his players and we're going to give every one of the 300 candidates a big chance. They are going to make mistakes, but my only restriction is that they must be aggressive errors. The sage who said the errors of omission are worse than the sins of commission is correct. That's the way we're going along at Notre Dame. But our greatest goal, naturally, is to engender a fine spirit, develop a hustling team with a great finish."

Layden is satisfied with his ends, but faces a task in developing probably an entirely new set of tackles, guards and centers. His fullback position is well fortified with George Melinkovich, Don Elser and Fred Carideo, but the halfback post is doubtful with a lot of candidates, none of them outstanding except Andy Pilney.

The schedule:

November 3—At Pittsburgh; 10—Navy at Cleveland; 17—At Northwestern; 24—Army at New York.

December 8—Southern California at Los Angeles.

Boston, Sept. 4 (AP).—Randy Moore's bat and Leo Mangum's arm carried the Braves to a 3-to-1 victory over Brooklyn today in the last game here between the two teams this season. The Dodgers won only one out of 11 games on Braves' field today, and today's defeat brought about their mathematical elimination from the pennant race.

Mangum allowed ten hits, while Van Mungo limited the Braves to eight, but Tony Cuccinello's homer in the sixth brought the only Dodger tally. Moore drove in all three Boston runs. He singled in the fifth to bring in Bill Urbanski, who had singled and stolen second, then drove home the winning tallies in the seventh with another base hit. Before that winning blow Frank Hogan singled, Urbanski forced him at second and Tommy Thompson doubled, sending Urbanski to third.

Giants Down Phils Twice, Hike Lead

Rally in Ninth Inning of Both Encounters to Win, 3-2 and 6-5.

Hubbell Takes His 19th; Joe Moore's Homer Margin in Second.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 4 (AP). The Giants picked on the ninth inning today as the time to score the runs that won them both games of a double-header from the Phillies, 3 to 2 and 6 to 5.

The double victory increased New York's lead over the idle Cubs and Cardinals, who are tied for second place, to seven games, with 24 to go for the Giants and 26 for their rivals before the season ends. The Phils' two losses, incidentally, left them only one game ahead of the cellar-dwelling Cincinnati Reds.

In the opener Curt Davis and Carl Hubbell engaged in a 2-to-2 pitching duel for eight frames. Up to that time Davis had allowed only four hits, but successive doubles by Travis Jackson and Hank Leiber in the ninth produced the winning run.

Hubbell Wins Nineteenth.

Hubbell, although touched for nine hits, spaced them well enough to gain his nineteenth mound victory of the season.

The climax of the second game provided an even greater thrill for the crowd of 7,000. Trailing from the first ninning, the Giants went into the ninth one run behind. Harry Danning opened the inning with a single and George Watkins ran for him. Then Joe Moore stepped up and belted one of Sylvester Johnson's pitches over the right-field wall, scoring the winning run behind Watkins' tying counter.

Smith Gets Victory.

Johnson had replaced Chief Euel Moore in the eighth after the Giants had scored their fourth run. Fred Fitzsimmons was taken out for a pinchhitter in the same inning and Al Smith was credited with the victory.

Polo Struggle Today Tests Mexicans

THE Mexican Army Polo team today will give an indication of just how strong an outfit it is as compared with the American Army team, when it meets the same War Department combination the Americans have played twice in the last two weeks.

While only a practice match in which it will be next to impossible to ascertain exactly how much stress the Mexicans are putting on their scoring, today's tussle is seen at least to furnish a good idea of the visitors' defensive power. The game will be held at West Potomac Park at 3 o'clock.

Maj. Swing to Play.

The War Department team will be selected from Lieut. Gordon Rogers, Lieut. Joe Ganahl, Col. J. Devers, Maj. Poe Swing, Lieut. David Erskine and Lieut. C. H. Reed. With Maj. Swing a member of the American selection committee, his presence on the quartet opposing the Mexicans is expected to give the United States officials some knowledge of the kind of opposition the Americans must face when the international series starts September 19.

Capt. Juan Gracia will play No. 1 for the Mexicans, Capt. Antonio Nava, the wild-riding husky No. 2 man, will be at his customary post, with Capt. Quninitin Reyes at No. 3, and Capt. Antonio Perez taking care of the back position, where he has shown himself to be a tower of defensive strength in the two practice games played here.

Dettweiler Leaves For U. S. Amateur

Billy Dettweiler, 16-year-old Congressional golf star, was the first of the five District hopefuls entered in the National Amateur championship to leave for Brookline, scene of the big event scheduled next week. Dettweiler embarked early yesterday by auto with his golfing sister, Helen, champion of Maryland, and Frank Emmet, director of golf activities at Georgetown Prep School, where Billy attends.

John Shorey, of Kenwood, will leave tonight by boat, while the other three qualifiers, Gene Vinson, of Manor; Martin F. McCarthy, of Beaver Dam, and Jimmy Drain, of Washington Golf and Country Club, are driving up tomorrow morning.

Primo Fights Oct. 13 —But Who, Is Question

New York, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Primo Carnera will fight in Buenos Aires on October 13, but the matter of an opponent is unsettled. Buenos Aires said he had been matched with Victorio Campolo, giant Argentine. Louis Soresi, manager of Carnera, said that the former champion was to fight October 13, but added that the opponent will be Paulino Uzcudun.

Ross' Boxing Impresses; 6-5 Choice

McLarnin Jars Sparmate in Last Drill for Bout Thursday.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 (AP).—The Manhattan faithful today got their first glimpse of Dapper Barney Ross in action since the night four months ago when he stripped the welterweight championship from the weary shoulders of Jimmy McLarnin, and the sight was an eye-filling one indeed.

Bigger, faster, sharper hitting, the glittery-eyed youngster from Chicago's ghetto, first champion in all ring history to hold both the lightweight and welter crowns was so impressive in his final heavy drill for his return bout with McLarnin Thursday night that the odds immediately edged from even money to 6 to 5 in his favor.

Barney's shift in training quarters from the open air camp at Ferndale, N. Y., to the stuffy floor of Stillman's Gymnasium, brought a new rush of enthusiasm for the 15-round duel in Madison Square Garden's bowl on Long Island that has been a trifle slow catching on.

Sales More Brisk.

With the added impetus of returning warm weather, sales picked up and the prospect was for a gate of around $150,000 when Ross Dares, the first-defense jinx that has dogged all welterweight champions in the past few years, and McLarnin seeks to preserve a perfect record of victory in return matches with those who have beaten him the first time out. Their first battle in May, when Ross won a blistering decision, drew $194,000.

Trained to the second, scaling 139¾ pounds before the workout, Ross was the picture of fistic perfection as he hammered Jimmy Murray, a New York sparring partner, for two round rounds and did calisthenics, bad punching and rope skipping for half a dozen more.

Says He Is Better Now.

"I've never hit so hard as right now," he grinned through the perspiration beads as he cooled off in his dressing room. "I've never been so strong or felt so well. You'll see a better fighter whip Jimmy this time, in a different way. I'll never let up on him this time, and I'll never stop punching until he drops.

Meanwhile McLarnin remained in his camp at Orangeburg, N. Y., where he boxed Calvin Reed, Negro welterweight, three fast rounds and shook his mate repeatedly with a two-fisted bombardment and crashing right to the head. Jimmy is right at the weight limit, 147 pounds. Neither will do more than light exercise now before the weighing in Thursday afternoon.

Homers Help Tribe Beat Browns, 8-4

Trosky, Averill Hit Circuit Clouts as Indians Rally.

St. Louis, Sept. 4 (AP).—The Browns garnered three runs in the first inning today, but timely clouting by the Cleveland Indians, including two home runs, soon erased the lead, and the visitors won their third straight game, 8 to 4.

Averill and Trosky, who hit home runs in yesterday's double bill, repeated the performance before a handful of fans today. It was Trosky's thirtieth homer of the season and Averill's twenty-fifth.

Lloyd Brown, who started for Cleveland, and gave two hits and two walks as well as hitting Pepper, was jerked in the second for a pinch hitter and Clint Brown finished.

Grid Coaching School Has Big Roll—One Man

A coaching school with a total enrollment of one student opened yesterday at Catholic University as the Cardinals inaugurated preseason football practice.

The pupil was Charley Reynolds, director of athletics at the Washington Boys' Club, who will attend practice every day for the next two weeks. Reynolds intends to pick up the collegians' method of avoiding injuries for the young gridmen he will tutor this season.

Rain Postpones U. S. Singles Second Day

Players Welcome Delay; Finals Moved Back to Monday.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 4 (AP).—Rain today washed out the second round of the Men's National Singles Tennis championship for the second straight day.

Consequently, the final duel for the crown, originally scheduled for Saturday, has been put over until Monday, but there is a strong likelihood that it will be further deferred since the weather forecast for the remainder of the week is none too favorable.

The second postponement was a disappointment to officials of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, for they had visualized a record gate for the final on the Sabbath, but it was welcomed by the players, especially those contestants from out of town.

Go Sight-Seeing.

It kept alive their tenure in the tournament and gave them an opportunity to devote the day to sight-seeing and other forms of recreation.

Providing the weather is clear and dry tomorrow, the U. S. L. T. A. will endeavor to complete the second round schedule of 32 matches, which was interrupted yesterday after seven matches were played to a finish and two players had advanced to the third round via defaults.

Billy Champ Is Victor In Feature at Detroit

Detroit, Sept. 4 (AP).—Billy Champ, veteran turf campaigner, which was beaten as a favorite in his last start, proved capable of a come-back today, beating Sad Knight by a length to win the sixth race at the Detroit Fair Grounds Track.

White Thorn, the early leader, faded at about the half, relinquishing the lead to Sad Knight, which was overtaken by Billy Champ at about the three-quarter pole.

Billy Champ did the mile and a sixteenth in 1:48 3-5. Win tickets in the mutuels were worth $10 for $2.

Nats to Open Today With Browns

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Acting Manager Al Schacht tonight was inwardly debating the success of his first day as a big league manager, spent on the train that carried the Nats into the West for the final swing around the hinterlands starting with a series against the Browns tomorrow.

Promoted to the management of the team in the absence of Joe Cronin who is nursing a broken right forearm in Washington, Schacht tonight was wondering whether, by virtue of no defeat today, he could claim a 1.000 average for his big league managerial career, or whether, by virtue of no victory, his managerial average was .000.

Just a Spurt Needed.

"Listen, guys," commenced the acting manager, "Anything can happen in baseball. Washington ain't out of this race yet. Figure it out for yourself. If we win all our 27 games and Detroit loses all their 26 games, we finish in a tie with the Tigers. Now, then, that's worth fighting for ain't it? And don't forget, the team that can't be beat, won't be beat. Am I right, or am I right?"

At that moment, the train porter stuck a wooly head into the car, shouted that the diner was now attached, and in the ensuing gallop toward the rear, Schacht's question went unanswered.

Late tonight, Acting Manager Schacht went into conference with Acting Manager Schacht and announced that Earl Whitehill would be sent to the mound against the Browns tomorrow by Acting Manager Schacht in Acting Manager Schacht's first strategical maneuver in an effort to reduce the two-game margin that separates the Nats from fifth place.

By Bill McCormick.

MARTY GALLAGHER, Washington's fighting Irisher, last night assumed the mantle of the District's prize heavyweight hope by winning on a twelfth-round technical knockout from Tony Galento in a scheduled 15-rounder that topped the epic police benefit card at Griffith Stadium. Some 25,000 persons, most of whom had reported to the stadium fully expecting to see Gallagher badly battered, as he was in a previous 10-round engagement with the Jersey jarrer, jeered the fight from the fifth round, but stayed to hear their jeers changed to cheers as Gallagher popped suddenly to the front in the twelfth round.

The win for Gallagher came after he had ben on the floor twice in the ninth and tenth rounds, and had been several times bobbled about the ring by Terrible Tony's shattering left hook. The ultimate winner had lost four successive rounds prior to the eleventh, which he took by a narrow margin. In the finale, Gallagher quickly opened a deep gash over Galento's right eye with a left hook, then belabored him mightily with both fists as the Jersey Jarrer clinched desperately. Referee Heinie Miller examined the cut midway of the round, but allowed Galento to finish it.

Bout Ordered Stopped.

Immediately after the end of the twelfth, Boxing Commission Physician Woodridge examined the cut and after a hasty consultation with the visiting thumper's seconds, ordered the bout stopped.

On The Post scoresheet, the fight was even by rounds, with each fighter having five rounds and two even. On points, the local lad was far behind, having won several of the rounds credited to him because Galento peppered him with low blows and because of his two trips to the canvas.

Early in the third, the Florida flurry's left eye was opened by a sizzling right, but Wilson bounced back with a two-fisted body attack, followed by a left to the jaw that shook Manley out of the round. Wilson's left slashed a deep gash over Manley's right eye early in the fourth and he belabored mightily.

Referee Jack Dempsey asked Manley if he was able to continue, and the little Arkansas gamester insisted on more fighting, in which he slashed open Wilson's right ear and shook him with a nice left to the head, but was unable to win the round.

Before the echo of the bell had faded away in the fifth both contestants were bleeding freely, Manley from both eyes and the right ear and Wilson from the left eye and right ear. The round is a see-saw affair, with Wilson taking a slight edge. Wilson still maintained a slight lead in the sixth, which slowed down considerably out of

Apprentice's Followers Do Well

SALEM, N. H., Sept. 4 (AP).—Charley Rosengarten, a mite of a jockey who has been riding in the "Big Time" less than a year, carried off the honors at Rockingham Park today as he rode five consecutive winners.

Starting with the second race, Rosengarten, who rides at less than 100 pounds, brought every one of his mounts home in front of their fields. He took the second with the Mrs. Bennett's Our Sallie, the third with Unchanging from the Geneseo Stable, the fourth with Mrs. M. J. White's All Forlorn, the fifth with Swatter from the Brann Castle Farm and completed his day's work by accounting for the sixth aboard B. Davidson's Fast Move.

Every one of his winners paid good prices. For a straight $2 ticket, Our Sallie returned $22.50; Swatter, $8.10; All Forlorn, $15.40; Unchanging, $9.50, and Fast Move, $6.50. Our Sallie and Swatter scored by narrow margins but the other three left their rivals far behind.

Main Chance Belmont Victor.

Belmont Park Race Track, Sept. 4 (AP).—The Shoreham, a six-furlong dash around the main course, for 3-year-olds, served as the feature of an ordinary card here today and resulted in an easy triumph for the Maemere Farm's chestnut colt, Main Chance. A close second choice at 6 to 5, the son of The Porter—Starella led home the Wheatley Stable's 9 to 10 favorite, Dusky Princess, by three lengths. F. E. Brown's Glendye was a distanced third, eight additional lengths behind, while Corner Boy completed the field.

The first sun to appear here since the horses returned from Saratoga brightened the proceedings before the main event began. Overnight rain left the racing strip sloppy, but Main Chance showed brilliant speed to finish out in 1:11 1-5.

Glendye displayed keen speed for a half mile, while Eddie Litzenberger restrained Main Chance in second place. When the Canadian lad asked Main Chance to run, the colt galloped to the fore and lost no time opening up several lengths advantage. Dusky Princess, hard ridden all through the stretch, was unable to give the winner serious opposition.

Eight Mountain Teams Open Practice

BRISTOL, Va., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Eight Smoky Mountain Conference football teams yesterday started practice for their 1934 title fight.

Commissioner W. O. Lowe this year decreed that all teams should start work on or after September 1. This plan was devised to have all teams start the season on an equal basis, so far as practice is concerned.

On paper, Gene McMurray's Tennessee State Teachers outfit looks best. The Teachers lost Dean Bailey and a number of other good ball players last year. They have plenty of good players returning, however, and there's no reason why they should not be one of the leading powers in the circuit.

Nine Veterans Lost.

The Carson-Newman Eagles have lost nine veterans by graduation, and Coach Sam "Frosty" Holt will have a tough job replacing them. Gone are Bill Rogers, tackle; Poppy Davis, center; Firpo Smith, guard; Clyde Childers, end; Ben Clark, halfback, and other luminaries.

Coach L. S. Honaker may not have a world-beater at Maryville, but his ball club will be much improved over last year. His lineup was composed mostly of sophomores last season, and they will be back this year. Three stars who were out of school last year also will return and should help.

The "dark horse" of the conference this year likely will be King, of Bristol. Commander W. A. Richardson has had brilliant prospects for the last few years, but his teams have bogged down when the season got under way. This season may be an exception.

Cloud d'Or Easy Victor In Lincoln Fields Race

Chicago, Sept. 4 (AP).—Cloud d'Or, owned by Mrs. W. T. Westrope and trained by her husband, easily won the best event of an ordinary program at Lincoln Fields today.

Jockey Jimmy King got Cloud d'Or away in front and kept him all the way in the 7-furlong journey. R. T. Watts' Tiny Kitty was second, four lengths back of the winner, with the Peconic Stable's General Parth third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VANDA CERULEA, $7.70, $5.50, $4.00; COONEY, $7.70, $4.30; HOGAN'S FOX, $2.80.

VANDA CERULEA, hustled to the front in the opening strides, rated along under steadying restraint, but began bearing out despite her rider's efforts to keep her straight through the stretch and held COONEY safe at the finish; a claim of foul was lodged against the winner, but was not allowed. The latter, well placed from the outset, lost ground when racing on the outside of the winner entering the stretch and closed gamely. HOGANS FOX loomed up threateningly at the stretch turn when the leaders went wide, but was unable to keep pace in the closing furlongs under hard riding. LONG COUNT, slow to begin, closed an immense gap. SATURNINO had good early speed, but was unable to keep pace after going the opening quarter mile. BUY STRAIGHT was never a factor.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:04. Off at 3:07. Winner, Mrs. S. Bennett's br. f. (4), by Flying Ebony—Temptation. Trained by E. Sietas. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:48 4-5, 1:13 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OUR SALLIE, $22.50, $7.40, $3.80; MARGE, $3.80, $2.50; TRUE ROMANCE, $2.60.

OUR SALLIE, well placed and under restraint early, dropped back slightly leaving the back stretch, came wide into the stretch and, closing with a rush, was up in the closing strides. MARGE, away slowly, moved up gradually, came through on the inside, showed in front a few yards from the finish, but was unable to stave off the winner's bid. TRUE ROMANCE had speed from the start, drew clear, but was unable to maintain her advantage under urging. FLAG TIME had speed, forced the pace, but weakened in the last quarter mile. YANCEY went evenly. AMOURETTE tired. The others were outrun.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:36. Winner, Geneseo Stable's b. c. (3), by Infinite—Geisha Girl. Trained by W. H. Brooks. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48 1-5, 1:07 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—UNCHANGING, $9.50, $4.50, $4.60; DARK TYRANT, $4.30, $4.10; RESURRECTION, $6.70.

UNCHANGING, under restraint, close up for the first three furlongs, came to the outside in the stretch, closed with a rush and won going away. DARK TYRANT drew clear in the first three-sixteenths, was rated along in front, withstood a determined bid from NIMULE, but was unable to maintain his advantage in the last furlong. RESURRECTION moved up between his field, then went to the outside at the stretch head and closed strongly in the last sixteenth. EMPLOYMENT, well placed at the start, was unable to improve his position under pressure. NIMULE had good speed, but stopped badly in the last sixteenth. TELL WHY was never prominent and showed a dull effort.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:03. Off at 4:03½. Winner, Mrs. M. J. White's ch. f. (4), by Menifee—Sekina. Trained by J. Goldsborough. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth $50. Time, 0:23, 0:46 3-5, 1:12 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALL FORLORN, $15.40, $5.40, $2.80; GOLD STEP, $5.50, $3.10; CHINESE EMPRESS, $2.50.

ALL FORLORN was rushed into command in the opening sixteenth, drew clear and, rated along under slight restraint, drew out steadily, winning with speed to spare. GOLD STEP, in closest attendance of the winner for most of the way, continued with good energy to the close. CHINESE EMPRESS, on the outside from the start, went evenly, though unable to reach the first two. PIETY outrun early, moved up in the last five-sixteenths, but was going stoutly at the end. CUTIE FACE, taken back of the pace, was moving along gamely on the inside in the last furlong, when she raced into close quarters and Munden had to take up.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:33. Off at 4:33. Winner, Branncastle Farm's b. g. (7), by Broomstick—Gadfly. Trained by P. Roberts. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth $25. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48 1-5, 1:13, 1:39 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SWATTER, $8.10, $4.10, $3.10; INHERITOR, $6.20, $4.80; FOREWARNED, $3.60.

SWATTER, outrun the first quarter mile, was allowed to settle into his stride and, rounding the far turn, began to move up. At the head of the stretch Rosengarten drove and had him up just in time to nose out INHERITOR under a hard drive. The latter, restrained in close attendance of the leaders, moved up fast in the closing three furlongs, assumed a slight lead in the stretch and just failed to last. FOREWARNED took command in the run to the first turn, was steadied along under slight restraint, disposed of MORALIST, well up for the first six furlongs, faltered thereafter. SAINTS KITTS trailed throughout.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:07. Off at 5:07½. Winner, B. Davidson's b. g. (3), by Sweep On—Vera Leigh. Trained by F. C. Travis. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:40.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAST MOVE, $6.50, $3.20, $2.50; INSTIGATOR, $3.40, $2.80; MEROVECH, $3.50.

FAST MOVE went to the front in the run to the first turn, was rated along under slight restraint and, hard ridden at the end, held INSTIGATOR safe. The latter, restrained early, came fast on the outside in the last quarter mile and was going strongly at the close. MEROVECH chased the winner closely from practically the beginning, but weakened in the last few strides. HOBNAIL was well up throughout, but was unable to improve his position under urging. BLIND BROOK never could enter into contention. PASS, slow to begin, moved up on the outside down the back stretch, but was unable to improve his position in the last three furlongs. KINDACORN trailed throughout.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:38½. Off at 5:40½. Winner, W. G. Merion's b. f. (3), by Mad Hatter—Ruth Law. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25 2-5, 0:51 2-5, 1:16 3-5, 1:43 2-5, 1:55.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAWLESS LADY, $11.70, $5.10, $3.80; BOY CRAZY, $7.80, $5.40; LIGHT BREEZE, $5.60.

Golf Spotlight Focused on Keefer Cup and District Junior Tourneys Today

Ladies' Play To Draw 80 Entrants

26 Youths to Compete; Houghton Off to Vie at Glens Falls.

TWO tournaments are on the golf menu today, with the Keefer Cup event at Chevy Chase inaugurating fall activities for the women, and the District junior championship claiming the attention of 26 youngsters at Indian Spring.

Eighty women will compete in the first 18 holes of the 36-hole tournament for the Keefer Cup, and a close battle for the feature prize is expected. The championship is decided on the low net, although there will be prizes for other low-gross and low-net scores. Mrs. Alma von Steinner has won the cup for the last two years.

Post Entries Accepted.

Miss Winifred Faunce, District champion; Mrs. Betty Meckley, Mrs. Jack Scott, Miss Virginia Pope, Mrs. Roland Mackenzie and Mrs. Don Scott are among the well-known local golfers participating. Post entries will be accepted at the first tee by Billy Hardy.

The junior golfers, without their defending champion, Billy Dettweiler, will be battling for 16 qualifying places for the match play rounds opening tomorrow. While no red-hot scoring is looked for in the 18-hole medal round this morning, a number of good scores in the 70s are expected. Billy Shea, 16-year-old Congressional golfer; Bobby Brownell, of Manor; Jack Keele, of Argyle, and Harvey Johnson, of Columbia, are the favorites. Post entries will be accepted.

Al Houghton, Kenwood professional, left yesterday for Glens Falls, N. Y., to compete in the $5,000 Glens Falls Open. Quarter-finalist in the National P. G. A., Houghton will be ranked among the favorites to lift the crown which Jimmy Hines, Timber Point, N. Y., pro, won last year. Houghton finished in a tie for second with Tom Creavy, former P. G. A. titleholder, one shot back of Hines. While at Glens Falls Houghton will continue his missionary work in behalf of the National Capital Open scheduled October 6-7 at Kenwood. Ky Laffoon, sensational Denver pro, already has stated he will enter.

The qualifying round of the Manor Club golf championship will be held Sunday. Dave Thomson, winner last year, will defend his title, but will have plenty of sturdy opposition in Harry Pitt, several times champion; Tommy Bones, George McGehee and Bill Harvey.

Claude Rippy and Bob Leapley, who tied for the medal in the "Uptown" tournament with scores of 71, will play off for the prize this morning at 10 o'clock. Rippy, who won the championship last week by defeating Herman Allen in the finals, is a heavy favorite to win the play-off.

Detroit Club to Erect 17,000 Extra Seats

Detroit, Sept. 4 (AP).—Frank J. Navin and Charles F. Navin, president and secretary, respectively, of the Detroit Tigers, today asked city officials for permission to erect bleachers outside the ball park to provide 17,000 additional seats.

For several weeks they have met all world series talk with silence, but today they said that "maybe Detroit will see a world series and we want to get prepared just in case." The proposed new bleachers would raise the capacity of Navin Field to around 46,000.

Two Choices Advance In Mason-Dixon Golf

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 5 (AP).—Miss Bernice Wall, of Oshkosh, Wis., and Miss Fritzi Stifel, of Wheeling, W. Va., two of the favorites in the Mason-Dixon women's golf championship, won their first-round matches with ease today.

Miss Wall won from Mrs. Bernard R. Howe, of Loon Lake, N. Y., 6 and 5, and Miss Stifel defeated Mrs. J. Kenneth Eisaman, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., 7 and 6.

Kinprillis Wins Warrenton Honors

Whitney Gelding Adjudged Grand Champion Hunter as Horse Show Ends.

By C. B. Carr.

WARRETON, Va., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Kinprillis, a gray gelding from the Llangollen Stables of Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Upperville, was adjudged the grand champion hunter of the Warrenton Horse Show, which closed this afternoon.

More than 6,000 people saw the final day's program, which developed into a nip and tuck battle between the Whitney stables and those of Dr. Lewis M. Allen, Winchester physician, for the championship honors of the show.

Three championships, a grand championship and three reserve championships featured the closing events of the show. Kinprillis nosed out Clifton's Beau, owned by Dr. Allen, for the grand championship after it was ruled that the latter's win in the model class could not be counted toward the grand prize.

Earns Leg on Ulman Trophy.

Mrs. Whitney's win today gives her one leg on the Ulman Challenge Trophy, which must be won three times for permanent possession. Dr. Allen's Red Tape, now owned by Robert Guggenheim, New York sportsman, won the grandchampionship in 1932 and 1933, only one more victory being necessary for the Allen Stables to permanently cop the trophy.

Kingprillis also was awarded the middle and heavyweight hunter championship, while an equal honor came to Clifton's Beau, when the Allen entry won the lightweight hunter championship. The reserve lightweight hunter championship went to Two Leggins, also owned by Mrs. Whitney. The reserve heavy—or middleweight—hunter championship was annexed by Brown Bruin, owned by George P. Greenhalgh, Toledo, Ohio.

Gulf Breeze, a saddle horse from the stables of Miss Marjorie McLeod, of Bethesda, Md., won the saddle horse championship, with the reserve going to Love Token, owned by Mrs. Allen Potts, of Gordonsville.

Class Honors Divided.

Class honors throughout the day were divided among 13 stables, the majority being from the well-known horse section of northern Virginia. Manley W. Carter, of Orange, won the middle and heavyweight hunters with Fadeless. Mrs. Whitney, in addition to the two championships, won first in the hunt teams with Bon Diable, Kinprillis and Two Leggins, first in the Corinthian class with Nobody's Fool and first in the thoroughbred hunters with Kinprillis. The victory in the Corinthian class gave Mrs. Whitney possession, until next year, of the $2,000 Warrenton Challenge Trophy, the first leg on which was won by Mrs. Whitney's Grey Knight in 1933. Another victory will give her permanent possession of the trophy. The awarding of the cup was made by Lieut. Gov. James H. Price of Virginia.

Capt. Marion Carson, of Fort Myer, was victorious in two events, the open jump class and international course with Wise, a bay gelding.

Lieut. Harrison Injured.

Lieut. E. L. Harrison, of Fort Myer, was thrown from his horse in the international course class. He was knocked unconscious, but responded to first-aid treatment.

One important hunter sale was made during the show, it was learned. Mrs. D. C. Sands, owner of the Benton Stables, Middleburg, Va., was reported as having purchased Rose Gold, 9-year-old dun mare, from Mr. and Mrs. N. Thomas Mosby, Ellerson, Va., and Newton T. Mayo, of Richmond, joint owners. The horse is said to be the granddraughter of the Kentucky Derby winner Alan A. Dale.

Thoroughbred 2-year-olds—First, Rouge Catalan, Miss Elizabeth Nesbit, Warrenton; second, Hunter's Choice, Mrs. J. E. Keyser, Flint Hill; third, Asa Rhu, George P. Greenhalgh, Toledo, Ohio.

Half-bred, 2 and 3 year olds, are to be considered in judging—First, Captain Kid, Ray S. Shoemaker, Harrisburg, Pa.; second, Lucile, E. L. Redmon, Middleburg; third, Report, Clifton Simpson, Round Hill.

Thoroughbreds, 3-year-olds—First, Clifton's Beau, L. M. Allen, Winchester; second, Glorie Road, Mrs. John H. Whitney, Upperville; third, Croton, Manley W. Carter, Orange.

Model hunters, 3-year-olds and over to be shown in hand—First, Clifton's Beau, L. M. Allen; second, Kinprillis, Mrs. Whitney; third, Round Hill, James N. Andrews, Somerset.

Ponies over fences, ponies over 12 and under 14½ hands, to be ridden by children under 15 years of age, fences not to exceed 3 feet—First, Brown, Thomas Beach, Warrenton; second, Queen of Sheba, Stanley Green 2d, Middleburg; third, Souvenir, Thomas Beach.

Saddle horses, ladies to ride, Park type—First, Gulf Breeze, Miss Marjorie McLeod, Bethesda, Md.; second, Love Token, Mrs. Allen Potts, Gordonsville; third, Sporty McClinty, A. and G. Rives, Cobham.

Lightweight green hunters up to carrying 160 pounds to hounds, non-blue ribbon winners—First, Clifton's Beau, L. M. Allen; second, Croton, M. W. Carter; third, Soft Breeze, M. W. Carter.

Middle and heavyweight green hunters up to carrying 180 and 200 pounds to hounds, respectively, non-blue ribbon winners—First, Fadeless, M. W. Carter; second, Little Tiger, H. S. McNeil, Rectortown; third, Sir Cona, M. W. Carter.

Thoroughbred hunters registered with American Jockey Club—First, Kinprillis, Mrs. Whitney; second, Sacrifice, Benton Stables, Middleburg; third, Nobody's Fool, Mrs. Whitney.

Polo ponies, green, any weight—First, High Ball, John C. Rawlings, Rectortown; second, Chiplita, H. B. Phipps, Marshall; third, Edith Bishop, R. Kirkpatrick, Warrenton.

Polo ponies, qualified, any weight—First, Perdita, R. Kirkpatrick; second, Brown Gelding, E. Kenneth Jenkins, Warrenton; third, entry, E. Kenneth Jenkins.

Open jumping class, fences not exceeding 4½ feet—First, Wise, Capt. J. T. Duke, Fort Myer; second, Dupaller Lass, Miss Nancy Patterson, Pittsburgh, Pa.; third, Sister, James N. Andrews, Somerset.

Hunt teams of three ridden by and property of members of a recognized hunt, for the Bowman Challenge Cup—First, Mrs. John H. Whitney's hunt team composed of Bon Diable, Two Leggins, Kinprillis; second, hunt team from Benton Stables; third, Mrs. Fay Ingalls' hunt team.

International course over eight fences without wings, judged under rules of International Equestrian Federation—First, Wise, Capt. Marion Carson, Fort Myer; second, Rose Gold, Mrs. N. Thomas Mosby, Ellerson; third, Papa John, Lieut. John M. Horner, Front Royal.

Army-Navy Net Favorites Score

Mangan, Willis, Sendel Among Victors in First Round of Play.

TOM MANGAN, Rickey Willis and Fred Sendel sailed into the second round of the Army and Navy Country Club invitation tennis tournament on the wings of impressive victories yesterday. Mangan decisioned Dick Hooker, 6—1, 6—1; Willis stopped Dwight Collins, 6—4, 6—3, and Sendel, former Mexican Davis Cup star, eliminated A. W. Glasmire, 6—0, 6—3. In other first-round matches Herb Shenkin defeated Stanley Haney, 6—4, 6—1, and Allen Blade cut down Larry Phillips, 6—2, 6—4.

Today's matches scheduled on two fronts will bring into action seeded players galore. Due to the heavy entry, the matches will begin at 5 o'clock at Army and Navy and Potomac Park courts, three at the former and six at the latter.

Denison (Dooley) Mitchell, former District champion, seeded No. 2, will engage Laurence Sherfy; Anthony Latona, Georgetown athlete, meets Pat Deck and Frank Shore takes on Kent Boyle—all at Army-Navy.

At Potomac Park Ralph McElvenny, the transplanted California barrister, heads the list of challengers. He meets M. Erana. Other pairings: Maurice O'Neill vs. James Heiskell; Don Garber vs. Allen Staubley, Ted Pierce vs. Art Freshman, A. Bradley vs. Happy Jacobs and Stan McCasky vs. "Hi" Ritzenberg.

Locke, Aid to Coach At Holy Cross, Dead

Chicago, Sept. 4 (AP).—Joseph Locke, line coach at Holy Cross College, and former varsity football player at Notre Dame, died last night after a six months' illness. Locke, a member of Notre Dame's national championship eleven of 1929, served as an assistant to Head Coach Eddie Anderson at Holy Cross last year.

Closed Tennis Tourney Listed at Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Plans for a Cumberland closed tennis tourney, to be staged the weekends of September 8-9 and September 15-16, under auspices of the Dingle Tennis Club, were announced by Lorenzo E. (Red) Van Sant, director.

Only players living in Cumberland and immediate vicinity will be eligible to compete. Prizes will be given to the winners in men's singles, women's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles.

First Real Upset In Girls' Net Play

Miss Knowles Wins, Then Bows at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Sept. 4 (AP).—Hope Knowles, 15-year-old miss of Great Neck, Long Island, caused the first real upset in the United States lawn tennis girls' championship matches today, but fell a victim in a later match.

Miss Knowles, her blonde braids coming to her elbows, struck out well with both forehand and backhand, to defeat Helen Grawn, Grosse Point (Mich.) 1933 indoor girl champion, 4—6, 6—3 and 6—3.

Her own Waterloo came at the hands of an unseeded wielder, Patty Kilmartin, also 15, of Miami Beach, Fla., by 6—4, 6—2, sending Miss Kilmartin into the quarter-finals.

125, 135 Pound Grid Meeting Called Tonight

Football teams in the 125-pound and 135-pound classes will formulate plans for the grid season at a meeting of the National City Football League at 8 o'clock tonight at the Atlas Sports Store. President Vic Gauzza also has called a meeting of the 150-pound and unlimited classes for tomorrow night, at the same time. Several new elevens, in addition to last year's teams, are expected to compete this fall.

Navy Discards Notre Dame System

New Coach to Work Team From Kick Formation; First Drill Today.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 4 (AP).—The 1934 Navy football team will scrap the "Notre Dame system" of offense, it was learned today.

Lieut. Thomas J. Hamilton, to whom the Naval Academy squad will report tomorrow, will work his team offensively from a kick formation, featuring a jump shift and power plays from a single wing, close formation.

Such was the system that Hamilton used as coach of the West Coast Navy team, which lost but one game a year for three successive years that Hamilton coached it—One year to the Olympic Club, another to California and a third to Southern California.

Last year Navy plays started from a "T" formation, shifting to a box right or left and, at times, to a short kick formation. Hamilton will build his attack around the kicker. The backs will shift into right or left single wingback, with the guardsmen shifting with the backs.

25,000 Crowd Sees Boxing Card Here

The boys remained slow in the seventh, but so hard had they battled and so much damage had they inflicted upon each other that the crowd refrained from the usual bronx burp as Wilson again ekes out just enough of a lead to take the period. Wilson tore out of his corner in the eighth, shooting a two-fisted barrage to the body, but Manley stopped him in his tracks with a left to the jaw. Wilson hesitated and tore back in with his vaunted left flashing to batter Manley almost to the canvas.

Referee Jack Dempsey finally called a halt, awarding the contest to Wilson on a technical knockout in 2 minutes and 15 seconds of the eighth round.

Pete Bevans, of Washington, and Al Parks, of Baltimore, opened the proceedings in a fast-stepping six-rounder that went to a draw, and received the approbation of the assembled multitude.

Hyde K. O's Sheppard.

Carl Hyde, Walter Chrysler's heavyweight prospect, scored a second-round knockout over Mel Sheppard, of Baltimore, in a mauling match. Although outweighed 16 pounds officially and 23 pounds actually, Hyde handled the cumbersome Sheppard fairly adroitly in the first round, then started popping rights to the jaw in the second to score the sleep-producer.

Freddy Heinz, the mirthful Michigander, played stooge to the very serious Mr. Clarence Burns, of Baltimore, in a comedy relief bit. Like all stooges, Heinz was soundly belabored throughout the scene, but he laughed and clowned to lose a unanimous decision.

Round-by-Round

Round Two.

Round Three.

Galento led with hard left and ripped both hands to the roly-poly head and body as the crowd went wild. Galento again hit Gallagher low but the punch evoked no warning or protest. Galento missed with his left as they went into a clinch. Galento missed a long left hook as Marty struck. Galento again tried to land his left to the head. Galento feinted to the head with a left. As Galento missed a left hook Gallagher punched his face. Gallagher missed a right to the head and outmauled Galento. Gallagher landed a hard left to the body as they went into a clinch. They mauled and tugged in the center of the ring. Gallagher landed a left jab to the left jaw. Gallagher's round.

Round 4.

Galento slipped inside. Gallagher slipped in a left and shot his right three times to Galento's body. Gallagher avoided Galento's right and sunk a left to the body, then pummelled Galento in close. Galento strove to get Gallagher off balance, but the Irisher outwrestled him. Galento shot a left hook inside but ineffectively. Gallagher outpummelled Galento in the midsection. They again went into a midring huddle like a couple of bulls with their horns locked. Gallagher sunk a potshot directly into Galento's midsection. Galento followed him with a long left to the stomach which slid off. Round even.

Round Five.

Galento landed three mauling lefts as they went into a clinch. He landed his left ineffectively. Gallagher shot three to the jaw and Tony wrestled him off balance. Galento landed what seemed a perfect left to the jaw, but did not shake Marty. Gallagher caught the Newark Italian with an uppercut. Gallagher landed a hard right to the body as they clinched. Galento landed a light left to Gallagher's body. Galento landed a left to the body and right to the head. Gallagher landed a long, hard left to the jaw and an uppercut. The crowd is booing them as the round ends. Round even.

Round Six.

They answered the bell with a clinch, which brought boos. Gallagher shot a left to the jaw as they went into another clinch. Gallagher missed a left as Galento came into another clinch. They fought hard but it was all in-fighting and the crowd could not see the punches. Gallagher backed away. They went into a prolonged huddle with no damage inflicted. Galento landed a hard right to Gallagher's jaw. Marty bounces out of a clinch with a left hook to the jaw and two hard rights to the body as Galento landed a right to the head. Gallagher was able to get in four hard blows to the midsection. Gallagher's round.

Round Seven.

Galento came out with a furious rush as Gallagher got in two hard rights to the midsection. Galento almost landed a long left which Gallagher blocked. Galento tried the same tactics and they likewise failed. Galento swung loose in a clinch and landed a left hook to the groin. Galento landed a left uppercut to the the jaw. They went into a clinch, with Gallagher landing a left hook to the jaw. Gallagher landed two hard rights to the body, then another. Gallagher landed two left jabs as Galento vainly swung his right. Galento grazed Gallagher's chin with a left hook. Gallagher's round.

Round Eight.

Galento landed a left to the jaw, then shot two to the body. Gallagher landed a hard left to the head. Galento dropped Marty with a left uppercut for the count of nine. Galento seemed to like to follow up as they went into a clinch. Galento missed a left hook. Marty caught him with a left hook. Galento caught Gallagher with a left hook to the stomach. Galento backed Marty to the neutral corner. As they went into another clinch Galento again outmauled Gallagher. Galento's round.

Round 10.

Round 11.

Gallagher backed away. Galento motioned him to fight. Galento landed a long left hook to the jaw. Marty partially blocked a left hook to the body. Galento landed a left in a clinch, opening Gallagher's eye. Galento landed a long right hand to the jaw which sent Marty's head bobbing. Gallagher wrestled and hugged in close. Galento landed a low left hook as Gallagher came in. Gallagher nodded o. k. to the referee. Galento's round.

Smith, All-American In 1932, Visits Hilltop

Bob Smith, right guard on the Colgate eleven of 1932, which was undefeated, untied, unscored on, and, as Coach Andy Kerr added, uninvited to the Rose Bowl that season, worked out with the Georgetown squad yesterday. Smith, who was an unanimous All-American selection in '32, played high school football with Dick Danner, Hoya freshman coach. He will remain at the Hilltop for a week before returning to the University of Michigan where he is a law student.

The Post Sandlotter

THE Acacia Insurance team and Grace Athletic Club, champions of the Capital City and Georgetown Church leagues, respectively, clash this afternoon on the South Ellipse diamond in the opening battle of The Post Association week-day interleague championship. Play will be called at 4 o'clock.

The Post baseball tourney, bringing into competition for the city title all of the week-day league pennant winners except one, promises to eclipse all previous play-off series. Seven championship nines, the class of 40 Post Association teams, aspiring for titular honors in the various week-day loops, will wage a battle of survivorship throughout the next two weeks in The Post's double-elimination series.

Government Printing Office Federals, finalist in the Federal league, and College Park A. C., winner in the Maryland Suburban, will furnish the competition in tomorrow afternoon's attraction. On Friday, Kann's, Department Store representative, and Government Printing Office, Departmental League champs, meet in what promises to be another hotly contested struggle. Heurich Brewers, pride of the Industrial league rooters, will not be seen in the series until Monday, when they meet the winner of today's contest.

Both Acacia and the Grace team are pinning their chief hopes of victory today on their star pitchers, whose consistently brilliant efforts were big factors in their teams' pennant drives.

Joe Sullivan, erstwhile Eastern High star, who has hurled a fine brand of ball for the Insurance Team, will be pitted against Vernon O'Meara, sensation of the Georgetown Church League, in the series debut. The Churchmen are banking heavily on the bats of James Boteler, league's leading slugger, the Plumb boys, Clarence and Edward, and Paul Pizza, to carry them through to a win in today's game. The all-around play of such performers as Charlie Beall, Dutch Robeson, Joe Keegin, Claude Cowan and Bus Boyd was much in evidence in Acacia's second-half pennant rush and its successful series with the Center Market Nine. These players will bear watching in today's Post Association championship contest.

Faster Classic Added to Cup Regatta

Mendelsson-Dunn Duel Is Assured; Box Seats Placed on Sale.

ANOTHER powerboat racing classic was added yesterday to the long list of brilliant duels making up the President's Cup regatta scheduled for September 21, 22 and 23. Following the weekly round-up luncheon of the Cup Association yesterday at Sholl's Cafe, L. Gordon Leech, executive secretary, announced that the Class I event had been scratched and a higher and faster class of competition substituted.

The new event will bring together Herbert Mendelsson of Detroit, National champion record-holder, in the 850 cubic inch speedboat class, and Jack Dunn of Fourth Lake, N. Y., and Miami, Fla., the country's outstanding other ace in that particular class in what should prove one of the big American powerboat races of the year.

Building New Machines.

The Class I race was eliminated to allow these two veteran speedsters to compete in a grudge race at their favorite distance. Dunn is now completing construction of a new $6,000 machine with the hope of taking Mendelsson's National crown from him and avenge the defeat which the Detroiter handed him in Florida during the past winter. Jack Rutherford, of Miami, already entered in the President's Cup event, may be a third entry in this race.

Veterans to Compete.

Mr. Leech also announced that three of the boats which competed in the original President's Cup race of 1926 will be at the starting line in this year's big feature. Jack Dunn's Jay Dee, once called the Nuisance, will be one of the veteran trio; the Delphine IV will be the other, rebuilt from the Impsky, and Aaron De Ray's Hornet, formerly the Delphine VI, owned by John Shibe, of Philadelphia, will be the third. Mrs. Delphine Dodge Baker, now of Washington, will be remembered as the driver of the Nuisance in the first cup regatta.

At the luncheon it was announced that 75 box seats, ranging in price from $22 to $11, are now on sale at the A. A. A. offices, as well as tickets for 200 chairs. There will be no bleacher seats.

Horse Tested, Owner Ousted

Mikel Is Suspended and Khamseen Withdrawn.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Sept. 4 (U.P.).—John D. Mikel, owner and trainer, racing one of the largest stables on the American turf, was suspended for an indefinite period today by the Rhode Island Racing Commission following discovery of alkaloid strychnine when a saliva test was made on Khamseen at Narragansett Park, August 24.

Salem, N. H., Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Following the suspension of John D. Mikel, stewards of the New Hampshire Breeders Association, operators of Rockingham Park, ordered all horses owned or trained by Mikel withdrawn from Wednesday's races. Mikel had entered Khamseen.

Hack Wilson Given Release by Phillies

Lasts Less Than Month in Comeback Attempt.

Philadelphia, Sept. 4 (AP).—Hack Wilson, once the mightiest right-handed hitter in the National League, has been released, the Philadelphia National League Club announced today.

Harvey Hendrick, outfielder and pinchhitter, and Cy Malis, pitcher, also were released.

Wilson lasted less than a month with the Phillies, having been signed August 10. He was given a chance to play regularly, but he failed to hit and finally was kept on the bench.

Middleburgs Challenged.

The Arlington A. C., runner-up in the Northern Virginia League, would like to arrange a double-header to be played at Arlington Sunday with some good unlimited team. The Middleburg nine is especially challenged. Call Manager Ferguson at Lincoln 8833 between 7 a. m. and 6 p. m.

Stocks Sink Half Point in Dull Trading

Stocks, while not under excessive pressure at any time, were unable to climb out of the rut into which they slipped last week-end. Both public and professional indifference was exemplified by the fact that only 308,930 shares changed hands in the five-hour session.

Although leading issues were quite narrow throughout the slow proceedings, the Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 selected stocks showed a net decline of half a point, at 72. This average is now about midway between the year's low of 66.4 and the high of 79.4.

Experts Blame Strike.

Those market commentators who had been optimistically forecasting a turn for the better in both prices and trading volumes after Labor Day were inclined to attribute their failure to call the cards partly to the timidity engendered by the textile strike, which it is feared, may retard recovery seriously if the walk-out lasts any length of time.

On the other hand, the thought was expressed in some quarters that the markets, generally, acted no different than they did before the textile labor controversy came to a head. Uncertainties regarding seasonal pick-up in business and industry, it was held, apparently are having more to do with the low state of speculative and investment sentiment than any other one factor.

The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated current steel production at 18.4 per cent of capacity compared with 19.1 a week ago and 25.8 at the beginning of August. The present rate of output set another new low since the Institute began issuing weekly figures last October. The picture was further clouded by reports that steel operations at Pittsburgh were down to 9 per cent, the lowest point since records have been kept there.

Steel Improvement Expected.

The magazine Steel held out a ray of hope, however, by stating that "a moderate improvement in demand is expected to set in this month and to gain momentum with the fall season."

The foreign exchange situation was again complicated by a rally of more than 3 cents in the British pound which, during the past week, had dropped sharply. Short coverings by continental speculators was said to have been largely responsible for the rebound. At the same time the French franc moved above the gold export point and banking firms announced the shipment of more metal abroad.

Some of the metal shares were a trifle soft in the early hours, but most of these ended with only small fractional declines. American Telephone, Montgomery Ward, Bethlehem Steel and a number of others emerged with small advances. Case more than halved a 2-point loss. Such issues as U. S. Steel, N. Y. Central, Santa Fe and National Distillers were only slightly lower.

New York, Sept. 4.—Even though the number of orders placed in some of the apparel divisions was somewhat under that of the week preceding, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., the volume of business was larger than a year ago and in most of the large markets buyers were more numerous than during that period.

Much of the increase was contributed by the reinstatement of orders which had been canceled during July and the early part of August. Buying in some of the women's wear divisions was stimulated by the prospects of higher prices on several of the popular fall styles. Orders for dress accessories pushed ahead rapidly, and more interest was shown the new offerings of millinery, novelty jewelry, and handbags.

Buying of gifts, toys, and novelties for the Christmas season was especially large this week, but the bulk of the requirements for this occasion are yet to be covered. As a whole, interest is spreading to nearly all divisions of the market, instead of being confined to clothing, groceries, furniture, and electrical goods, which was the situation when the month opened.

Spurt in Orders.

There has been a considerable spurt in the orders for upholstery goods and drapery fabrics, with the emphasis strongly on the modern designs and textures. The heavy buying of wholesalers, due to strike threats in the textile industry, brought more activity to the primary cotton goods market, and carried prices to the best level in many weeks.

Sales of print cloths were twice the week's output and colored goods also were more active. Prices of sheets and pillowcases have been advanced and percales have been marked slightly higher.

Shoe orders are being released more freely, following the successful response to the early showing of fall styles, and the more settled price structure. Although one or two of the chain systems have made a moderate mark-down in some of the cheaper grades, no general reduction of shoe prices is held probable, in view of the present upward trend of hide prices and the higher level of labor costs, as compared to that of a year ago. Many of the materials besides hides, which are used in the manufacture of shoes, also have advanced.

Shortage Fears Dispelled.

As fears have been largely dispelled regarding a food shortage, as a result of the drought devastation this summer, there has been a decline in the orders received by wholesalers of groceries, as compared with the rising total of the two weeks preceding.

Flour is being bought more heavily, however, and interest continues active in nearly all grades of canned goods. A further rise is expected in the quotations on some of the canned vegetables, as earlier estimates of the pack have been reduced. The demand for dried fruits has broadened, but the only price advance of consequence was reported for prunes. Fancy items are making up a more substantial part of grocery orders than at this time a year ago.

Though individually small, the number of orders received by wholesalers of hardware reached the largest total since April. Supplies suitable for minor repairs have predominated, indicating that the home-modernization program is being extended more rapidly than was anticipated, after the tardiness which characterized its beginning.

Labor-Saving Appliances.

For the special sales to be held in September, labor-saving household appliances were sought, and substantial orders were placed for cooking utensils, cutlery, and general kitchenware.

The advance orders for toys, novelties and sporting goods to be featured during the Christmas season are in many instances running double those of a year ago.

More hardware stores now are handling stoves, the success of last winter's business in this line resulting in larger commitments for a more complete range of oil, gas and coal stoves, with the improved oil-burner styles particularly prominent in the merchandise chosen. There continues to be a good volume of fill-in orders for late summer needs, with lawnmowers, small garden implements, wire fencing, and sprinkling equipment moving exceptionally well for so late in the season. Bicycles and roller skates continue among the most active items in this division.

Paper Wholesalers Satisfied.

Most of the wholesalers of paper are well satisfied with the results thus far this year, and more than a moderate upswing in demand is expected during September.

There still is a tendency in consuming quarters to buy cautiously, and there has been little stocking thus far, but sufficient orders have been booked, both in the fine and coarse papers, to make a satisfactory total.

Fair requisitions for fine papers are being received from the printing and lithographic trades, and one of the most encouraging trends at present is the stronger demand for papers of the better grades. Coated papers are quite active, even though there has been no increase of consequence in the orders from the catalog trade, but this has been offset somewhat by the expanding use of broadsides and other advertising pieces.

Curb's Prices Turn Mixed; Volume Drops

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—With trading volume around record low, the curb exchange recorded narrowly mixed changes today.

The list was slightly easier at the start and the lower price drift continued well into the afternoon. However, in the last hour prices turned upward and cancelled or reduced the early losses of fractions to around a point.

Utilities were rather resistant throughout the day. Oil, metals and alcohols ruled mixed. Commonwealth Edison, Sherwin-Williams, Armstrong Cork, Humble Oil, Flintkote A and Fisk Rubber finished steady to slightly higher.

Dow Chemical lost 3½ points. Pan American Airways dipped 2. Swift Internacionale was off a point, while lesser recessions appeared in Electron Bond & Share, Swift & Co., International Petroleum, Aluminum Co. of America and United Shoe Machinery.

Prices of Tobacco Near 10-Cent Point

Atlanta, Sept. 4 (AP).—Tobacco prices averaged 9.62 cents per pound for the 151,824 pounds auctioned during the fifth week of Georgia's bright leaf season, H. K. Ramsey, statistician of the State department of agriculture, reported today.

The week's sale brought the tobacco sold in Georgia this season to approximately 31,000,000 pounds. The State's quota under the Federal control act is 41,000,000 pounds.

Gossip of New York Markets

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—Hedging against inflation is the preoccupation of many investment managers these days.

That does not mean that they look for a currency printing spree in this country, or necessarily that they even expect further depreciation of the dollar in terms of the gold.

It does mean, however, that they are preparing for much higher prices all around, eventually. That is, they expect the purchasing power of the dollar, before the recovery program is completed, to be substantially less than it is.

And when the purchasing power of the currency is declining, what in normal times, or in times of deflation, are regarded as the safest things, such as cash or gilt edged bonds, become less desirable.

Unfortunately, investment managers find, the various hedges against inflation are all of a character involving in themselves considerable rise, so that they do not lend themselves to the requirements of the relatively small investor.

Favorite hedges are common stock, commodities and real estate. Some bonds selling substantially under par are also regarded as a hedge, in instances in which rising prices all around would presumably bring them up to par. Of course, the amount of hedge available is limited by the amount of discount at which the bond is available. And the fact that it is at a discount indicates that it is somewhat speculative.

Selections in common stocks, investment managers say, require considerable care, and at best involve risk. Companies unable to litt the prices of their products as rapidly as their costs rise should, of course, be avoided.

Maj. L. L. Bangas, in his recently published pamphlet, "The Coming Boom in America," which is based on the expectation of a big inflation of credit, went so far as to suggest purchase of almost any sort of low priced stocks, even "rubbish." Few Wall street experts agree with such advice. They point out that while some securities selling at "rubbish" prices may well recover, others represent situations that are in fact probably hopeless, and in which equities would be wiped out in reorganization.

Commodities, produce no income, and involve storage charges. The situation between various commodities vary greatly. In a mild inflation, it is possible that some may not advance beyond current levels. Real estate problems differ with each individual piece property, and while one piece may advance in value, special reasons, such as a change in the condition of the neighborhood, may adversely affect another.

Many investment experts feel that the small investor who needs income from his investment and can not afford to take risks would do better to adhere to old-fashioned gilt-edged mediums, rather than to try to find a suitable hedge.

How much inflation may be in prospect, and how rapidly it may develop is, of course, a moot question. The Administration early committed itself to a program of boosting prices generally to 1926 levels, and prices still have some distance to go even to get there.

Of course, some quarters hold much more extreme views of inflationary prospects, expecting prices to go well beyond 1926 levels. In any case, however, it is widely agreed in Wall street that the process will take some time.

What the Stock Market Did.

	Tues.	Sat.
Advances	83	104
Declines	280	127
Unchanged	125	100
Total issues	488	331

Curb — With trading volume around record low, the curb exchange recorded narrowly mixed changes. Oils, metals and alcohols were irregular. Sales declined to only 78,000 shares.

Wheat—Late rallies enabled wheat to regain most of losses in recent trading. A drop in visible supply aided the price advance. Oats were higher; corn declined. September wheat sold at 1.02¾; December, at 1.03¾.

Cotton—The unsettling influence of the textile strike and reports of good rains in the Western belt pushed cotton prices down about $1 per bale. October closed at 12.99. The general market declined 12 to 17 points. December sold at 13.11.

Rubber — Crude rubber futures closed dull, 13 to 20 points lower. September sold at 15.45; October, at 15.60.

Gold—Bar gold was lower in London. It stood at 140 shillings and 10½ pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar was lower on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.02 to the English pound; 6.69½ cents to the French franc, and 39.93 cents to the German mark.

Wheat Regains Part of Losses In Late Rallies

Chicago, Sept. 4 (AP).—Late rallies in wheat today that virtually overcame substantial preceding losses followed announcement the United States visible supply showed the earliest decrease in recent years.

A reduction of the domestic wheat visible supply at this season is most unusual, as normally the stock does not start to decrease until after the turn of the year.

Helping the late rally of wheat prices were indications that the peak pressureof newly harvested wheat in Canada would be passed this week.

Wheat Closes Irregular.

Wheat closed irregular, ¼ off to ⅜ up, compared with Saturday's finish; corn, ⅝ to ⅞ down; oats, ⅛ to ⅝ advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7 cents.

Contrasting with relative strength shown by the wheat market in the late dealings was a downward trend at the outset and uring most of the time subsequen'.

A sharp drop in Liverpool quotations appeared to be the chief dominating factor, and was attributed to cheap offerings of Argentine wheat and to the fact that Argentine wheat acreage was officially forecast at materially above recent estimates. In various quarters competition between Canada and Argentina was regarded as presenting, for at at least a time, an obstacle to higher prices.

Uncertainties of Situation.

Uncertainties of the industrial situation served also as a drag on all the grain markets, and so, too, did good rains over domestic winter wheat territory and the corn belt. However, widening of the difference between Chicago and Minneapolis prices, placing Minneapolis at about the greatest premium of the season, aided a reversal of bearish sentiment.

Attention was likewise arrested by an authoritative unofficial estimate that 10 per cent of the entire United States pasture area has been ruined beyond recovery for next year as a result of this year's drought. The pasture damage referred to was stated to be largely in Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado and part of Texas.

Corn sagged owing a good deal to 1,745,000 bushels enlargement of the corn visible supply. Oats price upturns were associated with Government buying for seed purposes.

Provisions developed firmness on account of excellent cash demand for lard and as the result of a more favorable outlook for exports.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

Improvement in the British pound in European markets on Monday was extended in the New York trading yesterday. At the same time, $5,000,000 of gold was engaged for shipment to Paris from New York as the dollar remained weak in terms of gold currencies.

The pound closed at $5.02 in New York, a net gain upon Saturday of 3½ cents. The dollar ended the London trading at 5.01¼ to the pound, compared with 5.00⅜ on Monday.

The British currency also advanced against French francs, rising to 74.95 francs to the pound from 74.68.

The price of gold in London dipped 8½ pence to 140 shillings 10½ pence a fine ounce (equivalent to $35.26), touching a new peak on Monday at 141 shillings 7 pence.

French francs held above the outgoing gold point from New York, remaining at about 6.69½ cents. As a result, about $5,000,000 of gold was shipped to Paris on the S. S. Statendam yesterday. Other gold currencies were firm, except Swiss francs, which lost a fraction.

Canadian dollars followed the pound to better levels, rising ⅝ of a cent to 2 13-16 cents premium over par.

At the closing New York price for French francs, the dollar was valued at a discount of .92 of a cent under par, the same as on Saturday, and compared with a premium of .32 of a cent over par a month ago.

Baltimore Grain Prices.

Baltimore, Sept. 4.—WHEAT—Receipts, 23,273 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 2,341 bushels. Stocks in elevators, 2,340,183 bushels. Opening prices were: No. 2 red winter, garlicky, spot, domestic, 96½; August delivery, domestic, 96½.

OATS—Shipments from elevators, 247 bushels; stock in elevators, 18,364 bushels. No. 2 white oats, 62@65 per bushel, as to weight and location. Note—On all sales of oats to the local trade, excepting those on track, there is an additional charge of 1½ cents per bushel for storage and elevation, which is paid by the buyer.

RYE—Receipts, 5,786 bushels, including 4,677 bushels afloat and 1,109 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 9,549 bushels; stock in elevators, 174,845 bushels.

HAY—General hay market firmer; supply ample. On good timothy and clover mixed, prices range from 12.00 to 16.00 per ton. The poorer grades of hay are hard to sell at any price. Market irregular on everything below 3 timothy.

STRAW—Market steady. Wheat straw, No. 1, per ton, 8.00; oat straw, 8.00.

MILL FEED—Receipts, 50 tons. Market steady on spot bran and middling. Spring bran, per ton, 100-pound sacks, 32.00; standard middling, per ton, 100-pound sacks, 34.00.

BARLEY—Stock in elevators, 2,987 bushels.

1934 Building In South Rises 92 Per Cent

Dixie Engineering Activities Gain Momentum in 16 States.

Baltimore, Sept. 5 (AP).—Construction, building and engineering activities in 16 Southern States continued to climb during August, and for the first eight months of this year had increased 92 per cent over the same period of 1933.

The Manufacturers Record reported that construction awards of $43,-157,000 during August represented an increase of 5 per cent over the month of July and 13 per cent over August, 1932.

The total expenditure of $346,-187,000 on construction work during the first eight months of the year was nearly twice as much as the $180,887,000 expended during the same period of 1933. The 1934 totals were 36 per cent greater than in the same period of 1932, when construction contracts totaling $254,-845,000 were awarded.

Roads Lead Way.

Roads, streets and bridge projects led the way during the entire eight months, the Record reported. Awards of $12,483,000 in August brought to $137,827,000 the total for this classification during this year. The report also said indications are that contract letting for such projects will be heavy during the next few months because of favorable weather conditions during the winter months.

"On the whole there are evidences of building and construction activity in volume," the Manufacturers Record said, "but account must be taken of the fact that Federal projects and Federally-financed projects dominate.

"For months now funds have been expended with almost reckless abandon in an effort to prime the pump and start the flow of private funds into building, construction and industrial projects. But a survey of the situation reveals that more than any one thing essential to a return to normalcy in the construction industry is a restoration of confidence."

Genral building awards during August amountd to $2,962,000, bringing the amount so far this year to $22,229,000. Contracts for store buildings totaled $618,000 during the past month. Private owners and chain stores were reported as opening new stores and improving existing locations.

A sharp decline in public building work during recent months was noted by the Record, which said Federal contracts are being let "very slowly, because of delays incident to the 'red tape' involved in getting a project to the 'approved' stage and particularly in having the necessary money actually made available for use."

There was a pick-up in public building last month, however, with school building awards amounting to $3,662,000. City, county, State and Federal projects during August totalled $4,579,000, bringing the total amount spent on public building to $8,241,000 for the month.

Proposed public buildings announced during the month, mostly in small projects, call for the outlay of $15,074,000. The record said indications were that the Federal Government's purpose was "to spread the available funds over many projects in as many different communities as practicable rather than to undertake a few notable projects."

A total of $19,471,000 was expended during August for industrial and engineering projects, bringing the yearly total to $115,-281,000, second only to road projects. Purely industrial construction declined to $3,429,000 in August from $11,698,000 the month before. Levee, dike, revetment and seawall construction in August amounted to $11,886,000. Dredging of rivers, harbors and inland waterways totalled $1,751,000.

Sewer, drainage and waterworks projects called for the outlay of $1,-935,000. Filling station awards amounted to $476,000.

AN EMPLOYMENT CONSULTANT
Will be glad to talk with a few men about a new, permanent business opening for several men in and around Washington.
If you are out of a job and looking for a good steady position where the income is sure for you and your family a good living and enable you to lay up some savings for a rainy day, you are the man we would like to talk to.
Earnings from start should be from $35 to $75 per week. Grow rapidly from that point. PROMOTIONS AS EARNED.
Our company employs men (white) from all walks of life—CARPENTERS, BRICKLAYERS, ELECTRICIANS, life insurance, paper, milk, and laundry route men, lawyers, doctors, merchants. All that we require is a fair education, a good appearance, a strong body and ambition and a will to work hard. The method is new that you can do this work, and the company's manner of helping you get started makes it easy for the average man to make good. MEN WHO ARE NOW EMPLOYED NEED NOT APPLY, for at this time we are only interested in men who are READY TO GO TO WORK AT ONCE.
Men who have had SPECIALTY SELLING TRAINING AND EXPERIENCE are NOT FITTED for this employment and need not apply. This consultant will be in Washington Thursday morning, September 6, only. He will see men who can qualify promptly at 8:45 o'clock. Come prepared to spend at least two hours looking into every phase of this business. Doors will be closed at 9:30, as there must be no interruptions after the conference starts. Address of conferences—Green Room, Colonial Hotel, 1156 15th st. nw.
Remember, this invitation is only for men who are AVAILABLE FOR IMMEDIATE EMPLOYMENT. Must also be able to give good references.

WHY SHOP ENDLESSLY FOR A USED upright or grand piano when right under one roof you may see, test and compare prices of good used pianos in great variety. You'll see, too, the wisdom of buying instruments thoroughly regulated or rebuilt by Kimball factory experts, including guaranteed service without additional cost following purchase. These Kimball advantages are seldom realized in dealings elsewhere, while the additional expense contingent in purchasing pianos at auction or private sale reacts severely upon the price of so-called bargains.
Visit KIMBALL'S before you buy; not afterwards. 721 Eleventh st. nw., 3 doors north of Palais Royal.

Walt Mason, Himself

Let Us Have Peace.

In those dark lands across the seas where captains wave their snickersnees, and colonels load their sawed-off guns, and call for bullets, tons on tons, and where the clouds of war increase, the cry is still for balmy peace. "Let us have peace," the ruler yells, whose generals are wearing bells, whose armies, trained for instant scraps, for altering all Europe's maps; "let us have peace, this talk of war is something all good men abhor. 'Tis true my armies, rows on rows, are always standing on their toes, all primed to use the sword and gat, if anyone should drop a hat, but this is just our guarantee of lasting peace, as you must see." They're talking peace all round the world, the battleflags will all be furled, they will disarm embattled hordes, and plowshares will be made of swords, and all the soldiers and marines will get new jobs at hoeing beans, and generals will shed their brass, and go to peddling garden sass, and captains clamoring for gore will learn to paint a cellar door. Meanwhile the omens and the signs would indicate fresh battle lines; still insurrections go their way, and there are riots every day, and on each shoulder there's a chip, and there's a gat on every hip. "Let us have peace," the slogan goes while gentle rulers swap their blows, and captains grind their butcher knives, and lust for other captains' lives.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Ladies'Day By Harry J. Tuthill

NO, JOSIE HONEY, I'M NOT EXACTLY TERRIBLY DISAPPOINTED OVER IKE GETTING ONLY $800 FOR THAT LAND, BUT AS YOU KNOW, THERE WAS SO MUCH TALK ABOUT MILLIONS. $500,000 AND SO FORTH.
BUT SUGAR, THIS IS REAL MONEY. LOOK. $800!
WELL TESSIE DARLING, I KNEW THIS WOULD HAPPEN.
LISTEN BABE, DO YOU MEAN YOU'RE NOT TICKLED COMPLETELY SILLY OVER OLD GEORGE TALKING $800 IN REAL MONEY OUT OF THAT TOUGH WALL ST. BABY?
IKE DEAR, DON'T SCREAM LIKE THAT RIGHT IN MY FACE.
$800! AT LAST, BABE, WE GOT A BREAK! WE'RE ON OUR FEET AGAIN... AND WE OWE IT ALL TO OUR PAL HERE... GOOD OLD GEORGE. DON'T WE?
ANYHOW, WE KNOW NOW THAT THE TELEGRAM WAS NOT, AS YOU SUPPOSED, JOSIE HONEY, A FAKE.
OH SWEETHEART I DIDN'T EXACTLY SAY IT WAS A FAKE.
$800! ... A CROWD OF REAL MONEY. OH GEORGE, OLD MAN, BABE AND ME WILL NEVER FORGET WHO MADE US WHAT WE ARE RIGHT NOW, WILL WE BABE?
IKE DEAR, AGAIN I ASK YOU TO LOWER YOUR BULL-LIKE VOICE.
WELL...
OH GEORGE, PLEASE DON'T PRETEND YOU'RE SURPRISED AT THE WAY THINGS TURNED OUT. YOU WERE WARNED.

DIXIE DUGAN Write as You Love By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

EDGIE—THAT HEROINE OF YOUR NOVEL—"DUXIE" YOU EVEN CALL HER—WHY DID YOU MAKE HER SO MUCH LIKE ME? DID YOU REALLY MEAN TO?
I DON'T KNOW, HONESTLY..... I GUESS IT JUST HAPPENED
I WANTED TO SHOW TWO KINDS OF GIRLS:—THE VILLAINNESS, YVONNE, THE SCIENTIST'S DAUGHTER—THE COLD BLOODED MENTAL TYPE WHOSE ONLY INTEREST IN MEN IS TO USE THEM, TOY WITH THEM, STUDY THEM, TAKE THEM APART TO SEE WHAT MAKES THEM TICK..... YOU KNOW—SOME WOMEN ARE LIKE THAT——AND THEN—CONTRASTED TO HER—I WANTED TO SHOW A NATURAL, NORMAL GIRL—AS SWEET AND WHOLESOME AS POSSIBLE....AND SO, UNCONSCIOUSLY, I FOUND MYSELF MAKING HER LIKE YOU—BECAUSE I GUESS I WAS WRITING WITH MY HEART
MY! MY!—EXCUSE ME FOR OVERHEARING—BUT IF YOU WROTE AS WELL AS YOU TALKED, EDGERTON, I WOULDN'T HAVE TO DOCTOR UP THOSE LOVE PASSAGES IN YOUR BOOK

500,000 Cheer Hitler as Nazi Session Opens

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 4 (AP).—Amid the tolling of ancient bells and the chorusing of many voices hailing him as the "Savior of Germany," Adolf Hitler made his entry into old Nurnberg's historic Rathaus tonight.

National Socialists' sixth party convention, its second since it came to power, was officially under way.

The bells atop venerable St. Sebaldus, St. Lorenz and other churches rang out for half an hour as Hitler made his way through densely thronged streets toward the fourteenth century festival hall.

Thousands of candles shed their subdued light over the high Nazi leaders, the members of Hitler's cabinet and state officials, all attired in full dress clothes or dress uniforms with decorations, as Hitler entered the city hall.

Burgomaster Liebel welcomed him to Nurnberg.

"The conception of the physical unity and the purity of the race has for more than 3,000 years constituted the dogma of Jewry," he said. "The adoption of this doctrine by the Reich, therefore, is by no means something new and unusual, but merely belated recognition of the universally accepted physiological facts."

Boy Confesses Sisters' Attack

But Says He Did Not Put Little Girls in Icebox Where They Died.

Sacramento, Calif., Sept. 4 (AP).—District Attorney Neil McAllister, said today he will ask a mental examination of Cerivino Paiva, 15, who, authorities said, confesesd to have criminally attacked his two little sisters several hours before their bodies were found in an icebox Saturday.

Authorities said they believed the statement of the youth that he did not place his sisters in the icebox. They expressed belief that Mary, 6, and Maryann, 7, playfully hid in the box and the door was closed by Alfred, a 2-year-old brother.

The girls were found dead in the family's newly purchased icebox when the father, mother and eight other children returned home at night from picking hops.

The physician who was called to the Paiva home said the girls had died of suffocation. An autopsy by Dr. C. H. McDonnell, county physician, disclosed both girls had been attacked.

'Marrying Parson' Fights to Validate 320 Nuptial Knots

Crown Point, Ind., Sept. 4 (AP).—The Rev. H. Oscar Stevens, Crown Point's "marrying parson," went to court today to determine whether in the eyes of the law the 320 marriages he performed during the last year were bona fide.

Specifically, Stevens sought in his petition filed with Judge C. V. Ridgely, of the Lake County Superior Court, to compel George W. Sweigart, county clerk, to record marriages performed by Stevens. Since August 20, alleged Stevens, the clerk has refused to file the certificates.

Stevens also filed an affidavit signed by the clerk of Black Hills, S. Dak., presbytery attesting that Stevens is an ordained minister.

County Clerk Sweigart and County Attorney George Hershman have held the "marrying parson" isn't a parson at all, as far as Crown Point is concerned.

Stevens charges Sweigart said he was going to drive Stevens out of the marrying business because he was cutting in on the marriages performed by Justice of the Peace Howard Kemp.
